Publication Types and Copyright Issues

- Preprint – is the version of a scholarly or scientific paper that precedes peer review.
- Accepted manuscript – is the version that has been peer reviewed and accepted for publication but does not include journal information or pagination.
- Publishers version – is the version that will appear on the publishers website and is typically not permitted for use on an institutional repository.
- Embargo – is a time frame the publisher assigns to only give access to paid subscribers.
- SHERPA/RoMEO is my go to site for initial publisher copyright policy.

Selected Works

Once you deposit work into Tiger Prints, a Selected Works site will be created for you.

This allows for easy access to your work with one location.

This site also includes an Author Dashboard where you can view up-to-date information about your work.

- Readership – where and how users are accessing material
- Usage Reports – downloads and page hits
- Readership Distribution Map

PlumX Metrics

Metrics are divided into 5 categories:

Citations - citation indexes, patent citations, clinical citations, policy citations

Usage – clicks, downloads, views

Captures – bookmarks, favorites, readers

Mentions – blog posts, comments, reviews, news media

Social Media – shares, likes, comments, tweets
