Historical Statement

Clemson University is named for Thomas Green Clemson (1807-1888), who left the bulk of his estate to the State of South Carolina for the founding of the institution.

Thomas Clemson was born in Philadelphia in 1807 and educated at the Royal School of Mines in Paris (1828-1832). His early profession was that of a mining engineer; but circumstances diverted his interests into politics and the life of a Southern Planter, and he soon became an enthusiastic advocate of scientific agriculture. He had a career as a diplomat (charge d'affaires to Belgium, 1844-1852), and served as the first superintendent of agricultural affairs in Washington (1860). As a scientist he published numerous articles in the fields of mining, chemistry, and agriculture. His varied activities included his assistance in the founding of the Maryland Agricultural College, his support of the Morrill Act, his leadership in South Carolina after the Civil War, and his part in the founding of Clemson University.

Thomas Clemson was the son-in-law of South Carolina's John C. Calhoun, a political figure of national importance during the first half of the nineteenth century. Mr. Calhoun's home, Fort Hill, is preserved on the Clemson campus as a national shrine.

The academic program at Clemson College began in 1893 with an enrollment of 446. The first "college prospectus" announced only two four-year curricula, supplemented by two two-year preparatory courses. Today Clemson University's enrollment is 5,800 and the current catalog lists thirty-eight undergraduate and fifty-six graduate curricula.

The University has seven major academic units. These are the College of Agriculture and Biological Sciences; the School of Architecture; the College of Arts and Sciences; the School of Education; the College of Engineering; the School of Industrial Management and Textile Science; and the School of Graduate Study.

The institution became an accredited member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools in 1927. The civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering curricula were accredited by the Engineers' Council for Professional Development in 1937. Curricula in agricultural, ceramic, and chemical engineering were accredited by ECPD in 1953, 1955, and 1959, respectively.

The chemistry curriculum was first accredited by the American Chemical Society in 1953 and the architectural curriculum by the National Architectural Accrediting Board in 1956. The forestry curriculum was accredited by the Society of American Foresters in 1962.

Clemson is the Land-Grant University of South Carolina. As such the institution is engaged not only in its primary academic program, but does extensive research at the main campus and at six agricultural experiment stations located in the state. The University is also heavily committed to a varied program of public service, including the work of agricultural extension which has professional personnel located in each of the state's counties.

CHARLES FREDERICK ANDRUS

CHARLES FREDERICK ANDRUS is Research Horticulturist in charge of the United States Vegetable Breeding Laboratory, United States Department of Agriculture, at Charleston, South Carolina. For thirty years he has been actively engaged in the development of disease-resistant vegetables, particularly adapted to South Carolina and the southeast portion of the United States. He is a native of Illinois and did his undergraduate work at Illinois State Normal University. He received his Master's degree from George Washington University and has done further graduate work at the University of Maryland. His research in the fields of plant pathology and horticulture has resulted in substantial contributions in the improvement of fruits and vegetables. He is a member of numerous professional and civic organizations concerned with the advancement of agriculture.

ROBERT THOMAS COLEMAN, JUNIOR

ROBERT THOMAS COLEMAN, JUNIOR, was born in Texas and has devoted most of his adult career to the field of education. After graduating from the University of Texas, he attended Harvard University where he received his Master's degree. He came to Converse College, Spartanburg, South Carolina, in 1959, where he is now serving as its president. During his tenure the institution which he heads has had a remarkable growth, not only in physical and financial resources, but also in strengthening the academic excellence of the institution. He has been active in civic and educational organizations in the State. He is presently serving as an officer of the South Carolina Foundation of Independent Colleges.

JAMES GILLIAM GEE

JAMES GILLIAM GEE is a native of South Carolina. He graduated from Clemson University in 1917, having been an outstanding scholar and athlete. He did graduate work at Cornell and Harvard Universities, and received his doctoral degree from George Peabody College. Except for a period of six years in military service during World War II, he has devoted his career to the field of education. He served as President of East Texas State University for nineteen years, retiring in 1966. He is now President Emeritus of that institution. During his period of presidency East Texas State University experienced an exceptional growth and development, much of which is credited to the foresight and leadership of Doctor Gee. He has been active in numerous professional educational organizations, having served as Chairman of the Council of Texas State College and University Presidents and Chairman of the Kiwanis International Committee on Vocational Guidance.

CLEMSON ALMA MATER

Where the Blue Ridge yawns its greatness
Where the Tigers play;
Here the sons of dear old Clemson
Reign supreme always.

Chorus

Dear old Clemson, we will triumph
And with all our might
That the Tiger's roar may echo
O'er the mountain height.
