Governor J. Strom Thurmond said today he had received a letter from a young English girl requesting his help in securing a position as a children's governess in South Carolina.

The English girl, Miss Margaret Sears, of Cedar-Keys, Epsom Road, Ewell, Surrey, England, wrote as follows:

"The Governor
Columbia, South Carolina

Dear Sir:

Please could you help me? I am a young, very well educated English woman who would very much like to come to your State in the capacity of a children's governess. I have always had much to do with children, and possess good qualifications suitable for teaching. At present I am studying a course in teaching at College, where we regard the child from a psychological point of view.

If you could help me in any way, I really should be most grateful. Please appreciate the fact that you were the only person I could think of for writing to, otherwise you would not have been put to such bother.

Thank you very much.

Yours truly,
Margaret Sears."
