Lawrence Nichols suggested that she contact Charles Tegan for information. Policy and Welfare will also look at the rates and report at a later date.

3. Announcements from the President
   A. Academic Council, Dave Crockett. Has not met.
   B. Administrative Council, Lawrence Nichols. Has not met.
   C. Board of Trustees, Dave Crockett. The Board meets in July.
   D. Governmental Affairs, Dave Crockett. Governor Sanford initially vetoed a total 69 items in the Appropriation bill and the Capital Reserve Fund bill. He vetoed several items that impact Clemson:
      • Funding for security of the Hunley at the Clemson Restoration Institute in Charleston.
      • Funding for a wind study to be conducted by Clemson.
      • Funding for the Greenwood Genetics Center facility in which Clemson has a collaborative research agreement.
      • Funding for the SC Light Rail for Clemson, USC, and MUSC in the Appropriation Bill and in the Capital Reserve Fund bill.
      • Funding for Clemson PSA in nonrecurring operating expenses.
      • Funding for hydrogen research grants in the Capital Reserve Fund bill.

   The House subsequently overrode the vetoes in the Capital Reserve Fund bill which included part of the funding for the SC Light Rail and Hydrogen Grants, but sustained three vetoes in the Appropriations Bill. Overall, of the 69 vetoes, the legislature last week only sustained five that had implications for the state's general fund, for a total of $369,000.

One percent cost-of-living pay raises for state employees emerged the budget process unscathed.

The General Assembly then adjourned last Thursday with Governor Sanford suggesting the Legislature could be sued for passing an unbalanced budget and could be called back into session to fix it. Sanford said his attorneys told him the governor could not personally bring the suit. Sanford said if he called lawmakers back, it would not be before Tuesday’s primary elections. Lawmakers disagreed with Sanford on their handling of the budget, noting they have not spent more than allotted by state economists and have given agencies flexibility to balance their budgets using federal, state or any other funds on hand.

For their part, Lawmakers returned home claiming one major victory — tough new illegal immigration laws — but failing to find enough support to raise the cigarette tax, abolish parole, and adopt a number of other proposals. While lawmakers worked through a flurry of legislation Thursday, they will return later this month for three days to deal with other vetoes and a handful of outstanding bills.
