This past summer of 2013 has been a quiet one for serialists making moves, but quiet is not silence, and:

Anna Creech is now the Head of Resource Acquisitions at the University of Richmond.

Eugenia Beh will soon become – perhaps will have become by the time this column is published – the Electronic Resources Librarian at the MIT Libraries.

And, Kathy Kobyljanec has retired. As she writes:

After six shoulder surgeries, most recently a reverse total shoulder replacement where the natural ball/socket configuration of the joint is reversed, I give up! I am retiring from my position as Head of Access Services and Interlibrary Loan, and Periodicals Librarian at John Carroll University this summer. We are building a vacation home in the mountains of Western North Carolina, and will do nothing with journals but read them in a rocking chair on the porch.

Congrats to one and all!
