Trustee Wilkerson called on Bob Jones to present the Committee’s action items as a composite motion.

Action Items:

Program Modification: Add new 100% online distance education delivery site for PhD in Recreational Therapy – Provost Jones presented the proposed program modification. The purpose of the modification is to provide an alternate delivery of the PhD in Recreational Therapy. This is one of the leading PhDs in the country in this curricular area and providing the degree online will allow us to address the dearth of faculty in recreational therapy and offer rigorous, comprehensive doctoral training in an online format. This modification is central and supportive of the University’s larger interest in offering more online and graduate programs.

Change the Names of the Communication Studies Department and Communications Studies BA Program to the Communication Department and Communication BA – Provost Jones presented the proposed name changes. The proposed name changes are consistent with national disciplinary trends in the communication field. Departments of Communication Studies are typically housed within arts and humanities focused academic colleges, while Departments of Communication are commonly associated with academic colleges that possess a behavioral and social science focus. In concert with Clemson’s approved academic reorganization, the Department of Communication Studies proposes a name change consistent with its move to the new College of Behavioral, Social, and Health Sciences. The department’s faculty unanimously support the proposed name changes.

Change the Name of the Nutrition and Dietetics Concentration within the Food Science BS Program to the Nutrition Concentration – Provost Jones presented the proposed name change. As a result of the nutrition field expanding over the past several decades, the current concentration name does not fully reflect the diversity of careers within this discipline. Currently the concentration name Nutrition and Dietetics gives the impression the curriculum is limited to the dietetics career choice. The concentration name of Nutrition will better encompass the different career opportunities within the nutrition field and the options available in the curriculum. As the degree name has changed to Food Science and Human Nutrition, the names for both concentrations will be enhanced in their alignment with the proposed name change – Food Science and Technology; and Nutrition.

Center closing: Economic Research on the Family – Provost Jones presented the proposal to close the center. The Center of Economic Research on the Family is not associated with any degree program or concentration, and plans for building the Center did not come to fruition for a variety of reasons, most importantly changes in faculty personnel and the concomitant changes in faculty interest that accompanied them.

Materials Science and Engineering PhD and MS Concentration Closures – Provost Jones presented the request to close three concentrations in the MS and PhD degrees in Materials Science and Engineering – Metals and Ceramics, Polymers, Polymer and Fiber Science. In April 2015, the faculty of Materials Science and Engineering approved the removal of three concentrations from the MS and PhD degrees. This change was driven by many factors including changes in the needs of students and employers, changes in the research and development foci within the field, and changes in funding priorities. The faculty believes that removal of these concentrations is more in tune with the contemporary educational and research focus of the Department and the field. Further, the broader degree has the flexibility for conforming to future developments in the field.

Trustee Wilkerson moved to approve the proposed action items. The motion was approved unanimously.
