Orangeburg---"Only an aroused public opinion can curb the four big threats to the internal security of the United States", Senator Strom Thurmond said here tonight in climaxing his talk to the Orangeburg County Farm Bureau.

Listing the threats as Communist subversion, judicial tyranny, big government and misuse of power by big union bosses, Senator Thurmond placed the responsibility for corrective measures squarely on the shoulders of the nation's voters.

He said that Congress has the power to act to correct the abuses now going on, but that Congress may fail to do so unless an aroused public opinion demands that it act. "The roots of these threats are deep", he said, "and the Communist party, the judiciary, many government bureaucrats, and the big union bosses have literally become untouchables."

"Who but Congress can pass laws clearly making it illegal for the Communist agents to operate openly in the United States by hiding behind legal technicalities?" "Who but Congress can stand up to the nine Supreme Court justices as they ignore the concepts of the Constitution as we knew them from the founding of this great nation until four years ago?"

"Who but Congress, with its control of federal appropriations, can curb big government and its countless bureaucrats?"

"And who but Congress can place big union bosses under the same laws as big industrialists and businessmen?"

In conclusion, Senator Thurmond said, "The untouchables will continue to run roughshod over the people of the United States until Congress acts. But Congress is not likely to act until an aroused public makes the first move."
