HOW AN ALL CLEMSON TEAM WOULD LOOK

Professor Gantt Picks Eleven Composed of Tigers' Most Famous Football Athletes.

The following all-time all-Clemson team was picked by Prof. "Johnny" Gantt, after consulting with Dr. Riggs,

Prof. Henry and others, who have seen nearly all the Clemson men in the most important games:

Keesler, center, of Anderson, played in 1905. Weight 190 pounds.

Derrick, guard, of Lexington, played in 1903-4-5-6. Weight 195 pounds.

McLauren, tackle, of Kershaw, played in 1904-5-6-7. Weight 190 pounds.

Walker, tackle, of Allendale, played in 1898-99-00. Weight 200 pounds.

Sitton, end, of Pendleton, played in 1902-03. Weight

160 pounds.

Sadler, end, of Rock Hill, played in 1901-2-3. Weight 155 pounds.

Maxwell, quarter, of Anderson, played in 1902-03. Weight 148 pounds.

Furtick, back, of Lexington, played in 1903-4-5-6. Weight 170 pounds.

Hunter, back, of Pendleton, played in 1889-00-01. Weight 165 pounds.

Douthit, back, of Pendleton, played in 1889-00-01. Weight 160 pounds.

Average weights, 175 pounds.

Substitutes: Garrison, center; Gaston, guard; Lykes, end; McFadden, quarter; Webb, half; Hanvey, full.

Keesler, center, though only playing one year, is without a peer among Clemson centers, and would strengthen any team of his time. In all probability he is the most powerful man that ever wore a Clemson uniform, and certainly a harder tackler has never been developed here. His passing was especially good. His strength and fearlessness coupled with the ability to diagnose offensive formation, puts him in a class with the best in the country. Weight 190 pounds, height 6 feet.

Hunter, half back, with splendid endurance, fast and rangy, would certainly make a good running mate for Furtick. His broken field running was extremely clever, likewise his interfering and defensive work was good. As a line plunger and defensive half-back he was not so good as McFadden, nor as a broken field runner was he any better than Webb; however, when his general ability in all departments of the game is considered, he would certainly be the choice for this position. Weight 165 pounds, height 5 feet 11 inches.

Douthit, full-back, captain of the 1901 team, was a powerful and rangy player, consistently good in all departments of the game. While his offensive was not in the class of C. Hanvey, who is without a doubt the greatest line plunger from this position that Clemson has ever produced, his defence is much stronger, and his full knowledge of the game and ability as a leader would make him the logical choice for captain. Weight 185 pounds, height 6 feet 1 inch.

Sitton, as an offensive end, was one of the best that the South has ever produced. His broken field running was brilliant, and during his two years of football, he probably had more long runs to his credit than any player of his time. There were two games in which he played that he did not get loose for long runs. Weight 165 pounds, height 5 feet 9½ inches.

Maxwell, quarter-back, light, but with his wonderful speed and versatility, is in a class to himself. His punting was as good as the South has ever seen, averaging 45 yards for the two years he played. In his two years at quarter-back he had but one fumble and his broken field running was brilliant. "Doc" McFadden was his nearest rival at running back punts, and the ability of both to take the ball on the run is responsible for getting away from the defensive ends for long gains. Maxwell is the only man who has come under my observation, who could boot the ball with so much precision on the run from an end running forma-

BASKET BALL PRACTICE HAS BEGUN

Basket ball began this week and much interest is being taken in it as evinced by a large number of men trying out for Varsity. With practically all of last year's Championship squad back again, prospects are bright for again sweeping the State. Several squads of new men, though new at the game, are entering into the work with a zeal that is bound to bring results. The Varsity squad is rapidly rounding into the form that it showed last year. The practice before Christmas will be only a warming up, but practice will be taken up in dead earnest at the beginning of the new year.

Manager Kangeter is making arrangements for meeting the different colleges in the State as well as several teams from other states. He has planned to have a number of games on campus, which will give the corps an opportunity to show that old time Tiger spirit.

Gone are the good times, for the season. Examinations have chased them away.

* * * *

Let's see, its just, how many days until Christmas? Any "prep" could tell you that.

* * * *

Football is over, and our record is not glorious. We have been "stung" by the "Yellow Jackets," and "crowed over" by the "Gamecocks;" but our team has fought bravely through it all. They suffered defeat, but not disgrace.

* * * *

The "Gamecock" asks, "I wonder how the "Tiger" and "Bulldog" are getting along down in the craw of the rooster?"

Evidently a taste of good meat tickles the rooster's craw, from the croaks of joy in that direction.

* * * *

The "Carolina Gamecock" says: "Tigers and Bulldogs, they look digestible to the Gamecocks."

We are glad that the Gamecocks have so far recovered that they can now take on solid food. For several years, they have suffered from frost-bitten feet; and as a result, were hardly able to scratch on the score card. If they digest that food and do not crow themselves lean, they will make a good meal for either a Tiger, or a Bulldog, next year.

A new man coming to Clemson is at once impressed with the tie of comradeship that exists among the boys.

When his first fright wears off and he becomes drawn into the friendly circle, he is touched with a thrill of pleasure inexpressible. To know that he is one of the boys; to know that there are seven hundred fellows ready to show their loyalty at any time; to know that he is a member of the big family of Clemson men, is indeed worth much. Later, he has an opportunity of testing the loyalty of these friends, time and time again; and always, he finds them staunch and true. Their last nickle is his for the asking; in trouble, they are always ready to help; like "brothers tried," they stand by him. When his four years draw to a close and the time of separation is near, the love for these friends swells boundlessly; and looking back over his four years of college life to choose the thing he values most, the thing that has given him most pleasure, the priceless thing, he invariably says the friendships are worth more than them all.

It is indeed a glorious thing to see,—this great body of men, comrades all. It is pleasant to be numbered among them. There is nothing better.

However, there is danger of carrying the feeling too far. There are erring ones in the crowd, and those that are careless but friends for all of that. They plunge into trouble and their comrades shield them; they recklessly plunge again and again, knowing that they will escape unpunished. Finally, they commit some act that reflects discredit on the whole corps; and still they go unpunished.

When this limit is reached, it is time for a reckoning. The meaning of the word comrade, has been abused. An injustice has been done to one and all. Let not the many suffer for the sins of the few.

Y. M. C. A.

Spirit; Mind; Body.

The big campaign is now over. The next thing is the banquet to be given to the winning team. Through the efforts of the two teams, lead by Kangeter and Turbeville, a great many men joined the Y. M. C. A. Kangeter's team won by a large score.

The next thing is more men in Bible study. We can boast now of the large number of men in Bible study; but we want more.

There is also a lack of leaders. Won't you take a class? Three courses are studied; viz., "The Life of Christ," "The Life of Paul," and "The Earlier Prophets."

If you have not joined one of these classes, do so at once. Join one on your hall.

A few things that Bible study does: (1.) It develops spiritual knowledge; (2.) It helps college men to meet college temptations; (3.) It brings men into a close relationship with Christ; (4.) It sets standards; (5.) It is a cure for uncertainty; (6.) It prepares a man for his place in life.

"Bible study for every man; every man for Bible study."

STUDENTS CHAPTER OF AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS ORGANIZED AT CLEMSON

The juniors and seniors who are pursuing the course in Electrical Engineering at Clemson College met on Wednesday morning for the purpose of launching a Student Chapter of The American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Dr. Riggs, who was an "associate member" of this organization for several years and a "member" since 1906, has been in correspondence with the head office in New York for some time, and has the branch directly under his supervision.

Dr. Riggs was present at the meeting and outlined briefly the advantages of being associated with an organization of such worldwide reputation. He spoke of the benefit to students of being in constant touch with the proceedings of this institute which is the chief organ or main-spring of the Electrical profession; of the great good of a Student Chapter at Clemson as a boom to our work both professionally and socially; of the recognition by the A. I. E. E. of a Student Chapter at Clemson as a practical compliment to the course that the College offers in Electrical Engineering and of the consequent value to the Alumni.

Dr. Riggs read a copy of the by-laws that he had drafted for temporary use in getting the Chapter into harness, and suggested that these by-laws be completed later. The Chapter is to be known as the Clemson Agricultural Branch of The American Institute of Electrical Engineers. The by-laws were accepted, after which the meeting was turned into a business session for the election of officers and committees. The following officers were elected: Chairman, J. H. Kangeter; Local Secretary, H. J. Bomar; Treasurer, E. T. Provost; Executive Committee, Dr. Riggs, Prof. F. T. Dargan, H. S. McGee, D. M. Sloan, J. H. Kangeter, Chairman. Publication Committee: Prof. W. C. Wagner, Chairman, H. J. Bomar, M. S. Lawton.

Rules for the administration of members were made which provided for the admission of seniors as Chapter members of the Student Branch, and juniors as Associate members of this branch.

The by-laws provided for a meeting the second Monday each month and such call meetings as the Executive Committee deems necessary.

The Executive Committee intends to secure men of national reputation in the Electrical profession to address the Branch; and, if possible, to obtain an occasional lecture from a man of world-wide reputation such as Dr. C. P. Stienmetz of the General Electric Company.

Reports of the meetings will be published in the monthly transactions of the Association, which go to all parts of the United States, and abroad.

DO IT NOW

Here's a model for us all,

BANQUET FOR THE KANGETERS

Nothing new can be said in connection with the big Campaign except that the Banquet will be held as soon as possible after the Kangeters return from the Christmas vacation. Some say that the Turbevilles are expected to serve the banquet—with all that includes—to the Kangeters; and since examinations are so near at hand the Turbevilles did not wish to have their chances for getting by on the exams handicapped by the thought that they, the vanquished, had been humbled by serving a banquet to the victors. Something like that, anyhow, is one reason the banquet was deferred. A more urgent reason, though, is the fact that Shorty found he could not procure a sufficient number of turkeys to give the Kangeters all they wanted. Turkeys, did you say? Right you are. Didn't you know this was to be a real live Banquet? And we couldn't have a Banquet, could we, on Vienna Sausage and Potatoes? So if there are any turkeys left in the mountains after the holidays, we are going to have enough imported to feed a few hundred strong, and are going to have them with the furnishings for the Banquet. The exact date will be announced later.

That's all on the subject of the Banquet for the present.

You might be interested enough to know the results of the Campaign. The actual results, we mean, not the 3505-820 score of the two teams. All told, there have been 438 applications for membership in the Y. M. C. A. Of this number, some 200 have paid the entire dues, while 50 others have paid a part of the dues. This is not a bad showing when we consider that last year there were 411 applications during the whole year; and there were 260 paid members at the close of last year. A large percent of men who make application for membership, pay their dues in January after their return from home, while a number postpone it until the latter part of the year, and secure the membership card at that time for use during the summer. So with the present paid membership of 200 the partially paid dues of 50 others, and the signed applications of nearly 200 more, there is every reason to expect that this will be a Banner year for the Clemson Association.

SOCIAL

Cadets S. W. Rabb, H. A. Hagood, W. G. McLeod, T. F. Davis, J. B. Douthit, and D. L. Cannon attended the annual meeting of the Student's Press Association of the South Carolina Colleges.

R. W. Fant and T. F. Davis have been attending the session of the executive committee of the S. C. I. O. A. which convened in Rock Hill recently.

Jerry Moore has returned from a trip to Chicago, where he went to tell the people in attendance at the National Corn Exposition how to grow corn.

LITERARY : : SOCIETIES

THE PALMETTO

The second quarter officers were installed last Friday night, and after the retiring president, Turbeville, turned the robe over to the new president, McLeod. The regular exercises were taken up. Before giving up the robe, however, the retiring president expressed his thanks for the support given him during the closing quarter and assured the society that the honor would long be remembered. On taking the robe president McLeod expressed his thanks for the honor and urged that each man strive to make this the greatest quarter.

Next came the debate: Query: Resolved: That facts contribute more to mental happiness than fiction. On the affirmative, Messrs. A. H. Ward, R. H. Reaves and H. D. Barker tried to convince the judges that facts contribute more, while Messrs. A. M. Crouch, M. W. Hunter and C. W. Ward succeeded in proving that fiction contributes more. The orators for the evening were absent. But the society listened to a fine declamation by Mr. S. M. Richards and an interesting essay by Mr. F. S. Johnson.

CALHOUN LITERARY SOCIETY

All the speakers except those on the regular debate were absent, and two of those representing the negative were also missing when the roll was called. However, Messrs. Lathrop, F. H. and Newton, J. L. consented to take the places of the absentees.

The query, Resolved: "That the term of enlistment in the U. S. Army should be lengthened", was ably supported on both sides, Messrs. Lathrop and Campbell doing especially well on the affirmative, and Messrs. Hopkins and Maginnis presenting many points for the negative. Both the house and the judges decided that the term should not be lengthened.

Mr. Dunlap, C. K., as first extemporaneous speaker, gave a good talk on the "Lesson from Epitaphs," and they were many and good ones, too. The second extemporaneous speaker, Mr. Myers, P. E., discussed an old theme but one which needed discussion as shown by the absentees on the program for the night, "The lack of interest in Society work." He gave the members much good advice.

You may tie a kink in the Tiger's tail;

You may even ride him on the rail;

But, you'd better bet, there'll be a whirl

Next time that Tiger's tail uncurls.

The associate editor recently purchased a new typewriter. Most of his spare time is spent in writing the following: "Now is the time for all good-men to come to the aid of the Tiger.

TO A "GAMECOCK"

(On his learning to crow, Oct. 31, 1912).

(With apologies to a "Mouse.")

BY A "TIGER"

Poor, little, strutting, crowing chicksie,
 What a proud feeling in thy breastie;
 Thou need na get so gay so hastie,
 Wi' crowings high.
 Your foolish boasting, little chicksie,
 Makes me sigh.

You're truly glad that my dominion
 Has lapsed for once in thy opinion,
 And justified's that proud elation;
 Thou mayest dance,
 When thou, little chicksie, beatheth Clemson
 Once by chance.

I doubt not, whyles, but thou may win,
 What then? Poor chicksie, be not vain;
 A score or two in many a game,
 Is a sma request.
 I'll give my blessing with the same,
 Then, take all the rest.

That we bit margin in the score,
 Thou hast shouted gladly, o'er and o'er;
 And will again a hundred more,
 Before the year is out;
 Then, think you'll do it as before
 Wi' out the least o' doubt.

But chicksie, thou art no thy lane
 In proving foresights may be vain!
 The best laid plans of chicks and men,
 Gang oft a-gley,
 And lea'e us nought but grief and pain
 For promised joy.

Still thou art blessed, thou can't not see,
 The present only toucheth thee;
 But och! I backward cast my e'e
 On other score;
 An' forward, tho' I canna see,
 I guess come no more.

Smile, und the world shmiles mit you;
 Laugh, und the world vill roar;
 Howl, und the world vill leaf you
 Undt nefer come back any more;
 For all of us couldn't peen handsome,
 Nor all of us veer goot clothes;
 But a shmile vas not exbensive.
 Undt covers a world of woes.

This is the best day the world has ever seen. To-
