Basket Ball Team of 1912
TO THE FLIRT.
Thou art fickle! Like the rainbow
That decks the evening’s eastern sky
A little while with lovely glow
Thou com’st lightly, and seeming shy
Mak’st man in adoration fall
Before thy lambent light and love—
He worships thee, and fain his all
Would give to know thou too wert moved.

Thy fair deceit mark’st well the way
That he must tread to win thy heart;
With lavished care and costly sway
He lives for thee, and not apart.
Rich musings fill his wearied form,
Each breeze conveys some wafted song;
Like rapture, ere the coming storm,
His passion swells and doubly strong.

At last, pretense—a feigned wrong—
Thou mak’st an arrow for thy love,
And lo! he falls, with all his song
Thrown down, like as the wounded dove.
O, fickle flirt, why joy in this,
The barren triumph of a day!
There’s naught for breach of promise tryst,
There’s naught for thee—Away, away!

W. J. Hunter, ’15.

The phone-bell rang and there was no one else to answer, so I jumped out of the tub, ran across the hall, and lifted the receiver in time to hear a voice say, “I’m sorry I rang you by mistake.”

“You didn’t ring me,” I replied, “I’m still dripping.”

We see signs of spring; the baseball men are out for practice.

A summary, each morning, of the current events by members of the faculty is proving interesting to all. Why didn’t someone think of it before this?

We must make good in track and baseball this season. There are several places on both teams for good men; and we should have good men for all of the places. If you are a good man, the team needs you. Try for a place; it will do you good even if you fail to make the team. The best men we have were but awkward scrubs at first. It may be that you can develop as well. Your trying will at least add spirit to the teams; and that is what we need to win.

WHO’S WHO AND WHY

BY E. T. PROVOST.

“What is so rare as a” frock coat and a Cole Blease hat on the Clemson campus! Stay! any observant individual may find them if he will follow the advice usually displayed at a railroad crossing. They always appear calmly, sedately, and even peacefully, and are accompanied by a walking stick, an aristocratic pair of nose-glasses, a handbag in which Columbus brought his false teeth to America—and a man. The last named seems to be a necessary though comparatively unimportant part of the make-up. Still, there are some features pertaining to it that are very noticeable. For instance, take the hair. It has been coaxed, coddled, teased, and petted until it has assumed an exalted and striking appearance. It extends in long, smooth, glowing waves back from the forehead and face, and ends abruptly very close above the collar. The ears, partly hidden beneath the flowing tresses, cause most becoming little knools to appear on the flat surface of the hair, and the place of parting has long since been buried. Altogether, the impression is given that one stands before a great statesman, musician, artist, or freak. As a statesman, he would be a success, for when he speaks, the listener stands awed. As a musician, who would not crave to see him as the inspired leader of a great orchestra, performing all the acrobatic stunts of that person? With such hair, an effective pose would be easily assumed. As an artist—well, perhaps we had best leave the last two roles to the imagination of the reader.

As a teacher of English, I can hazard a guess that his method of grading a student would be about as follows: hair cut, ten; shine, five; clothes pressed, five; shave, ten; clean collar, five; two baths a day, ten; Fitch’s hair tonic, ten; other tonics, five; new pencil, five; penmanship, ten; on time, five; ten minutes early, ten; linen handkerchief, five; knowledge of lesson, fifteen. It is also very probable that in erasing the boards in the class room one should use special care. I would suggest that the eraser be moved horizontally across the board at a speed of, say five feet per minute. Begin at the top and work down, causing each path to overlap about fifteen-sixteenths of an inch. When the end of each path is reached, raise the eraser from the board six inches, move it gently down and to the left, then begin the new stroke. This will usually get you a pass even if you put nothing on the board after erasing it.

There is a time when the picture of the Pilgrims watching the departure of their supply ship is enacted before our very eyes. To witness this touching scene, place yourself on the grand-stand during football practice, and gaze across to the opposite hill. There you will see our Puritan, white-gloved hands grasping his cane, gazing sadly down upon the follies of the student body. Little children play about him, but his thoughts are upward, onward, and always beyond the realm of mere man.
EDITOR'S NOTE

The last week's issue of the Tiger contained an article by Dr. Riggs on the management of the Mess Hall. How many students before this appeared knew anything about how this big interest was handled?

The President's annual report to the Legislature is a pamphlet of 121 pages, and contains an account of the work of the College during the year ending July 1st, 1912. The following are quotations from this report. How many of you know how big Clemson College really is?

The session of 1911-1912 was one of the most important in the history of the College. During this session, the student enrollment was 811, one hundred and forty-five larger than any previous session. The total number of matriculates was 848, one hundred and forty-five larger than any previous session.

The graduates numbered 92, seven over the high water mark of the previous session. Fifty-one of these were from other States. In addition to the 811 counted on the regular enrollment, 37 other matriculates were unable to enter. The total number of matriculates was 848, one hundred and forty-five larger than any previous session.

Clemson College has grown rapidly that few realize its present magnitude. To begin in the woods and build a city and a college on an income of less than $75,000 per year was the task which confronted the Trustees of this institution at its inception 23 years ago. How well they have succeeded, operating meanwhile the College for nineteen years, can be judged by what follows.

In 1890, only the residence of John C. Calhoun stood on the lands now occupied by the College community. Today there are 70 dwellings, 23 principal public buildings, 64 minor buildings, complete water, electric and sewerage systems, and nearly a mile of cement sidewalks.

The College has in its service regularly 401 employees classified as follows:

The following item should be of special interest to the students, as all of us recognize the need of a good Gymnasium.

Recreation

I feel keenly the lack of proper facilities for student recreation and rest. We have plenty of work, but opportunities for reasonable recreation and amusement are very limited. It needs to be fully understood and appreciated that play is just as necessary to a successful college as is work.

Within a few years, I hope we shall have a splendid gymnasium with swimming pool, bowling alleys, provisions for dancing, roller skating, and every other possible device to attract a boy to play when his work is over. Play should not encroach upon study, nor should study encroach upon play. In the successful and well-rounded college, each must have a legitimate and important—though not equally important—place.

After listing the Gymnasium, a modern Hospital and other needs, President Riggs closes the report with these words—

"Despite the popular impression that Clemson has more money than it knows what to do with, this list of needs confirms the statement that money is our greatest lack. Already is the margin between income and operating expenses too narrow, and large additions in the way..."
of buildings or equipment are out of the question, unless the income increases, or we reduce the amount of our public work.

"The College has just reached that point in its development when it can give the largest and best service, and needs most a sympathetic attitude on the part of our people, which will enable them to see clearly its aims and justly estimate its accomplishments. In an atmosphere of appreciation and helpfulness, the College hopes to work out a great destiny of consecration to the agricultural and industrial interests of the State."

LOVE.
So sweetly imperceptible it seems
A fleeting fancy from another shore,
But still it lingers by, and still the more
It stays the more these gentle fairy dreams
Swell to a reverie in which the gleams
Of wreathing smiles and cheeks all dimpled o'er
Emit their light, more lovely than before.
Anon like music of murmuring streams
Sweet siren voices sing on every breeze;
At first they lightly touch, but still they move.
There's beauty in the budding of the trees,
New brightness in the starry depths above;
There's joy in life in labor or at ease—
There's beauty, brightness, joy, but—there is love.
—W. J. Hunter, '15.
