Clemson vs. Western Carolina
Clemson Memorial Stadium

Family Man
Tim Childers is the mature veteran of the Clemson secondary. His senior leadership will be valuable this season. He also is a leader off the field as he must be a responsible husband and father. Kim Kelly-Bishop profiles Clemson's number-three ranked tackler in 1982.

Frank Jersey
Clemson lost one of its most outstanding graduates this past summer when Frank Johnstone Jersey passed away. This outstanding citizen served Clemson for 65 years in every conceivable way. George Moore reviews his contributions to the Clemson community.

University Feature
Every sport fan probably has experienced a slight addiction to peanuts, usually the roasted kind. Tom Shealy gives an intriguing look at a new development by scientists with Clemson's S. C. Agricultural Experiment Station which makes the peanut suitable for use in such products as tuna salad, Quiche Lorraine, and weiners.

Happy Birthday IPTAY
Clemson's celebrated athletic scholarship organization, IPTAY, is now in the middle of its 50th year. The organization has come a long way since an informal, yet secret meeting in Atlanta in 1934. Bob Bradley takes us back through the years and summarizes the organization's incredible growth.

Jeff Suttle
Clemson's other starting strong safety never played football until his junior year of high school. Taking that into account, one wonders if Jeff Suttle has reached his potential as a football player? Tim Bourret examines the defensive back's athletic career and the people who have motivated him to successful heights.

1982-83 Revisited
The 1982-83 academic year was another outstanding year for Clemson athletics. The Tigers finished in the top five in the national all-sports poll for the fourth time in the last five years. Tim Bourret takes a statistical look at the accomplishments.

That Crazy Tiger
The Clemson Tiger is one of the most renowned mascots in the country. Clemson's success on the gridiron and the Tigers' corresponding pushup records have been a major factor. Jill Mixon tells us all about the history of the Tiger and some of his record-breaking performances.

Lists of Interest
Ever wonder what William Perry's favorite foods are? How about Mike Eppley's favorite designers? Jill Mixon asked some interesting questions of some of the Tiger griddies off-field interests.

who is now in his 15th year at Western Carolina. "This is our best group of returning starters, but everyone knows you can’t expect 22 football players to play every down through the season.”

Defensive end and wide receiver are the strongest areas for Western Carolina, as the players at these positions provided the big plays in 1982 when the Cullowhee, NC school won four of its last five games. All conference defensive end Louis Cooper and potential all-everything Bernard Jones combined for 27 tackles for negative yardage last season, more than twice as many tackles for loss as the Clemson defensive ends combined for in 1982.

Jones, a junior from Dorman High in Spartanburg, has been a starter since his freshman season and finished third on the team in tackles with 102. He also had seven sacks, as the 6-3, 200-pounder was successful on many timely blitz attempts last season. Cooper had nine sacks and 109 tackles as a sophomore in 1982 as many selected him as the outstanding sophomore defensive player in the Southern Conference.

While Clemson fans will watch the Western Carolina defensive ends turn in many exciting plays this afternoon, the Catamount wide receivers will keep Tiger fans on the edge of their seats on the other side of the line of scrimmage. Last season Eric Rasheed and Kristy Kiser had a field day on Frank Howard Field as they combined for 12 receptions for 185 yards.

Rasheed and Kiser are known as the "mini-cats" as neither of them could look down at Mickey Rooney with their 5-7 frames. But, with outstanding speed in the open field, they could become nearly as famous to Western Carolina fans as the aforementioned actor with a good day against the Tigers. In 1982 Rasheed finished second in the conference with 38 receptions for 624 yards, while Kiser was fourth in the SC with 35 catches for 517 yards. The walk-on, who transferred from Appalachian State, was a single-wing quarterback in high school and is a threat to throw the ball on end-around plays.

Last year Ronnie Mixon enjoyed throwing to these fine receivers. This year the luxury will be welcomed with open arms by Jeff Gilbert (no, Clemson’s all-conference baseball pitcher did not transfer to WCU; same name, different person). Gilbert lacks experience, however, as he has taken only 17 snaps in varsity competition. Coach Waters must wish his next 17 were in front of a little smaller and less hostile crowd than the over 70,000 that will be on hand at Memorial Stadium today.

But, Gilbert has looked great in preseason workouts and completed 16 of 24 for 231 yards in the Spring Game last year. Like the entire Western Carolina team and coaching staff, Gilbert will be up for the challenge.

Looking into the eyes of the Clemson front four is challenge enough, never mind trying to run an offense against them. Many feel the Tigers have the top frontline in the country, if not the most experienced. Six players with three letters are among the top 10 linemen, and nine of the 10 are returning letter-winners.

The heart of the Clemson defensive front is middle guard, where the "Bruise Brothers" patrol. You won’t find a more talented or bigger middle guard tandem in America (505 pound) than William Perry and William Devane. The duo has combined for 171 tackles over the last couple years and they have been major reasons for Clemson’s 21-1-1 ledger in this time period.

Edgar Pickett, Jim Scott, Ray Brown, James Robinson and Roy Brown are the other senior members of the defensive line who make this the deepest line in the nation. Pickett led the team in tackles for loss last season, even though he started only seven games. Scott was fifth on the team in tackles, while Brown has had an injury plagued career, but has already started at least one game in each of the last four seasons. Robinson made 31 of his 42 tackles in 1982 over the final half of the season while Roy Brown played behind Andy Headen at the bandit end last season.

Offensively, Clemson has been like the U.S. Army, it has invaded enemy territory strictly overland. Over the last two seasons Clemson has run the ball 78 percent of the time and tailbacks have averaged 44 carries per game. While the national trend has been to go to the aerial circus, Danny Ford has stayed with the ground attack. Stanford had an exciting 6-5 season in 1982, but Clemson fans have had their thrilling moments with long runs, and the record has been much better. Ford has bucked the national trend and given the so-called progressive coaches something to think about.

If Clemson is to have a successful season it will have to get a solid performance from a tailback or two. Five started in the fight for the starting position last spring and it has gone down to the wire. It is really too close to call and Ford probably will use two or three at the much publicized position.

Terrence Flagler had the best stats in fall scrimmages and most likely will get the curtain call for the Western Carolina game, but Steve Griffin, Stacey Driver and Kenny Flowers all will get their shot at winning the Best Supporting Tailback Award. Clemson has been successful with the multiple tailback system the last few years and that will be the case in 1983.

"We have had a good record using many tailbacks in the past," said Ford. "We want to get two or three in shape to play in any situation, maybe all four. You never have enough tailbacks because they are prone to injury and that has been the case this fall. Every one of the tailbacks has been out at one time or another this fall. I really appreciate Chuck McSwain’s and Cliff Austin’s durability over the last few years."

Running the offense will be Mike Eppeley and Anthony Parete. Eppeley led Clemson to five wins as a starting quarterback last year and will get the start at the beginning of this season. Parete showed signs of brilliance last fall and connected on 6-9 passes for two touchdowns in his limited service as the third-stringer. Both saw action against Western Carolina last year.

If this contest comes down to the kicking game, both coaches will be optimistic. Dean Biasucci set single-season and WCU career field goal records last year and his five three-pointers against Mars Hill in one half set an NCAA record for all divisions. Steve Kornegay had a great season as the Western Carolina punter as he averaged 41 yards a boot for the season, including a 45.8-yard average over the last six games.

Clemson of course counters with a three-some of capable kickers. Bob Paulling connected on 12 of 15 field goals last year and has hit 71-72 extra points in his career. Donald Igwebuike is the best backup placekicker in the nation and one of the finest kickoff men. Less than half of his kickoffs have been returnable over the last two seasons. Dale Hatcher, the Clemson punter, has a net punting figure of almost 40 yards a boot for his two-year career and 21 career punts over 50 yards.

Overall, this game should be a defensive battle, based on this year’s personnel and the tempo of the games between these two teams in recent years. The defensive line play should be some of the best we see this season when it comes to evaluating the respective talents of both teams.

Regardless, no one will be taking anyone lightly as Clemson kicks off its 88th season of intercollegiate football and its first campaign with a multiple double-decked stadium. It should be a memorable occasion.

Tim Childers

A MAN WHO WEARS MANY HATS

By Kim Kelly-Bishop

He’s known as husband, daddy, Tim Childers and . . . #26 to Clemson football fans. But, no matter what you call him, Tim Childers is dedicated . . . dedicated to his family, his football playing and his academics.

“He does everything you ask him and even more,” said Rick Whitt, Clemson’s strong safety coach. Whitt, in his second season as Childers’ coach, continued the praise when he added, “Tim is always ready to play football. He is a guy that knows what he wants and he tries to get everything out of himself that he can. Tim Childers is an achiever.”

And, at the ripe old age of 22, the administrative management major seems to have achieved considerable success in life. As a husband, he fully stands behind his wife (and high-school sweetheart) Donna, who is in pursuit of an education degree. “School days are busy days for us,” he said. “Donna and I are up early to eat and get Matt (our son) ready for nursery school. Then, all three of us are off to school. Either Donna or I will pick Matt up in the afternoon. During the football season I go to practice and Donna studies and stays at home while Matt takes a nap. Honestly, I give Donna a lot of credit, she really handles everything in our household during the season.”

As a father of an active little boy it is expected that daddy should play with son when he gets home from work. Well, when daddy has just been knocked around all afternoon in a football scrimmage, the last thing he probably wants to do is PLAY . . . Matt loves to play football and so I’ll usually play with him for awhile. But, on strenuous practice days,” he admits, “we try to tire Matt out by letting him run off some steam with (OT) Dean Herman’s little girl. That lets both daddies rest a little,” he laughs.

Who knows, perhaps young Matt Childers has such zeal for ball playing because he is trying to follow in his father’s footsteps and he realizes that practice makes perfect. Afterall, when your Daddy is a three-year starter for the Clemson Tigers, he must be doing something right!

And, Dad has certainly served as an adequate role model, for when he is not working on the field, he is pumping irons in the weight room. “Tim has some natural ability, but through hard work he has made himself a great player. He has good hands, he can catch the ball, he can lead others by his actions, but Tim’s biggest asset of all is that he has a great attitude. In other words, if it will win football games for us, Tim will do it and more,” observed Whitt.

What does this final season have in store for the 6-1, 185-pound strong safety then? Coach Whitt believes Childers will have a good year. “We’re going to be a bit more versatile in our coverages which I think will be better for Tim, our strong safeties and for the overall defense,” said Whitt.

So, the future looks bright for the soft-spoken Childers who last year garnered the third most tackles on the ballclub (57). As a defensive back and a vital cog in the Clemson defensive machine, Childers continues to view his role as a starter in somewhat modest light though “Starting for three years is more than I ever expected,” he said. “I came to Clemson with the idea that I wanted to play on the team and do a good job. Anything that has happened since then I look at as a plus.”

So, come September 3rd Tim Childers will “play on” the Clemson team in the season’s opener against Western Carolina. Last year versus the Catamounts Clemson fans will remember that it was #26 who scampered 83 yards with a mid-air recovery to add to the Tiger effort. That performance set an all-time ACC record for a non-scoring fumble return and anything that Tim Childers does in the Western Carolina game this year, Clemson fans will most certainly “look at as a plus!”

"His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, 'This is a man!'"

One of the deepest satisfactions he enjoyed in life was seeing Clemson men and women come to know what their Alma Mater is all about, and watching them help it be about it. A greater Clemson was foremost in his mind from that day in 1910 when he stepped off the train at Cherry's Crossing and walked into the Cadet Corps at Clemson Agricultural and Mechanical College. It was still there when he quietly slipped away from life at 8:30 on the evening of May 6, 1983.

Frank Johnstone Jervey '14 must surely today be sitting around a table upstairs with old friends like Henry Hill, Bob Moorman, "Steamy" McDowell and Max Ratchford of the 'Tree House Gang' telling them all about how the expansion to Memorial Stadium is coming along, about the 1981 National Championship football team, how Frank Howard is still going strong on the banquet circuit, and what a great contribution their University is making today to the economic health and well being of the citizens of South Carolina.

Though his last few years were ones of continuing inconvenient health, Captain Jervey kept regular "office" hours at the magnificent intercollegiate athletic complex that bears his name ... the Frank Johnstone Jervey Athletic Center. He was always available to listen to a problem, advise a new friend or simply "talk Clemson" for awhile.

Captain Jervey has been as much a part of the Clemson landscape, for the past 30 years in particular, as the statue of Dr. Clemson that guards the entrance to Tillman Hall. It was then ... in 1953 ... that he came back to his campus to receive an Honorary Doctor of Science degree and later become Clemson's vice president for development. He had retired from an illustrious 31-year career with the Ordnance Corps of the Department of Defense that established him as the nation's foremost authority on small arms and ammunition. Other honors were to follow, but nothing pleased him more than the very fact he was where he wanted to be at a time in his life when he appreciated the rolling hills and tree studded trails of his campus more than the career that preceded his coming home.

To think of Clemson University was to think of Captain Jervey. If ever an institution mirrored the personality of a man, such was the case with this love affair between Clemson University and Frank Jervey.

"The Cap" was an impish but impressionable gentlemans; a man of the people; one who was a shining star of positive optimism and a waiting friend to any who should walk up to say, "hi, Cap." It was a measure of the man that you left him with a sense of exhilaration from having shared a moment together.

On Tuesday, May 10, while a memorial service was held in Clemson, thousands of the Clemson family everywhere bowed their heads in good-bye. Thousands more joined those on May 12 when at Arlington National Cemetery he was quietly laid to rest alongside former presidents and dedicated men who loved this country, as he did, with unbounded patriotism and with an affection matched only by its founders.

The greatness of Clemson is the greatness of people. The shadow of Captain Jervey has reached every nook and cranny of this campus, and like the sunshine and the rain it will grace the excellence of this institution for eternity.

It is not hard to believe that into the mortar that holds this University and this community together is mixed the Christian influence and wisdom of life that was Frank Johnstone Jervey. So long, Cap!

YOU DON'T GET TO THE TOP BY JUST PLAYING GAMES.

It takes hard work and a lot of practice. And it takes a commitment to being the best. The kind of commitment Clemson students, faculty and alumni have also brought to their positions on the Stevens team throughout the years.

Students filling jobs in nearby plants. Faculty providing continuing education and valuable research. And alumni in management roles.

For years we've worked together to create quality fabrics. Having Clemson on our side has helped keep us at the top, too.

Head Coach Danny Ford

The names Bear Bryant, Amos Alonzo Stagg, Pop Warner, Woody Hayes and Jess Neely all have two things in common. If you are up on your football trivia you know that the five aforementioned men are the top five men in career coaching victories in the college ranks.

This well-known quintet also has another statistic in common. All five had worse records on a percentage basis against major college competition after four seasons than present Clemson Head Coach Danny Ford. We aren’t saying Ford is a shoo-in for the Hall of Fame or 300 victories, but the fact does give testimony to the Clemson mentor’s level of accomplishment in his first four full seasons as a head coach.

In his four seasons Ford has led Clemson to a 36-10-1 record, two ACC titles and most importantly the institution’s first National Championship in any sport. That is a winning percentage of .776, a better winning percentage at a four-year mark than current nationally renowned coaches Vince Dooley, Bo Schembechler, Tom Osborne, Bobby Bowden, Fred Akers, Lou Holtz and Terry Donahue had at the four-year mark in their careers.

In 1982 Ford led Clemson to a 9-1-1 record and his Tigers are now 21-1-1 over the last two seasons. No school in America can claim a better mark. After the 1981 season he was deservedly named National Coach-of-the-Year by an assortment of media and organizations.

He was named National Coach-of-the-Year by United Press International, the American Football Coaches’ Association, the Football Writers of America, and the Washington Touchdown Club, in addition to many other local football clubs.

The now 35-year-old Gadsden, Alabama native has been associated with more winning teams and programs than most coaches come in contact with in a lifetime. Including his years as a player at Alabama under Bear Bryant, Ford has been associated with college football for the last 16 years. Fifteen of those clubs have had winning records and 11 have gone to bowl games. Additionally, the 15 teams have had a record of 133-48-4, a .730 winning percentage.

Ford took over on December 10, 1978. That was a fine day in Clemson athletics because the University announced that Charley Pell had relinquished the head coaching duties of the 1978 Gator Bowl to Ford. Nearly 40 years after hiring 31-year-old Frank Howard, Clemson had hired a gifted 30-year-old to lead the Tiger forces on the gridiron.

Ford conquered all kinds of adversity in leading the Tigers to a nationally televised 17-15 triumph over perennial powerhouse Ohio State in the Gator Bowl in his very first game as head coach. Few mentors in NCAA history have made such a celebrated and successful beginning.

With this list of accomplishments, it is little wonder that the Student Affairs Committee of the Clemson Board of Trustees only considered one name as Charley Pell’s successor. Danny Ford not only had the backing of Pell, but also from the members of the Clemson football team. He was then assistant head coach and offensive line coach for the Tigers. After two meetings between Ford and the committee on the morning of December 5, 1978, it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that Ford should be named Clemson’s 21st head coach.

Ford began his association with college football in 1967 when he started for Bear Bryant at Alabama as Ken Stabler’s sophomore tight end. He played three years for Bryant, (including three wins against Clemson) and was an All-Southeastern Conference choice, All-SEC academic selection and team captain during his senior season.

After receiving his B.S. degree in industrial arts in 1970, Ford remained at Alabama as a graduate assistant for the 1970 and 1971 seasons. Upon earning a master’s degree in special education in 1971, he was made a full-time assistant under Bryant for the 1972 and 1973 seasons. The Tide went to four more post-season games while Ford was on Bryant’s staff.

Clemson’s current head man then accepted a position as an assistant coach on Jimmy Sharpe’s staff at Virginia Tech. He remained in Blacksburg for three seasons (1974 to 1976), before he was beckoned to Clemson by Charlie Pell, who had just been named the Tigers’ head coach. Pell and Ford had served together on the VPI staff for two seasons.

And only 23 games later, Ford became head coach of the Tigers at age 30, the youngest Division I head coach in the country.

And three years later he became the youngest coach to lead a team to a national championship.

At the convergence of the Chechessee and Colleton Rivers near Hilton Head Island, South Carolina lies Callawassie Island. Here is a place where great herons wing slowly over undisturbed marsh. And, where Tom Fazio has designed a 27 hole masterpiece for your golfing pleasure. Located only a short distance from the Intracoastal Waterway and the Atlantic Ocean, Callawassie also offers a unique real-estate opportunity. Consider these points:

• Backed by a solid development company, choice golf course, marsh, and waterfront homesites are still available on this beautiful island. These homesites are large, thickly wooded, and attractively priced.

• Callawassie Island offers a clean, natural and private environment, blessed with lush foliage and one of the largest magnolia forests in the Carolinas.

• Planned amenities other than golf include a swim and racquet complex and a magnificent country club overlooking the Colleton River expanse.

• Callawassie offers an uncrowded, private residential environment. Only 850 property owners will be allowed on this 880 acre island. The result will be a return to gracious Southern living and architectural style.

• Homesites begin at $31,000. For more information or a private tour call (803) 842-4955/726-4500 or write:

Interstates 20, 26, 85, and 95 aren't exactly Broadway, but this fall they'll carry a show to the people of South Carolina as high-spirited and fun-filled as any chorus line the Big Apple has to offer.

Understand, now, there won't be any 12-piece bands, and the cast will perform in places like high school cafeterias and National Guard armories — the kind of places that sort of make you feel at home and that make you proud of your community and state.

And that's just fine. In fact it's perfect. Because the name of this show is "We're Proud to Say," and its plot is straightforward and simple: to celebrate Clemson University, its students, its programs, and its contributions to the quality of life in the Palmetto State.

Clemson has a lot to be proud of, such as:

- the best freshmen SAT scores of any public college or university in South Carolina . . .
- outstanding faculty who have this year received Fulbright awards and been elected to such national offices as President of the National Wildlife Federation . . .
- a record year for private support of Clemson programs, both athletic and academic. Through such donations the numbers of named professorships and full-ticket academic scholarships have expanded to attract and keep the best minds on campus on both sides of the classroom desk.

Featured entertainers at this fall's Clemson nights around the state will be the 4:30 Thursday Singers, a group of energetic Clemson students acclaimed for their vocal talents. There'll be audio-visual presentations as well and brief — and we're serious about that — comments from representatives of the various areas that make up the University community.

"The emphasis will be on fun for the whole family," says Clemson night chairman Jeff McNeill of the Alumni Relations Office. "The evening will include an informal, inexpensive meal, and we're going to keep everything casual and entertaining. "All we want to do is to show off some of the smart and talented Clemson students that we're so proud of, and to tell folks about some of the great things going on at Clemson University."
THE 3 KEYS TO SUCCESS:

Satisfied Clients, Satisfied Clients and Satisfied Clients.

Developing a reputation for excellence is not an easy task. Maintaining that reputation can be just as difficult. At Parker Construction our reputation for excellence has been developed by remembering two key words: client satisfaction. From the moment we become involved with a project to the date of completion, we’re dedicated to delivering what’s promised, when promised. This kind of dedication has not come by accident. Since our beginning we’ve taken that extra step to not just satisfy our client’s needs, but to perform beyond their expectations. Through the application of modern building technology we’ve discovered better methods of construction, saving precious time on all projects. Exacting communication and attention to detail has enabled us to complete projects within budget and without compromise. From historic restoration to new construction, Parker is building — building a reputation for excellence and a long list of satisfied clients.
Statistics are not for losers when it comes to athletics. Batting averages, scoring averages and passing percentages are used to gauge an athlete’s performance, and won-loss records document the abilities of coaches. If there is one statistic or rating system for athletic directors it must be the Knoxville Journal’s National All-Sports Poll. It rates the all-around success of a program based on national standings in various sports.

If that poll is the statistical barometer for athletic directors, then Bill McLellan is one of the finest in his field. Under his leadership Clemson has finished in the top five in the nation in the prestigious poll four of the last five years, including a number-five ranking during the 1982-83 academic year. Additionally, Clemson has ranked in the top 36 in the nation every year since 1975-76.

“I believe in the total athletic program at Clemson,” said McLellan, who is only the third man to own the title of athletic director at Clemson over the last 48 years. “Every sport is important in this department and we want to have a nationally ranked program in every sport. It is a daily challenge, but a rewarding one.”

Highly regarded by his peers, McLellan is also held in respect by Clemson alumni and constituents. In the summer of 1982 he was named as a Distinguished Alumnus of Clemson University, one of the highest honors a Clemson alumnus can obtain.

The native of Hamer, SC, was elevated to his present position on February 4, 1971, but he has served Clemson in almost every capacity.

McLellan was a Tiger gridder in the early fifties, earning a letter in 1953 and 1954. He was also a member of the 1952 Gator Bowl team. He earned a BS degree in agronomy in 1954 and a master’s in agricultural economics in 1956.

McLellan joined the athletic staff May 1, 1958 from Clemson’s Department of Agricultural Economics and Seed Certification where he had spent one year as assistant agronomist and two years as assistant economist.

Although carrying the title of assistant business manager, McLellan was credited with handling the majority of the department’s athletic business and operational matters long before his appointment into his present role. In 1966 he was named assistant athletic director and two years later was appointed associate athletic director.

During his 13 years as the top man, Clemson has improved its won-loss record by leaps and bounds in nearly every sport, but the growth and improvement in facilities has also improved at a meteoric rate. Clemson has the finest all-around athletic facilities in the South for its 17 intercollegiate sports and McLellan has been the architect of the improvement.

Just look at Clemson’s Memorial Stadium. In the last six years alone the seating capacity has increased by over 70 percent with the addition of two upper decks.

The list of improvements for other sports is lengthy, but significant. During his tenure, 20 new tennis courts have been built, new lighting has been installed on a new soccer field, the baseball field has been made into a stadium, additional seating and further improvements have been made to Littlejohn Coliseum, a new swimming pool was built as an addition to a renovated Fike Fieldhouse, a modern, all-weather track was installed, five new football practice fields were added and a golf putting green and driving range were built.

McLellan has also worked tirelessly on further improvements for the University community. The athletic department has made a number of grants to academic programs. Some of the purchases included mini-computers in the College of Education, salary supplements in the math and English departments in addition to the College of Education, support travel for the Tiger Band, and a yearly contribution to the Clemson Sports Symposium, one of the finest of its kind in the nation. Additionally, matching gifts have been made from IPTAY to the special University fund.

The 51-year-old McLellan is also highly regarded for his expertise in television contracts. He has been a chairman of the ACC television committee and has been a chief negotiator in various television contracts. He is the major reason Clemson will have most of its football games seen on nationwide cable systems this season.

Putting something back into the University has a personal dimension for McLellan. “As one of seven children, that athletic scholarship made a lot of things possible for me, and I appreciate the opportunity to pay Clemson back. It’s not an ego trip for me, but it is personal satisfaction which no one can ever take away.”

In Times Like These, How Do You Keep Businesses Going, Farms Growing, Wheels Turning, Kids Learning, Teams Competing, And Ends Meeting?

It takes work. And careful planning. But you can do the things you need to do. Make it a good life for yourself and the people you love. Make it an even better, brighter future. And you don't have to do it alone.

We'll help. With all the banking services you need. Whether you're just starting out with your first job, first home, first baby. Or you're already established and looking for ways to make the most of what you've accomplished.

But there's more to it than just providing the services you need now. There's the promise that we'll grow with you. Refining services to help you cope with change. Developing new ones to help you get ahead.

So you can come to C&S. And stay with C&S. Like thousands of folks all across South Carolina. They're still building, growing, and achieving, despite the up and down, 'round and 'round times we live in.

But that doesn't come as a surprise. After all, every one of them is a Financial Wizard.

The Golden Anniversary of IPTAY

By Len Gough

On July 1, 1983, IPTAY began its 50th year of service to Clemson University. From a modest beginning as a secret organization, IPTAY has grown into one of the largest athletic scholarship raising groups in America.

It was during the summer of 1934 that Dr. Rupert H. Fike, a physician from Atlanta, GA, had the idea to begin a secret organization, a “fraternity” of sorts, that would raise funds for athletic scholarships for Clemson. On August 20, he recruited eight other gentlemen to meet with him at his home in Atlanta.

Meeting with Dr. Fike were: George Suggs, Gene Cox, E. C. Hutcheson, Bill Dukes, J. R. Pennell, George Klugh, Milton Berry, and Jack Mitchell. Together these men drafted the constitution, created the ritual, and developed the codes and symbols that only initiated IPTAY members knew.

Parts of the ritual included a pocket piece with symbols, a secret handshake and unusual greetings. The different titles included IPTAY, which stood for Industry, Perseverance, Temperance, Assistance, Youthfulness or I Pay Ten A Year.

But IPTAY has not succeeded because of secret symbols and initiations. It was only a secret organization for four years. From its beginning with 162 charter members, IPTAY continued to grow until, in 1954, Dr. Fike realized a need for reorganization. A complete revamping of the club took place, and it was decided to have a Board of Directors composed of nine people. Three of those would be appointed by the Chairman of the Athletic Council, with the remaining six being elected to represent the six congressional districts.

In 1950, Gene Willimon had been hired as Executive Secretary and would be joined by three officers, a President, a Vice President and a Secretary-Treasurer, that would be elected from and by the Board of Directors.

The first IPTAY Board of Directors was comprised of Calhoun Lemon, Vic Chapman, R. C. Edwards, Paul Quattlebaum, W. G. DesChamps, Harper Gault, Edgar Rosamond, and J. O. Freeman. The main objective of the directors was to create more interest in IPTAY and Clemson University. In 1958, IPTAY representatives were appointed for the first time. This group now numbers over 500 strong and donates untold volunteer hours promoting Clemson.

As the years passed, the numbers continued to grow. There were 5,200 members in 1954 which became 10,000 in 1959 and now number over 19,000 for the 1983 year. In 1936, Jess Neely said that the sky would be the limit if IPTAY could raise only $10,000. Thanks to the leadership of people like Gene Willimon, George Bennett, and Joe Turner, IPTAY crossed $1 million in 1977, $2 million in 1979, $3 million in 1981, $4 million in 1982, and $5 million for the 1983 fiscal year. With this type of support, it is no wonder that IPTAY has had 20 consecutive record breaking years.

But what is IPTAY? By constitutional definition, IPTAY is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization with the primary goal of providing scholarships for student athletes at Clemson University; it is self-supporting. But IPTAY is much more than numbers. IPTAY is 19,000 people who believe that Clemson deserves only the best, and, these people are willing to work unselfishly to make and keep Clemson number one. Athletic Director Bill McClellan believes, “Without a doubt, the unprecedented period of growth in Clemson Athletics would not have been possible without the support of IPTAY.”

We are completing the first fifty years of a long journey. But where will IPTAY be fifty years down the road? “The key to Clemson’s success has been and will continue to be people,” according to Joe Turner, Executive Secretary of IPTAY. “If we have unlocked some unique qualities on Saturdays at Death Valley or in Littlejohn, it is because of the love and sincerity of the people who support the Tigers. It is this commitment that has taken Clemson through the first 50 years and will certainly keep Clemson “Number One” through the next fifty years.”

Assistant Coaches

Don Denning is in his third season with the Clemson staff after joining the Tigers on July 1, 1981. The secondary coach has previously served stints at Western Carolina, Memphis State and Delta State. He is a 1960 graduate of Presbyterian College. He has served as an assistant coach, head coach and assistant athletic director throughout his athletic career.

Tom Harper came to Clemson from Virginia Tech where he had served as defensive coordinator. The native of Piqua, OH, is now in his third season in that capacity at Clemson. Like Don Denning, Harper has also served as a head coach in his career, as he was the top man at Wake Forest in 1972. Harper serves as assistant head coach at Clemson.

Les Herrin has been the director of Clemson’s fine linebacking crew the last two seasons. He came to the Tigers from Appalachian State where he had served as the defensive coordinator. The 1971 Western Carolina graduate captained the Catamount team in 1970 and also was named most valuable player of the defense that same season.

Lawson Holland is the only current member of the staff who also played his college football at Clemson. The likeable receiver coach was a reserve quarterback for the Tigers between 1970 and 1973. Now in his fifth season at Clemson, Holland, who works with the receivers, earned his B.A. in secondary education.

Woody McCorvey is the newest member of the Clemson coaching staff, as he climbed aboard just this past July. Clemson’s new tight ends coach had been the offensive coordinator at Alabama A&M University the last four seasons. The native of Grove Hill, AL was a four-year letterman at Alabama State as a quarterback. He earned his degree in physical education.

Chuck Reedy is one of the reasons Clemson’s ground attack has been so outstanding the last few years, as he has served as the running backs coach. Now in his sixth season, Reedy joined the Clemson staff from Kentucky in July of 1978. The 1971 Appalachian State graduate earned two letters on the gridiron during his playing days.

Nelson Stokley played collegiately at a fine southern institution and he now coaches in the college ranks in the same area of the country. The starting quarterback for the LSU Tigers between 1965 and 1967, Stokley is now the offensive coordinator for the Clemson Tigers. He is now in his fourth season at Clemson after serving as an assistant at his alma mater and at Virginia Tech.

Larry Van Der Heyden is a transplanted midwesterner who is now in his fifth season on the Clemson staff. He has coached some fine offensive linemen in recent years and is one of the major reasons the Tiger ground game has been so successful. The native of Mohne, IL played both football and baseball for three seasons at Iowa State.

Tommy West is in his second season on the Clemson coaching staff. Last year he worked with the defensive ends and had the pleasure of coaching players like Andy Headen, Joe Glenn and Edgar Pickett. West was a fine player himself, lettering in the mid-seventies for the Volunteers of Tennessee.

Rick Whitt is in his fourth season working in the Clemson secondary. A 1976 graduate of Catawba, he also has had some experience with the Bandit ends, one of the most important positions on the Clemson defense. Whitt started for three seasons at strong safety for Catawba before starting his coaching career at Central Davidson High School in Lexington, NC. He is this year’s volunteer coach.
At Piedmont, we've been winning new fans at a record-setting pace.

This past year alone, for example, we counted over 8.5 million. A million more than the year before.

So, why are so many fans flocking to our gates?

We think it's because we offer an alternative. An aerial game plan that gives the air traveler a lot of options. For instance, nonstops and directs where the other airlines offer only connections. Or fast, easy connections through airports that are smaller and less congested.

In short, it's a strategy that has helped us gain ground almost everywhere we've gone. Which has helped make us, since 1978, the fastest-growing major airline in America.

Twenty points awarded for first place, 19 for second place, 18 for third place, etc.

For the fourth time in the last five years the Clemson all-around sports program has been ranked in the top five in the nation. The survey, conducted by the Knoxville Journal, takes into account national rankings in selected sports. Women’s sports are not included in this poll, which has been in existence since 1971.

This poll is a good index of the rise of Clemson athletics over the years. The Tigers were first ranked in the survey in 1975-76 with a number-20 finish. In the 1978-79 Clemson climbed to fourth, and in 1979-80 gained a number-three ranking, the school’s highest ever. Two years ago Clemson was fourth and last year the Tigers picked up the number-five rating.

This past year Clemson scored in five of the 10 sports involved in the survey. The Clemson cross country, football and soccer teams all finished eighth in the country, while the men’s tennis team was ninth. Bobby Robinson’s golfers were fifth to record the highest team ranking in a men’s sport.

The women also did well as the women’s cross country team finished fifth, the women’s indoor track team was 10th and the women’s tennis team was rated seventh in the final polls.

CLEMSON, S. C. — Football breeds hunger, for both the behemoths on the field and the frenzied fans in the stands. Those seasonal hunger pangs can send even nutrition-minded folks in quest of cold hot dogs, watered-down soft drinks and candy bars.

The smart football fan opts for peanuts. For one thing, they’re convenient — an accurate vendor can toss a sack of roasted goobers with the precision of a veteran quarterback. More importantly, peanuts are nutritious. It’s for this reason that Clemson University food scientists are trying to take advantage of the ground-pa’s high protein by creating products made of peanut flakes, flour and milk.

The peanut is a Brazilian herb, probably most familiar as the buttery stuff that keeps the jelly company between two slices of bread. Peanuts were carried from South America to Africa and Europe by Old World navigators and explorers, and were shipped to America as food for slaves.

Centuries later, scientists with Clemson’s S. C. Agricultural Experiment Station are proving that even something nicknamed “goober” deserves respect.

The researchers have perfected a process that converts peanuts into white, tasteless flakes full of protein, carbohydrates, defatted minerals and vitamins. The flakes contain no cholesterol, and the flatulence factor is virtually zero.

The flakes blend easily with everything from meat and fish to candies and cheese. Peanut flakes adopt the flavor of whatever they’re added to and leave no aftertaste. The list of products that can be made from peanut flakes includes meat loaf, sausage patties, chicken roll, tuna salad, Quiche Lorraine, chocolate brownies, luncheon meats, scrambled eggs, cheese casserole, cakes, puddings and wieners.

“We’ve had a lot of comments from industry indicating there is great potential,” says J. H. Mitchell Jr., the retired Clemson food scientist who perfected the peanut flake.

Another use for peanuts is as a finely powdered flour high in potassium but low in sodium, which would benefit people with high blood pressure. The flour is perfect in muffin, pancake and waffle mixes. Since it retains moisture better than normal flour, peanut flour is ideal in cookies that should stay soft in the package.

A yogurt-like product made from peanuts may some day sit next to dairy products in grocery stores. Peanut milk, water, thickeners and acids are blended and homogenized to create a high-protein yogurt, according to food science technician Linda McCaskill. Researchers are experimenting with different flavorings trying to overcome a mild aftertaste.

Even before Clemson’s food scientists started tinkering with goobers, peanuts were big business. In 1982 South Carolina growers planted about 12,000 acres of peanuts, with the crop valued at almost $8.1 million. The national harvest was worth about $856 million.

The Clemson Tigers
From 1896 to Glory
Lou Sahadi

• What it was like to play under coach John Heisman (1900-1903) — how he changed the entire game when his teams took the field
• The previously untold stories of the most glorious victories of the Clemson Tigers, and the ten greatest teams in Clemson history
• The first major work about Clemson football, Clemson fans, and their stadium, "Death Valley"

The Clemson Tigers is the story of one of the greatest collegiate football teams in history. The Tigers played their first game in 1896, and since then they have won more Atlantic Coast Conference games (106-58-4) than any other school. It was at Clemson that coach John Heisman (for whom the trophy is named) first earned the sobriquet "genius." Then came other legendary coaches, such as Frank Howard, and seasons like that of the unbeaten (12-0) 1981 team, which clinched the national championship with a dramatic Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska. This is a story about how football traditions and rivalries are created, about the fanaticism of diehard Clemson fans and the joys of football through the American Southeast.

Author Lou Sahadi is a well known New York sports writer and the author of Winning Edge, Steelers, and Broncos!

N MAN TO DEVELOP LIKE THESE!
IPTAY — Life Blood of Clemson Athletics

By Bob Bradley

All of these men have something in common. All came to Clemson to receive an education and to play athletics. Some played more than others, but had it not been for one organization, probably few of them would have had the opportunity to further their education and participate in athletics for the Tigers.

The above names were not picked for any specific reason. Any number of others could have been chosen. In fact, the list is endless. These athletes, along with over 4,000 more, can attribute their education to IPTAY, a mysterious sounding name that has become synonymous with Clemson athletics. This year we are celebrating the golden anniversary of the life blood of Clemson athletics.

The name IPTAY was picked from the phrase which stood for "I Pay Ten A Year." In the 50 years of operation the minimum contribution has been raised only twice and now it's "I Pay Thirty A Year." But it still means just what it says. People who are interested in giving $30 a year in order to keep Clemson athletics competitive and on a high plane.

The first known aid to Clemson athletics came just before the turn of the century. The Tigers had just closed, according to one article, "the most brilliant football season in the history of athletics at Clemson" by trouncing Georgia Tech, 41-5, in Greenville on Thanksgiving Day. That was in 1899.

Prof. W. M. Riggs, who was later to become Clemson president, had coached this team just as he had the first team in 1896, but except for this latter time, it was without remuneration. Students decided that the man who brought football to Clemson from Auburn should be able to devote his full duties to the academic side and that a fulltime employed person should be brought in to coach football.

Thus, a mass meeting was held December 7, 1899, and the Football Aid Society was formed. At this meeting the conditions and possibilities of the season of 1900 were thoroughly discussed and as a result, the society became a permanent organization with the avowed purpose to render all possible assistance to the football association, a forerunner to the Clemson University Athletic Department.

A total of 182 names appeared on the roll of members and $372.50 was pledged in an hour's time. A ways and means committee was appointed and the object of this committee was to devise means for raising money. Prof. Riggs aided the society in bringing in Auburn coach John W. Heisman and during the next four years of the Heisman era, Clemson teams had a 19-3-2 record and became one of the South's great football powers. The 1900 team was Clemson's first undefeated squad (6-0).

As far as can be determined, no organized effort was made to assist athletic teams at Clemson for the next three decades, although there were individual gifts here and there, usually collected at Clemson meetings.

Jess Neely arrived on the scene in 1931. That season started what has become known as the "Seven Lean Years" and it was during this time that IPTAY was born.

Neely's first season ended 1-6-2. Following The Citadel game at Florence, October 16, 1931, Capt. Frank J. Jervy, Neely, Joe Davis (former Clemson and Rice coach) and Capt. Pete Heffner were sitting in a car outside the stadium talking following the 6-0 loss at the Cadets' hands.

Jervy, who passed away this past spring, recalled that it was a downcast group in the car. Heffner said in so many words, "What we ought to do is to get the alumni to give Jess some financial support. Jervey remembered picking the figure of $50.00 as the amount of the contribution and to form a "50 Club." Jervey, who was working in Washington at the time, began corresponding with some of his Clemson friends concerning the "50 Club" and one of those written was Dr. Rupert H. (Rube) Fike, an Atlanta cancer specialist.

Early records at the athletic department in Clemson show that there were only a few contributions of $50. Fike’s idea was that if a smaller amount was asked there would be more money and more members.

Dr. Fike, determined to find a way to strengthen Clemson’s athletic program which was as dark as the current depression, stuck to his guns for the “smaller amount-more members” idea.

Although there are several versions as to just how IPTAY started, a letter written by Dr. Fike to Coach Neely, dated August 21, 1934, seems to pinpoint the exact date of formation. Dr. Fike said in his opening statement of the letter:

“Last night we had a little meeting out at my house and organized the IPTAY Club.” He went on to say that those attending the meeting were George Suggs, Gene Cox, E. L. Hutchins, Bill Dukes, J. R. Pennell, George Klugh, Milton Berry, Jack Mitchell and himself.

The club was to be a secret order, according to an early copy of the constitution, which stated that “anyone who has matriculated at Clemson, has been employed by the college, or is a friend of the college, who can and will subscribe to the purpose of the order by taking the oath of secrecy and paying the initiation and yearly fees, when invited for membership, is eligible.”

The purpose of the Clemson Order of IPTAY, stated the constitution, “shall be to provide annual financial support to the athletic department at Clemson and to assist in every other way possible to regain for Clemson the high athletic standing which rightfully belongs to her.”

Dr. Fike entwined the language of his ritual around the tiger. The Bengal tiger, the Persia tiger and Sumatra tiger would be the president, vice president and secretary, respectively. The Exalted Iryas would be the head coach at Clemson with “Iryas” meaning “I receive yours and acknowledge same.”

Neely recalled in later years that Fike, Mitchell and Berry approached him sometime before their August meeting at the Fike home and said:

“What do you think about this IPTAY?”

“About what?” Neely asked with an amazed look.

Then the enthused Fike, Mitchell and Berry explained their plan of IPTAY to Neely. The distressed coach was for trying anything which would bring the Tigers out of their gridiron doldrums.

As close as can be determined, there were 185 people who were members of IPTAY during that first year of 1934-35. Probably none of these people — save Berry, Fike and Mitchell — ever envisioned what IPTAY would do for athletics at Clemson.

Although bringing Clemson from its lowest ebb into the Cotton Bowl was one of Neely’s highlights, he feels that one even more important was getting the athletic department on a sound financial footing. "When we came to Clemson in 1931," Neely recalled, "there wasn’t hardly 20 cents in the treasury and when I left here (1940), there was over $20,000."

The Tigers had their first winning season with IPTAY in 1934 (5-4-0) but it was probably the 1938 season where the net results really began to pay off. That year Clemson waltzed over Presbyterian, Tulane, South Carolina, Wake Forest, George Washington, Kentucky and Furman, while losing to Tennessee and tying Virginia Military.

Following the VMI tie the Tigers won 19 of their next 20 games with 13 straight being reeled off from the 7-6 loss to Tulane in ‘39 to the 13-0 defeat to the same Greenies in 1940. The 1939 team was 8-1-0 in regular season play and went on to defeat Frank Leahy’s Boston College team, 6-3, in the ’40 Cotton Bowl.

The men who were out beating the bushes for IPTAY encountered rough going in those early days. On many occasions, a person was interested in giving, but lacked funds. Harper Gault, a former president of IPTAY, recalled members giving $10 worth of milk, potatoes or turnips in exchange for a membership.

During the 50 seasons in which IPTAY has been operating, the Tigers have had 33 winning or break even football seasons, winning just a little over 65 percent of their games. For the 15 years prior to IPTAY the Tigers won less than half of their encounters — 47 percent to be exact.

Besides the 11 bowl trips the Tigers have claimed three Southern Conference titles and eight Atlantic Coast Conference championships, along with a tie. In the last 10 years Clemson has become dominant in many sports as the total athletic program is consistently ranked in the top 5 in the nation. IPTAY is the major reason.

The Cadillac touch. It’s everywhere. You can feel it when you put Cadillac’s road-hugging Touring Suspension to the test. You can see it ... inside and out. From leather-faced front buckets with lumbar support to a hand-buffed exterior finish. It’s attention to detail, too. Like push-button air. And aluminum alloy wheels. You’ve got to drive this car... and experience the Cadillac touch. Cimarron ’84.

BEST OF ALL... IT’S A CADILLAC.

Let’s Get It Together... Buckle Up.
Suttle Approach to the Game

By Tim Bourret

Behind every great man is a great woman. That is one of the most revered themes of success stories in any walk of life. Despite its classic connotation, this theme is still alive today, even on the Clemson football team.

Senior strong safety Jeff Suttle never even practiced a day with the Lafayette High School team until the spring before his junior year. He was more interested in scoring baskets on the hardwood or running track for his school than making tackles. Then along came Karla Harris and his attitude seemed to change.

"I was doing well with the basketball and track teams at the time and did not have that much interest in football," said Suttle, who has played 35 games in his Tiger career entering the Western Carolina game. "In the spring of my sophomore year I met Karla and wanted to impress her. A lot of the football coaches had wanted me to try out for the team and they always told me a uniform was waiting for me, but I never had that extra motivation to give it a try. Karla gave that extra push," said Suttle who still keeps in close touch with Harris.

So, a week into spring practice of that season (1978), Suttle attended his first day of football practice. He had missed some time because of track, but was obviously in shape because of his track workouts. What he might not have been prepared for was the hitting. "The very first day of practice I bloodied my nose, but I did not give up," continued Suttle.

"It became a challenge to me to make the team, to prove it to myself and to Karla that I could make an accomplishment and a contribution to the team."

Suttle not only made the team, he became an instant star the next fall as he was named a first-team all-state selection as a free safety. The next summer he attracted much attention, especially from then Clemson assistant coach Curley Hallman. "Coach Hallman first talked to me at the state track championship and we just kept in touch. I visited Clemson the following fall and enjoyed it, so I signed to come to Clemson."

The Clemson coaching staff, including Danny Ford, was sold on Suttle's all-around ability. "It is becoming more and more important to get good athletes when you bring these young men in," said Danny Ford. "Jeff was such a good all-around athlete we knew he could make the transition to college ball. It has ended up that he has played all over the secondary since he has come to Clemson. We need people who are flexible and can react quickly to adjustments."

Suttle became a good athlete in his hometown in Lafayette, Georgia. He really did not have to go outside of his own family to take on formidable competition. One cousin, Chevette Suttle, played football as a strong safety at Tennessee, while another, Pat Suttle, who was on the Clemson basketball team last year, is now playing hoops at Anderson Junior College. "We had a very athletic minded family and we played sports all the time," said Suttle.

Good coaching was also a key to Suttle's early development: "Bobby Chappell and Milford Morgan, my high school coaches, had a lot to do with me playing football at the college level. They gave me encouragement and taught me proper technique when I was young."

Suttle has learned his lessons well and continued to improve throughout his Clemson career, thanks in part to Chappell and Morgan who laid the groundwork. He has missed only one game in three years as a part-time starter at strong safety along with Tim Childers. The duo has just about split the time over the last two seasons. In 1981 Suttle had only three less tackles and one less pass deflection than Childers. In 1982 the 6-1, 180-pounder had 36 stops, only two less than he had during the National Championship season, and had 27 first hits.

Heading into his senior season Suttle has some personal goals, but he only reveals his goals for the team. "Both Tim and I would like to play the whole game, but this system is best for the team. The strong safety is an important player on every play, we are always hitting someone, or covering a deep pass. This way Tim and I are fresh the entire game. You've got to keep the overall team concept in your mind."

Suttle seems to have his personal overall concept in perspective also, as he heads into his final year of college. "I'll take a look at the pro ball, there are a lot more jobs available with the USFL in operation, but I can't count on that. I want to graduate this year and get a good job, that's the biggest thing in my mind right now."

Clemson fans are looking forward to a big season from Jeff Suttle at the strong safety position. With the reputation of the Tiger front line, teams will probably put the ball in the air more than run the ball on the ground. Every time number 23 makes an interception or a big play this year Tiger fans will give Jeff Suttle a round of applause. Karla Harris will be smiling.

We're proud of our newest Most Valuable Performer—the new Corvette. The sporting analysts of the automotive world, the enthusiast magazines, are pretty impressed with it, too. Car and Driver magazine called it, "The most advanced production car on the planet."

That makes us feel pretty good at Chevrolet. Because a lot of deep thinking and hard work went into creating the new Corvette.

The dedication that went into Corvette is the same dedication demonstrated by the athletes of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. And since we know what hard work is all about, we established the Chevrolet Scholarship Program back in 1971. This awards the Most Valuable Players in NCAA football and basketball games with a donation to their respective school's general scholarship fund.

To date, over 1,800 scholarships, totaling over 1.9 million dollars, have been donated to assist men and women in furthering their educations.

At Chevrolet, we strive for excellence. That's why we support the goals of the NCAA and that's why we offer cars like our Most Valuable Performer—the new Corvette.

We're Chevy... and we're proud.
IT'S MORE THAN JUST A NAME.

For the fourth time in the last five years the Clemson sports program has been ranked in the top five in the nation. The survey conducted by the KNOXVILLE JOURNAL takes into account national rankings in many selected sports, and the Tigers have finished in the top 10 in the last eight years. So, it is evident that Clemson athletics are on firm ground.

One of the highlights of the '82-'83 season was the football team’s number-eight ranking in the final AP Football Poll. Additional evidence of the football team’s excellent showing was exemplified as 10 players were drafted by the NFL.

But, football was not the only game in town at Clemson in 1982-83. Eight other teams finished in the top 20 in the nation in their respective sports’ final polls. The golf team finished fifth, the highest rating ever attained. The soccer team finished eighth, making this the 10th time out of 11 years that the soccer team has either finished first or tied for the top spot in the conference. The women’s tennis team finished seventh, the men’s tennis squad concluded another successful season rated ninth, women’s indoor track finished 10th, while the men’s and women’s cross country teams finished fifth and eighth, respectively.

In addition to the eight top 10 teams, women’s indoor and outdoor track finished in the top 20, and the men’s indoor and outdoor track teams concluded play in the top thirty in the nation.

On an individual level, the Clemson program continued to excel, as 17 athletes received All-America status in 1982-83. Additionally, 54 athletes achieved All-conference honors.

Four Clemson athletes were MVP’s or individual champions of the Atlantic Coast Conference, and three others were chosen as the national senior Player-of-the-Year in their particular categories. Terry Kinard was named the National Defensive Player-of-the-Year in football, while Jean Desdunes was named the National Senior Player-of-the-Year for 1983, the third men’s tennis player in Clemson history to be so honored. Tina Krebs claimed the national championship in the 500 meters at the NCAA championship in women’s indoor track. Jody Trucks was the ACC Most Valuable Player in women’s tennis, while freshman Gigi Fernandez came within one point of being the first athlete in Clemson history to win an NCAA individual singles championship. Also, two-sport star Hans Koeleman was honored as the ACC Most Valuable Player in men’s cross country, as well as the ACC Most Valuable Player in men’s outdoor track.

Soccer, Men’s Tennis and Golf were just three top 10 sports at Clemson.

Alumni and Friends Make Things Happen at Clemson!

Dear Loyal Clemson Folks:

As president of the Clemson Alumni Association, I want to welcome all visitors to Clemson and hope you'll take a few minutes before you leave to see our beautiful campus, and talk with some of our students and professors. You will be amazed at what you see and hear!

Clemson University is on the move and you should be proud of the many accomplishments we have made academically over the last decade. We are bringing in top flight students, hiring excellent faculty, and turning out graduates ready for the world of work.

There is no finer way for loyal Clemson men and women to show their support for Clemson academics than through gifts to the Loyalty Fund. In this way you're saying you care about Clemson University and want to be counted among those willing to help in its future.

We hope you enjoy today's action. Just as we all hope the Tigers can prevail today, we have an even stronger desire to see Clemson University shine as one of the nation's best centers for learning.

Support the Loyalty Fund. It makes Clemson work!!

If you're in the textile or paper industry, Chemsize can help your business. An integral part of the manufacturing process in the textile and paper industry is chemicals and Chemsize manufactures and supplies this important ingredient. And all this is based on another key word: PERFORMANCE. Performance is what counts and Chemsize products perform. Because of our success in helping textile and paper plants solve problems, Chemsize has become one of the fastest growing specialty chemical companies in the Southeast. In addition to supplying chemicals to manufacturers, Chemsize makes products to the customer's specifications. So, if you're in the textile or paper industry, remember these two words. Chemsize and performance.

The Clemson University Athletic Department provides the following for your safety and emergency medical needs:

1. Advanced cardiac life-support stations in four locations. (North stands, Upper North deck, South stands, Upper South deck.) These units are staffed with skill-care nurses, physicians, cardiologists, internists, paramedics, and EMTs.

2. Mobile units of EMTs and paramedics are strategically located throughout the entire stadium.

3. Ambulances with life-support equipment are available in North stand and South stand areas and have prearranged routes for evacuation to local hospitals. Learn to recognize these personnel and facilities. Announcements will inform you of special hazards — heat, bees, etc.

WHAT TO DO IF EMERGENCIES ARISE

Please step back and give the organized stadium EMS personnel room to work. Well-intentioned attempts to help by untrained persons interferes with the efficiency of the EMS system. If you have basic or advanced training in specific life-support methods, make your qualifications known and offer your help. Untrained personnel can be frequently more harmful than helpful.

MEDICAL ADVICE FOR FANS

If you have a pre-existing medical or health problem, please check with your personal physician and obtain his advice before attending games. Many emergencies occurring at the stadium do so because of prior existing conditions. Use common sense in dressing, eating, drinking and in physical exertion. Be certain if you have any pre-existing medical conditions that you have identification on you as to the diagnosis and what medications you are currently taking.

Be aware of early warning signs of heart attacks: chest pain, chest tightness, shortness of breath, sweating, palpitations, fainting, nausea and vomiting.

Recognize that our most common serious medical problem at football games are heart attacks and allergic reactions to insect stings. Be aware that insect stings will continue to always be very frequent at outdoor sporting events and should always be treated with immediate ice until advice can be obtained. If you have ever had a reaction to bee or other insect sting, check with your personal physician as to whether you should carry a kit.

SUBARU. OFFICIAL U.S. SPORTS CAR.

Subaru has been helping America handle a lot of rough roads, including the ones that lead to championships.

In 1976, as The Official Car of The U.S. Ski Team, Subaru first supported this team whose members have since won World Cup titles in 1981, 1982 and 1983.

So whether you’re headed downhill or uphill, Subaru would like to help you get there. And that’s official.

TEAM UP
with Coors & Coors Light
By Jill Mixon

Of all the colorful sidelights to Tiger football—running down the Hill, pep rallies, Tigerama—the antics of that sideline showman, the Tiger, stand out. It has been nearly 30 years since the human Tiger first made his appearance in Death Valley and many Tiger stories get better each time they are retold.

The Tiger’s tail is a much-sought-after prize at away games, as frequent attempts to claim the trophy have resulted in fights between the student bodies of the opposing schools. Tigers have been seen on goal posts, riding motorcycles, marching in visiting schools’ bands, kissing homecoming queens, and generally getting into all kinds of mischief. But, the Tiger tradition that has gained the most attention is the pushups.

Tiger mascot Zack Mills started a new tradition in the fall of 1978 by doing pushups for every point Clemson scored. This doesn’t appear to be so difficult at first glance, but the pushups are done cumulatively. That is, when the gridiron Tigers scored to bring their point total to 17, the mascot Tiger would also do 17 pushups. When the team scored to bring the total to 24, the Tiger would do 24 more pushups, not just seven more. During the 1978 season, Mills established four Tiger pushup records, including the NCAA single season mark of 1,334 pushups in 12 games.

Mills served as the Tiger for two seasons, and in 1980, he turned the stripes of the suit over to Ricky Capps. The rookie Tiger could only manage 600 pushups, as the football Tigers of 1980 were not the scoring machine they had been the two previous years.

In 1981, things picked up, as the on-field Tigers lit up scoreboard s to the tune of 338 points in 12 games. Due to the efforts of the National Champions, Capps continued his senior season with 1,155 pushups, which nearly doubled his 1980 output, and ended his career with 1,755 pushups.

Capps will also be remembered for the setting of the individual game pushup record. On Halloween Day 1981, Clemson scored 52 points against Wake Forest on the way to setting 11 Clemson records and tying three others, setting four conference records and three stadium records. While the team was running up and down the field, Capps was pumping off a total of 465 pushups, a pushup total that may not be broken.

The mascot from Wake Forest showed how spirited he was when Clemson scored its 76th point. Capps was near the point of exhaustion when the Deacon came to the aid of his fellow mascot. The Deacon did the 76 pushups for the Tiger, as the fans counted the total. Clemson scored again to make their point total 82, and Capps, now sufficiently rested, was able to complete the 82 pushups. Capps was recognized by Tiger Band at the 1982 Orange Bowl, as he was allowed to dot the “i” in Tigers, an honor usually reserved for dignitaries and other big wigs.

Capps made the symbolic passing of the head to Randy Faile for the 1982 season, and Faile proceeded to bring further honor to the Clemson Tiger as he was named National Universal Cheerleader Association Mascot-of-the-Year at the national championships in Dallas, TX. Faile, a native of Aiken, SC, also was the first Tiger to perform overseas, as he worked off 72 pushups in the Mirage Bowl in Japan. Faile will be among the returning lettermen this fall, looking to add to his career total of 954 pushups in his senior season.

While it appears that the man inside makes the Tiger what he is, the suit is also a story in itself. The head weighs in at about 20 pounds, while the suit tips the scale at 45 pounds. The stripes are lined and quilted, which makes for a lot of weight loss to the Tiger’s soul during a ball game. Mills, Capps, and Faile all report shedding up to 12 pounds in a single game, and to keep the suit from smelling like the inside of an old sweatsock, it must be cleaned three times a football season.

The legend of the Clemson Tiger continues to grow, and the question, “Who is that masked man?” will be heard more and more frequently in the coming years.

THE WHOPPER: DELICIOUS ALL WAYS.

We start with sizzling hot flame-broiled beef. We add fresh tomato, crispy lettuce, crunchy onion—and other tasty fixin's. And then we serve it just the way you want it.

AREN'T YOU HUNGRY?

Let the trumpets blare and the fanfare begin as the Clemson University Marching Band takes the field for its first appearance of the 1983 gridiron season. The 260-member group, under the direction of Dr. Bruce Cook and Assistant Director of Bands Richard Goodstein, will enter Frank Howard Field to "Sock It To Em" and continue the program by spelling out T-I-G-E-R-S to the tune of "Tiger Rag."

Special guest, Miss Eleanor Fike, will have the honor of dotting the "i." Miss Fike, a resident of Atlanta, is the daughter of Dr. Rupert Fike, the founder of IPTAY. On July 1, 1983, IPTAY began its 50th year of service to Clemson University. From a modest beginning as a secret organization, IPTAY has grown into one of the largest athletic scholarship fundraising groups in America.

Pregame activities continue with the presentation of the colors as the Clemson University Chorus joins the Tiger Band in "America the Beautiful," "The Star Spangled Banner," and the alma mater. Tiger Band concludes the pregame show to a reprise of "Sock It To Em," and "Tiger Rag" in anticipation of the kickoff to start the 88th season of football at Clemson.

Tiger Band would like to pay tribute to Assistant Director of Bands and Instructor of Music at Clemson, Richard E. Goodstein. He came to Clemson in 1982 from Arizona State University, where he served as graduate assistant of bands. He has taught music at the elementary, junior high, senior high, and collegiate level, and has also been an active marching and concert band adjudicator and clinician. In 1975, Goodstein received a Bachelor of Music Degree from Miami (Ohio) University. He is currently finishing a Ph.D. in music education and conducting from Arizona State, where he also received a Master of Music degree. His responsibilities at Clemson include charting shows and supervising the basketball pep band and jazz ensemble.

The Western Carolina University Marching Band, under the direction of Joseph R. Scagnoli, will open the halftime show. Then Tiger Band takes over as it salutes the completion of the new upper deck with a fanfare, "Theme of Seahawk." from the motion picture picture of the same title. It continues the show with "Moorside March" by a renowned British composer, Gustav Holst. It was arranged for marching bands by Jay Bocook, the Director of Bands at Furman.

Tiger Band then begins its salute to IPTAY as it presents the "Theme from Patton." The band will then go into a few rounds of "Happy Birthday," as it joins almost 80,000 fans in recognizing IPTAY's 50 years of service to Clemson. The University Trustees will then present a resolution to the Board of Directors of IPTAY that honors their achievements.

The Tiger Band will then exit the field to the song that shakes the Southland — "Tiger Rag," as everyone prepares to start the second half of action.

It is difficult to single out individuals when talking about 50 years of a successful organization like IPTAY, but three men who have served as the executive secretaries since 1950 have had as much to do with the organization's success as anyone. Gene Willimon, George Bennett and Joe Turner have served in this important position and have raised over 20 million dollars since we started the second half of this decade. All have the basic natural self-motivation and love for Clemson needed to direct IPTAY to previously unreachable heights.

Gene Willimon served Clemson for 27 years as executive secretary beginning in 1950. The 1933 Clemson graduate played football at the university under Jess Neely and was a loyal worker for IPTAY after his graduation.

"One of the things I remember most from those early days was the enthusiasm that Dr. Fike had for Clemson athletics," Willimon said recently. "He lived way down in Moultrie, GA and he'd drive all the way to Clemson for meetings and drive back the same night."

Willimon had the same drive and was a key to reorganization of IPTAY as it continued to grow. His ability to change as IPTAY grew was a key to the organization's success.

George Bennett was a former Clemson cheerleader who served in the capacity as executive secretary of IPTAY for only two years, but was significantly involved in the organization for eight years.

The 1955 Clemson graduate was instrumental in enlarging and planning the organization of Clemson IPTAY clubs around the state. In the two years he was in charge of the organization IPTAY reached the two million dollar mark for the first time ever.

Joe Turner is now in his fifth full year as executive secretary and the contribution level has continued to escalate at record proportions under his direction. IPTAY now raises over 5 million dollars a year and has over 19,000 members, national highs in annual giving and membership. He has been in part responsible for involving IPTAY in many other worthwhile endeavors on the Clemson campus. Under his direction IPTAY now provides lights for Riggs Field, funds for the master transportation system, computer learning aids for the Department of Education, travel funds for the Tiger Band, and provided the seed grant for the Fine Arts Center.

Dr. Robert C. Edwards, a president at Clemson for over two decades, viewed athletics and IPTAY as a vital segment of campus life, and summarized IPTAY's important contribution to life at Clemson.

"Athletic teams in all sports, both intercollegiate and intramural are an essential and integral part of Clemson's total education program. Clemson University has developed a national reputation in all competitions. The support of Clemson athletics year after year by IPTAY members has made this achievement possible."
The Clemson Sports Information Office is conducting a fan poll to select the All-Time Clemson Football Team. Listed are those football players who have been selected to all-star squads such as All-South, All-Atlantic Coast Conference, All-American, or those who made significant contributions to the Clemson team. This list is solely for information purposes only, as you may vote for any player who has ever played or is currently playing for the Tigers. Use the ballot below to vote for your All-Time team.

Ballots must be postmarked by October 20, and the results will be published in the Maryland program on November 12. Mail your ballots to:
