5 Dan Pearman

It takes a lot of intestinal fortitude to survive as a walk-on at a major college football team. Clemson's starting tight end Dan Pearman has earned a scholarship for his senior year and his ability to hang in is paying off. Just check a recent Sports Illustrated. Annabelle Vaughan profiles this unique Tiger.

7 Bill D'Andrea

A decade ago Bill D'Andrea was an undeclared senior at Virginia. After some moving around he has found a home at Clemson and the Tigers' outstanding performance in the offensive line is a reflection of his hard work. Annabelle Vaughan reviews his career.

52 Perry Tuttle

While most of the former Tigers in pro football are enjoying a relaxing fall, one is north of the border making an impact on Canadian football. Perry Tuttle, Clemson's all-time leading receiver, went through some rough times a couple of years ago, but life in the CFL agrees with him just fine, as Tim Bourret explains.

57 Clemson Spirit

Tiger spirit is legendary and you will see it in full force today for Homecoming festivities. Turn to this centerfold to find out what a Clemson football weekend is all about.

69 Mitzi Kremer

Clemson made incredible strides in women's swimming last year as Bob Boettner's Tigers finished in the top five in the nation. The major reason for this substantial improvement was the performance of Mitzi Kremer, Clemson's first National Champion in the sport. Willie Shearer takes us back to her dream season.

71 Immaculate Grounds

Have you noticed the improvement in the Clemson playing field this year. That colorful field is the result of year long work by Ronnie Oliver and his company. The Clemson graduate takes a lot of pride in his work, as Forrest White explains.

81 This Day in Tiger Football

There have been many important victories on this date in Tiger history, including one over Virginia during the National Championship season. Foster Senn writes about some interesting games on this date.

87 Brian Page

Clemson's number-one tennis player was not satisfied with his junior season so he made some lofty goals for himself in the past summer. The result was a US Amateur singles championship, a first for a Clemson tennis player. Willie Shearer reflects on Brian Page's summer and his future.

116 Outfitting the Tigers

It is not easy to dress over 100 Tigers for a football game. A lot of time and money goes into preparing the Clemson football team for practice and game day, as Annabelle Vaughan discusses.

Today’s Game

McFadden-Allen Off to Good Start

The big question about the Clemson offense heading into the 1987 season was the tailback position. Who would replace Terrence Flagler and Kenny Flowers, the best one-two punch at tailback in Clemson history. Danny Ford has found two capable replacements in Wesley McFadden and Terry Allen, two players who had never carried the ball in a regular season game prior to this year.

All the duo has done is rack up 758 yards in the first four games, more than any other combination under Danny Ford for the first four games of the season. They have combined for six touchdowns in four games and only the combination of Cliff Austin and Chuck McSwain in 1982 had more touchdowns at this stage of the season. Here is a four-game comparison of tailback combinations after four games under Danny Ford.

Clemson Return Service

The 1,000th return proved to be golden. That is how many kick returns it had been since Don Kelley brought a punt back 85 yards for a touchdown at Maryland in 1970 until the first quarter of the Georgia Tech game two weeks ago. Clemson had gone 999 kickoff and punt returns since Kelley’s score without registering another touchdown. Then, incredible as it may seem, Donnell Woolford scored on the 1,000th return since Kelley’s runback 17 years ago. The runback in the Georgia Tech game two weeks ago sent sportswriters to the record books.

The dry spell in both kickoff and punt returns was so long that you almost had to figure that some sports oddity would take place when Clemson finally scored on either play. And, it did, as the Tigers scored both on a kickoff return and a punt return in the same game for the first time in over 90 years of Clemson football.

The kickoff return streak went all the way back to 1962 when Hal Davis ran one back 96 yards for a score against Georgia. Then, 843 kickoff returns later, sophomore Joe Henderson went 95 yards for a touchdown, a first in 25 years of Clemson football. The punt return streak ended by Woolford stretched back 17 years and 450 consecutive punt returns.

Clemson is in the top five in the nation in punt returns and kickoff returns, a first in Clemson history at any time in a season. Donnell Woolford and James Lott are both in the top 10 in the country in punt returns and Joe Henderson is in the top five in kickoff returns.

The Tigers’ punt return total of 421 yards is already the most by a Clemson team over the course of a season since 1961, and it already ranks as the ninth best season total in Clemson history. And, that has been done after just four games. The record for a single season is 634 yards set by the 1948 team, one of just two undefeated teams at Clemson since the modern era of college football began in 1937.

Perry Could Set Sack Record Today

Michael Dean Perry needs just 1.5 sacks to break his brother William’s ACC career sack record. The youngest of the Perry family has 24 for his career, including an ACC high six so far in just four games. Michael Dean is all alone in second place, meaning the brother act currently ranks one-two in ACC history.

Perry, who was called the best defensive lineman in the nation by Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Ross two weeks ago, is also all alone in third place in ACC history in tackles for loss. He currently has 47 and is still 13 away from “The Refrigerator’s” ACC mark of 60.

ACC Career Sack Leaders

1. William Perry, MG Clemson 1981-84 25
2. Michael Dean Perry, DT Clemson 1984-87 24
3. Mike Corvino, DT Maryland 1979-82 23
6. Lawrence Taylor, DE UNC 1977-80 21
7. William Fuller, DT UNC 1980-83 20
8. Mark Duda, DT Maryland 1979-82 19

Treadwell Moves Up Quickly

David Treadwell, the nation’s leading field goal kicker with an average of 3.0 per game, is rapidly moving up the Clemson career scoring charts. The native of Jacksonville, FL currently has 191 career points and needs just nine more today to become the third player in Clemson history to score at least 200 points. The all-time leader is Obed Ariki with 286, an ACC record, and Bob Pauling is second with 209. Barring injury, Treadwell should finish his career second in career scoring and field goals at Clemson. He is already all alone in second place in career field goals with 41.

Cooper Off to Productive Start

Sophomore wide receiver Gary Cooper has already exceeded the pass receiving yardage total Ray Williams had last year when he led the Tigers in that category. Cooper, who has already had a pair of 100-yard receiving games, has 284 yards in just four games, four more than Williams had all of last season. Against Georgia Tech, Cooper caught a 52-yard Rodney Williams pass for a touchdown to break the game open. It was the longest Clemson pass completion since Terrance Roulhac caught a 57-yard scoring pass from Stacey Driver at North Carolina in 1985.

Cooper had four catches for 107 yards in the Georgia Tech game and a career high five receptions for 122 yards against Western Carolina. Two notes of interest on Cooper: he has had three receptions of exactly 41 yards this season, and all 16 of his career receptions have been in Death Valley.

Virginia Update

A Virginia team with more outstanding skill position players than any Car team in recent years enters Death Valley this afternoon. Virginia returns 17 starters from last year’s team that lost to the Tigers, 31-17.

Virginia has as wide open an offense as anyone in the ACC, and a sound defense as shown by a healthy romp of previously unbeaten Duke on September 26 and a shutout of VMi last Saturday. Scott Secules is off to a great start and is ranked in the top 10 in the nation in total offense and passing efficiency. He has completed nearly 60 percent of his passes and has thrown for five touchdown passes, all to talented wide receiver John Ford.

Ford was the ACC Rookie of the Year in 1984 and is as good a deep threat as there is in the ACC. He had two TD passes at Georgia in the season opener, and had two TD receptions from Secules against Clemson last year. By the way, Secules completed 30 passes against Clemson last season, the third most ever by a Clemson opponent.

That means the Clemson secondary will have its greatest challenge of the season. Donnell Woolford and James Lott have collectively allowed just one pass completion to the man they have covered this season so the cornerback-quarterback matchup when Virginia has the ball on offense should be the highlight of the game.

Defensively, watch for the name Scott, something Clemson fans in the early 1980s did at Clemson. Instead of watching for Clemson’s Jim Scott, it will be Virginia’s Sean Scott who will be in the spotlight. The brother of the former Clemson All-ACC player has been the Cavaliers’ top player on defense. He has averaged nearly seven tackles per game and leads the team in tackles for loss and sacks.

Don’t forget linebackers Jeff Lageman and David Griggs, however, as both have been in for over 90 tackles collectively. Kevin Cook was outstanding against Duke from his free safety slot with two interceptions.

Clemson Defense Off to Awesome Start

As you can see by the picture in this two-page spread, the Clemson defense has been nothing short of dominating. It reminds you of the 1981 team and their abandonment, blitzing style. There is a Perry holding up the line, a strong safety that is among the leading tacklers ... the comparisons go on.

The Tigers rank in the top 10 in the nation in total, rushing, passing and scoring defense, and the numbers are on a Clemson record-setting pace. For instance, opponents have averaged just 159.5 yards per game (the 1981 team allowed over 100 more yards per game), and the opposition yards per carry figure is just 1.8. Clemson’s third-ranked pass defense has yielded just 101.8 yards per game.

It has obviously been a team effort. Just think, after four games, no Clemson player has over 30 tackles, but there are 14 with more than 10, and 17 different players have recorded at least one tackle for loss. In the sack department, the Tigers have 17 so far this season, already near the total of 26 recorded by the entire team for all of 1986.

Clemson-Virginia Series

Virginia has never beaten Clemson in the sport of football, a fact we are sure the Cavalier team is well aware of. That does not mean there have not been close games. In fact Virginia has actually led at the half eight times and led going into the fourth quarter four times, including twice this decade, only to see Clemson comeback and win the game.

Just two years ago in Clemson Memorial Stadium, the Cavs held a 17-13 lead at the half and 24-20 going into the fourth period. But Clemson came back to score late and the defense shut out the Cavs in the fourth period of a 27-24 contest.

Overall, Clemson has a 26-0 lead in this series that dates back to 1955. It is the longest active consecutive game winning streak by one team over another in Division I of the NCAA. Fourteen of the wins have come at Clemson and 12 have been in the state of Virginia.

Ford Could Move to Fifth

Keep an eye on the Brigham Young-Wyoming game today because it could have a bearing on Danny Ford’s ranking among winningest active coaches. Ford is now 70-23-4 at Clemson in nine years, a .742 winning percentage. Brigham Young coach LaVell Edwards is 139-47-1 for a .744 figure. But, if Ford wins today and Edwards loses, Ford will move ahead of him into fifth place on the winningest active coaches list. Barry Switzer of Oklahoma leads the list with a .845 percentage.

The Official Hot Dogs of CLEMSON TIGERS
by Annabelle Vaughan

To: David Smith
University of Alabama

Dear Dave —

I just wanted to write and tell you congratulations. I think it’s great that a former walk-on is now Alabama’s starting quarterback.

I’m also impressed that you’re doing something similar to me. You’re doing something similar to me.

Most people probably don’t realize how hard you’ve had to come to get to where you are today. I know how it feels when all the other players are getting recruited in high school and you don’t get any attention. I know how it feels to go out and bust your head every day and feel like nobody even notices.

You see, I am also a former walk-on. Now, I’m Clemson’s starting tight end. I guess for us, it was worth all the hard work.

So congratulations for not giving up, and on all you’ve accomplished.

Sincerely,

Dan Pearman

Today, when the Crimson Tide takes on Memphis State, few will be rooting harder for David Smith than Dan Pearman. Pearman knows firsthand how discouraging it is for a walk-on with a major college football team. He also knows how tough it is to overcome that discouragement and be a success.

It is difficult to imagine Dan Pearman being discouraged. He seems to have a permanent smile on his face and his blue eyes are always gleaming with some kind of mischief. His irrepressible humor will keep the rest of the team laughing. It also keeps them humble.

“He’s always joking around about something,” said Jerome Williams, whose early season knee injury gave Pearman a chance to start. “Whenever you see Pearman, whoever he is with, he is laughing. He also works harder than almost anybody on the team, he’s had to.”

In high school, Dan Pearman loved football. He lettered in football and baseball and helped lead both teams to conference championships. One of his teammates was the highly recruited Mark Maye, now the starting quarterback for North Carolina.

But when his senior year rolled around, there were few opportunities for Pearman to play college ball, something that would have been a big disappointment to many young men. Not Pearman.

“1 didn’t hit a growth spurt until my senior year in high school,” said Pearman. “That was one reason I wasn’t heavily recruited. But that’s the way the Good Lord planned it. I had to learn to roll with the punches.

When it came time to choose which college to attend, Pearman decided to choose a school where he would receive a solid education, even though he hoped to be able to make it as a walk-on. “My father helped me realize that whether I made a team or not, I had no realistic shot at the NFL after four years. He told me to choose a school where, if football didn’t pan out, I would be happy going to games on Saturday as a regular student. After all, if you’re unhappy, you won’t be successful at anything.”

Pearman chose Clemson. Here, he has found happiness and success, although the success came a little harder. “Clemson has my kind of people,” Pearman said in his heavy southern drawl. “It’s a laid back and relaxed type atmosphere here.”

After realizing he had made the right decision, Pearman decided to give football a shot, so he talked to Coach Ford about it. Ford remembers it well. “When Danny first got here,” Ford said, “he had more than a long way to come. He was bright-eyed and bushy-tailed and a good student, but he was not a great athlete or football player.”

Pearman was well aware of his shortcomings, but remained undaunted. He red-shirted a year and then began a long career playing special teams.

“I used to sit around with the other guys on the team and we would complain about how tough practice was. I would think, ‘Golly, bum, I must be an imbecile! I’m paying to go out there and bust heads every day! I must be sick!’

And then, whenever someone found out I played football at Clemson, they would ask, ‘Are you on scholarship?’ When they found out I wasn’t, they automatically thought I wasn’t any good. That may be the case in a lot of situations. Heck, it may have been the case in my situation, but I kept on playing.

Even though it was an uphill battle all the way, Pearman was determined not to quit. “I made my mind up that once I started something, I would never quit. I don’t think I’ve ever quit anything my life. I’m scared to quit. If I had quit football, the next thing, I would have quit school. If you quit once, the next time is going to be easier. I don’t want to ever quit that first time.”

After three years of that uphill battle, Pearman has finally reached the top. Last summer, he was placed on full scholarship. This year, when starting tight end Jerome Williams went down with a knee injury, Pearman stepped into the starting slot.

“It was great to tell my parents they didn’t have to pay for my school anymore,” Pearman said. “It would have been great to have been highly recruited and to have been on scholarship for four years, but I’m glad I went through it this way. I had to work hard for so long, I can’t quit now.”

As for his starting role, Pearman has mixed emotions. “I hate hell that Jerome got hurt,” he said. “I would much rather play back-up all season, and have him healthy. Either way, I’m going to play just as hard.”

Coach Ford describes Pearman as his “best team leader.” Pearman takes this role very seriously. “I think it is important to make the younger guys feel like they are part of the team so I try to include them. Our team is a close group on and off the field this year. That will end up being an important factor in how well we do.”

Winning a scholarship and a starting role has been a self-described dream come true for Pearman. But would he recommend it for other high school athletes?

“No way,” Pearman said. “Playing football is tough enough on scholarship, but to fight the odds, scrap around, get a scholarship and get to start ... it doesn’t take a strong person, it takes a darned fool!”

“It’s a tough row to hoe. I guess I just don’t want anybody else to go through the pain and the worry. But if someone is determined to try it, I would tell them never to quit.”

With Pearman’s success has come instant recognition and publicity. When number 89 takes the field, fans know who it is. Newspapers have picked up on the Cinderella story of the former walk-on. His picture was even in Sports Illustrated, but Dan Pearman remains unchanged.

“Hell, I don’t have God-given speed or looks and I’m not graceful. But I thank the good Lord for what I do have. My strength is determination. Come hell or high water, I’m going to get the job done.

“I might not have the ability, but I want to be known as someone who goes all out the whole game. I might not beat my opponent on every play, but it’s going to be a dogfight. I owe it to the coaches, to the team and to myself to play every down like it’s my last. The articles, the pictures and all that other stuff is fun, but it’s not football. And it’s football that I fought so hard for.”

By Annabelle Vaughan

If you saw Bill D’Andrea on the practice field with the offensive tackles, you might think he was one of them. He certainly has the physique and he doesn’t look much older than an average lineman. In fact, the only thing that gives him away is the whistle around his neck and the coaching shorts. Bill D’Andrea is an assistant coach for the Tigers and even though he may not be one of the players, he has a special understanding of the many problems and difficulties facing his athletes.

D’Andrea is now in his second season as a full-time assistant coach at Clemson. His primary task is to work with offensive line coach Larry Van Der Heyden by coaching the offensive tackles and to recruit the states of North Carolina, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Working with Coach Van Der Heyden is nothing new to D’Andrea, as he also played under him for three years at Indiana State University. After graduating, he went to East Carolina where he received a master’s degree. He has also had coaching stints at Virginia, Massanutten Military Academy, Catawba College and Southern Mississippi.

After this variety of jobs, D’Andrea decided he was ready to begin coaching in a higher division, so he went to his old coach who was now at Clemson. Van Der Heyden suggested he talk to Danny Ford, who was very encouraging, but had little to offer D’Andrea except as a graduate assistant coach.

D’Andrea decided to take the job in 1983, and with it he took one of the most time consuming, yet rewarding jobs he has ever had. He was also put in charge of the athletic dormitory, a task that was a 24-hour a day assignment. He lived in the dorm with the players and was the person they came to whenever they needed to borrow a stamp or had a serious family problem.

“I felt a strong sense of responsibility for a lot of people,” D’Andrea said. “I had to make myself available and always be an example. When you’re under constant scrutiny, you really have to sacrifice your privacy.”

D’Andrea saw all the ins and outs of the athletes’ lives. He knew when they were going home and when they would be back. He knew who had been out late, and who hung out with the wrong people. He knew what players didn’t get along with each other.

“It wasn’t a matter of being so vigilant that I saw all of these things,” said D’Andrea, “but just being there I saw everything. I was pretty tough on them. I just wanted to make sure I ran it fairly for everybody.”

After two years as dorm supervisor and graduate assistant coach, D’Andrea went to Southern Mississippi for a two-year stint as offensive line coach. In 1986 a full-time position opened at Clemson and D’Andrea returned to work side by side with the man he had once played for. And although he was glad to be finished with his duties as dorm supervisor, he credits the job with helping him gain the insight needed to be a football coach.

“Looking back, I think it’s one of the most important jobs in the football program. Being that close to the kids makes you realize a lot of personal things about them. I can relate better to them. Now I’m aware that there are other things that are important in their lives besides what happens on the football field.”

Now D’Andrea is concentrating on the offensive tackles he coaches. With Van Der Heyden, he coaches one of the top offensive lines in the nation. This is no mean accomplishment, but D’Andrea refuses to take much of the credit.

“I consider Larry Van Der Heyden as the offensive line coach,” he said. “I try to let him handle whatever he wants to handle and we try to focus things together as a group. We’re a unit and we have to work as a unit. My relationship with Larry helps in that respect.

“I don’t think I could ever be a Larry Van Der Heyden, but he has had a tremendous influence on me. I want to pick out good qualities from all of the coaches I have worked with and make them part of myself.

“We also have a tremendous group of youngsters on the offensive line. They are the kind of kids that you would want working for you if you were a businessman. With the coaches and players I work with, it’s going to be hard not to be successful.”

Learning to relate to his athletes is one of the most valuable things Bill D’Andrea has developed since becoming a coach. His special understanding of their daily lives takes away some of the distance that may usually be present between the players and the man with the coaching shorts and the whistle.

Coach Bill D’Andrea works with the offensive lineman in all phases during pregame drills.

Teaching: Still Number One

The more things change, the more they stay the same. At Clemson there are some things that (we hope) will never change: Clemson orange, Tillman Hall, Tigerama.

And one more very important thing. No matter how much the university grows, teaching will remain its most important role.

As a land grant institution, Clemson emphasizes the three areas of research, public service and teaching. On the brink of the 21st century, research efforts are unquestionably important. And public service programs serve all the citizens of South Carolina. But, over and above these missions, when a student enters Clemson, he or she should be able to count on receiving an excellent education. And great teaching doesn’t happen without great teachers.

Every former Clemson student probably recalls a teacher whose personal style and commitment added a special dimension to the word “education.” Maybe it was John Lane in English, Doug Bradbury in engineering, or one of the many others who are remembered with affection and appreciation. Their legacies remain long after graduation.

Administration and faculty are committed to the challenge of attracting and keeping outstanding teachers. In addition to the Master Teacher award and alumni professorships, the Faculty Senate last year recommended annual awards of $3,000 to outstanding faculty in each college to enhance scholarly activity related to teaching.

Not all great teaching occurs in the classroom. The awards for excellence in student journalism won by the Tiger staff, national and regional recognition for the Clemson Players, and a nationwide “widget” competition won by Clemson electrical and computer engineering students illustrate the value of learning environments outside the traditional lecture hall.

The College of Architecture tried a new approach to teaching this past spring. During “Spring Week,” students and faculty pursued independent study outside their usual areas. “Designer” birdhouses, hot-air ballooning and construction of an authentic Plains Indian tepee (with the assistance of a Comanche chief’s descendants) were just a few of the projects. According to Dean James F. Barker, this was more than fun-and-games. “The goal was to give students and faculty a new perspective, to look at the education process and concentrate on learning to think rather than simply learning facts,” he said.

Last year when the Carnegie Foundation’s Report on the Status of Undergraduate Education found a nationwide lack of balance between teaching and research, Clemson reacted promptly. The Faculty Senate and the Office of the Vice Provost for Undergraduate Studies formed committees to review Clemson’s status in each area addressed by the report, including teaching, and a day-long faculty workshop explored the teaching/research balance specifically.

President Lennon made it clear when he announced the Second Century program. “Clemson has a long and proud tradition of undergraduate education,” he said, “of preparing young people for the world in which they will live and work. This commitment to teaching is basic, firm and unshakable.”

On September 6, 1986, Clemson University formally inaugurated Dr. Max Lennon as the university’s seventh president. The governor of South Carolina, the Honorable Richard W. Riley, spoke of a “quest for academic excellence which has never been more important than today,” at the inauguration. He called Dr. Lennon, “the leader for the future of all South Carolina.”

During his short time as president, Dr. Lennon has accomplished much, including the school’s “Second Century Plan.” This project, drawn up with help from faculty and state business leaders, emphasized research in agriculture, engineering, basic science, marketing, management, textiles and the quality of life; all these areas and several more were just a portion of a proposal to endure economic growth within the state.

It is the by-product of Lennon’s overall attitude that Clemson is here to help its students to become successful and in general make the state a better place to live.

Dr. Lennon is a native of Columbus County, NC and earned his bachelor’s degree in animal science from N.C. State in 1962. He also earned a doctorate in animal science from the same institution in 1970.

He had been at Ohio State for two years prior to his move to Clemson. He served as executive dean for agriculture, home economics and natural resources. Lennon was also on the Ohio State Faculty Senate and was co-chairman of the Governor’s commission on agriculture.

Previously, he had served as dean of the college of Agriculture and director of the Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of Missouri and as associate dean and director of research in the College of Agricultural Sciences at Texas Tech University.

Lennon, who has also served as an assistant professor at Texas Tech and Missouri, spent two years with the International Agri-business firm Central Soya of Illinois. He also has participated in many national and international conferences concerning new technologies in agriculture.

The 46-year-old Lennon was chosen from about 200 candidates for the presidency at Clemson.

Lennon commented on his philosophies and goals for Clemson in his opening press conference. “I am extremely delighted to be chosen as the leader of this great institution. We’re at an extremely important time in our lives, not because of circumstances but because of where we are in history. We need land-grant institutions in a way that is almost unique ... so we can continue to be competitive in a world market.

“We at Clemson University must make our own priorities to lead us into the 21st century. We must begin by making ourselves visible in the state, then we must focus on the global perspective of the university and what we can accomplish in that arena.”

Board of Trustees President Louis P. Balson declared that the long selection process had discovered a man who knows what he wants. “Max Lennon is a good planner, a deep thinker, and a man ready for the challenge. He is restless without being impatient.”

Lennon said the early part of his administration will consist of familiarizing himself more closely with Clemson’s programs. “It would be presumptuous of me to come in here with a set of priorities,” he said. “In the academic community you build on the strengths of the institution, and my first business has been learning about those strengths. I’ll be calling for help from the students, faculty, administrators, alumni and the rest of the Clemson family to make sure our priorities are in order.”

Lennon is active in many councils and commissions, including the American Society for the Advancement of Science; the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges and the National Dropout Prevention Fund.

Lennon began his teaching career at N.C. State in 1966 when he served as a graduate assistant professor. In 1970 he moved to Lubbock, TX, where he served as an assistant professor of animal science at Texas Tech University. He remained at the Texas institution as an assistant dean and associate dean in the College of Agriculture until 1980. On the first day of this decade he became the chairperson in the department of animal husbandry at the University of Missouri. He served as Dean of the College of Agriculture at Missouri until 1983, when he moved to Ohio State as vice president for agricultural administration.

Lennon is married to Ruth Carter Lennon and they have two children, Daniel Ray (24) and Robin (22).
As a South Carolina company, we're always a little surprised when people here don't know who we are or, perhaps, what we do. Maybe we've just been too quiet. At the risk of bragging, we'd like to point out that Chem-Nuclear is important to our state.

We provide a service that protects the health and safety of South Carolinians. Our facility in Barnwell County allows hospitals, research facilities, and electric utilities to use nuclear materials without damaging our environment.

All those organizations do vital work—but in doing so they produce wastes with low levels of radioactivity. Chem-Nuclear disposes of those wastes so that they will never create a hazard. In fact, we are so careful and our work is monitored so stringently that the air, water, and land around our facility have no more radioactivity than your own back yard.

When you use electricity, take medication, receive one of several lifesaving, high-tech medical treatments, or even read a newspaper, you benefit from a process that produces low level radioactive waste. Chem-Nuclear exists only to dispose of the waste created by our modern way of life. We're good guys.

A successful athletic program is usually the result of many factors, the most important being a well qualified leader heading up the entire program. At Clemson, continued success in all facets of athletics is evidence of the quality of leadership that has been found over the past few years under Athletic Director Bobby Robinson.

Last year was Robinson’s most successful since taking over at the helm in March of 1985. In fact, it was one of the most successful years in the history of Clemson athletics.

Both major revenue sports, football and men’s basketball were involved in post-season play in 1986-87, as were baseball and 12 other teams. In other words, out of 18 sports offered at Clemson, 15 were involved in some sort of post-season play.

In football, the Tigers finished the season ranked 17th in the AP poll and took a trip to Jacksonville, FL, where they defeated Stanford in the Gator Bowl.

The 1986-87 basketball squad became the most successful in school history as they finished the season ranked 13th and advanced to the NCAA’s for just the second time in the school’s history.

The Clemson baseball team ended its season with a number-10 ranking and also traveled to the NCAA baseball tournament. The golf and tennis teams also received bids to the NCAA’s, making Clemson one of just five schools to have these three spring teams participating in NCAA post-season play.

The success of the three major sports (football, basketball, and baseball) made Clemson one of only two universities (UCLA was the other) to have all three ranked in the top 20 in the final polls.

Robinson’s continued success is a result of his great commitment to being the best — in competition, in academics and in facilities. Last season is evidence of the program moving towards the best in competition, but Clemson athletics is also taking strides towards being the best in the two other areas.

In academics, Clemson student-athletes had an outstanding year. Over 65 athletes had 3.0 or better grade point ratios either semester, with the football team having three players named to the Academic All-ACC team. Six students were named to various academic All-America teams, the most ever for one season.

In the area of facilities, Robinson has also enjoyed success. Renovations over the past few years have included the Strength Training Center, one of the finest in the country; Tiger Field, home of the Clemson baseball team; and the West End Zone locker room complex in Memorial Stadium. New facilities include a new activities room in Death Valley, an indoor tennis facility, and new permanent soccer stadium on Riggs Field. In addition to all of this, a continuing maintenance program for all facilities and practice areas has been established.

From a university perspective, Robinson envisions the athletic department as being one of 49 departments on campus, equal to English, accounting, and the others. “We believe the athletic department is a viable, important part of the mission of Clemson University,” says Robinson, “as athletic competition provides a common bond for students, faculty, staff, and friends.”

Under Robinson, the athletic department has continued support of the university. Band uniforms and travel, the educational enhancement fund (coordinated with the Athletic Council) are some of the areas that have been developed.

Robinson was born in Columbia, SC and attended A.C. Flora High School. During his high school career, he was a point-guard for the basketball team and a third baseman in baseball. He also played golf competitively, and was a scratch golfer at one time. Robinson did not play any high school sports as a senior because of a heat stroke suffered in the summer of 1963. He graduated from A.C. Flora in 1964 and then enrolled in Furman University.

Robinson was graduated from Furman with a B.S. degree in business and political science in 1968. He was the president of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity chapter at Furman. After he graduated from Furman, Robinson worked in his family’s laundry and dry-cleaning business for two years.

Robinson came to Clemson in 1970, not in athletics, but in the housing office. After three years, he moved across campus to serve as an administrative assistant in the athletic department. “I started at Clemson in the housing office, but I came to Clemson with the intention of working in athletics,” said Robinson. “No opening existed at the time, so I had to wait until there was one.”

After serving the athletic department in various capacities, he became business manager in 1975. Two years later he was named assistant athletic director and in 1980 he became associate AD. He held that title for four years, and his area of responsibility moved to primarily football and basketball.

While serving his administrative duties, Robinson found time to coach the Clemson golf team between 1975 and 1983. During his time as the head coach, Clemson won its first ACC title in golf and three times the Tigers participated in the NCAA tournament. In 1983, his final season as the head coach, he guided Clemson to a number-five finish. Clarence Rose was one of three All-Americans to play for the Tigers during his tenure and he is now a successful member of the pro tour.

With Robinson’s qualifications, it is easy to see why the Clemson athletic program enjoys continued success - he has done it all. He has been an administrator at all levels, he has worked in other areas in the university, he has been a head coach, and he has handled the budgetary aspects needed to run a $12 million program.

Robinson has confidence in his staff, his coaches, his athletes, and the facilities at Clemson University. “We have a solid base to work from, but if we are not moving forward, we are losing ground. We will work within university guidelines and expand our horizons. We want to be as good as we can as a vital part of the university and the state of South Carolina.”
Coach Danny Ford wants more than just a place to swim . . .

☐ A relaxing retreat from pressures of the day.
☐ An ever-ready setting for formal or casual entertaining.
☐ A family gathering place that eliminates the generation gap.
☐ A health benefiting experience.
☐ A lifetime home improvement and hedge against inflation.

Since 1956. The prestige pool builder in North and South Carolina.
One need only look at the history of the Gator Bowl to understand the degree of success Danny Ford has had in college football. He is the only man to serve as a head coach, assistant coach and a player in the history of that Florida-based bowl game, and he is one of the few head coaches to win there twice.

Overall he has had 19 winning regular seasons in his 20-year affiliation with the game, and his teams have won nearly 73 percent of the time. How has he done it? "When you go to a Clemson practice you sense almost a buddy-buddy relationship between the head coach and players," said CBS Commentator and former Notre Dame Head Coach Ara Parseghian during a recent broadcast. "He has the respect of his players and his players enjoy playing for him. He is a disciple of Bear Bryant."

Communication with his players past and present has always been a strength for Danny Ford. This past spring when the 1981 National Championship team was honored at Clemson over 50 of his former players from that team came back to campus. Certainly testimony to the camaraderie of that team, but also a testimony to Ford, who has built Clemson into one of the top programs in America over the last 10 seasons.

Probably the most significant accomplishment on Ford's resume is the 1981 National Championship. His youthful accomplishments compare favorably to Mozart in terms of reaching goals at an early age. A look at past national champions indicates that the current Clemson mentor is the youngest coach in the history of the college game to win the Associated Press National Championship.

Ford took Clemson to the national title in 1981 at the age of 33 and now is the winningest coach in the history of the Atlantic Coast Conference on a percentage basis. Additionally, Ford is already seventh in total wins among ACC coaches.

And, the success has come against top competition. Ford has already gained more wins over AP top 20 teams and top 10 teams than any other Clemson coach in history and is the only coach in ACC history (eight years experience) to have a winning record against top 20 teams (top 20 when playing against Clemson).

Clemson fans are certainly happy Ford entered the profession because he has brought a solid program to among the finest in the nation. Now in his ninth full season at Clemson, his record of 66-23-4 (.731) is the sixth best winning percentage in college football among active coaches. Additionally, Clemson has the 8th best winning percentage in the nation over the last 10 years.

Between 1981 and 1984 Clemson had a 37-6-2 ledger, the fourth best winning percentage in America. The class of '84 was the third winningest in ACC history in terms of winning percentage, and no ACC class in the 34-year history of the league ever won more games in a four-year period.

In 1978 he was offensive coordinator for the 11-1 team that won the Gator Bowl over Ohio State, 17-15. The Gadsden, AL native was more than just the offensive coordinator in that game, however, as he had become the head coach of the Tigers on December 10 after Charley Pell had already left to go to Florida. The 30-year-old Ford made quite a celebrated beginning to his head coaching career with that victory over the Woody Hayes-coached Buckeyes. The nationally televised Clemson victory helped put the Tigers on the national football map and it began Clemson's climb to among the elite of college football.

In 1979, Ford's first full season as a head coach, he proved the victory in the Gator Bowl was no fluke as he took a team that had lost six players to the pros to an 8-4 record and another bowl game. Included in the eight triumphs in 1979 were a win at Notre Dame and a triumph over Georgia on the way to a Peach Bowl confrontation with Baylor.

Two years later Ford became the youngest coach in the history of the game to win the National Championship. Ford surprised the college football world by taking the unranked Tigers to three wins over top 10 teams and a perfect 12-0 record. Clemson handed Herschel Walker the only regular-season loss of his Georgia career, downed North Carolina in Chapel Hill in the only showdown of top 10 teams in ACC history, then defeated former National Champion Nebraska in the Orange Bowl.

That obviously is the highmark of Ford's brief, but eventful career at Clemson as he was named national Coach-of-the-Year byUPI, the College Football Writers of America, the Walter Camp Foundation, the Football Coaches of America, and WTBS Television.

Despite the loss of many excellent players off the National Championship team, Ford led Clemson to the ACC title in 1982 and a 9-1-1 record. The 1983 team also followed with a 9-1-1 record, giving Clemson a 30-2-2 ledger between 1981 and 1983, the best record in college football.

In 1984 Clemson continued many successful streaks, as Ford ran a record home unbeaten stretch to 25 games, and an ACC winning streak to 20 games. Ford gained his 50th win at Clemson with a victory over N.C. State in Raleigh. It was just Ford's 65th game in Tigertown, a record for an ACC coach for swiftness in reaching that victory plateau.

Over the last two years he has taken Clemson to two bowls and has been the head coach in a bowl five times overall. Clemson has continued its streak of consecutive winning regular seasons to 10, an all-time ACC record. It is no coincidence that the streak began when Ford first arrived, 1977. Last year Clemson finished 17th in the final AP poll, won the ACC championship and the Gator Bowl.

A review of Ford's football past should help us understand why he has been so successful as a head coach. Another in a long line of former Bear Bryant players that has gone on to greatness in coaching, Ford played for the Bear between 1967 and 1969. He was Kenny Stabler's sophomore tight end as a starter in 1967, played that position in 1968 and moved to offensive tackle in 1969. Ford started all three years, was all-conference in 1969 and played on three teams that went to bowl games. In 1969 he was also a member of the All-SEC academic team, and served as the captain of the Alabama team.

After Pat Dye's coaxing, Ford remained at Alabama as a graduate assistant for the 1970 and 1971 seasons. He had already earned his B.S. degree in industrial arts and earned his master's degree in special education in 1971. Ford became a full-time aide for Bryant in 1972 and 1973. The Tide went to four bowl games while Ford was an assistant coach.

Clemson's current head man then accepted a position as an assistant coach under Jimmy Sharpe at Virginia Tech. He remained in Blacksburg for three seasons (1974-76) before coming to Clemson as offensive line coach in 1977. And, just 23 games later he was named head coach of the Tigers at the age of 30, the youngest active division I coach in the country.

Nearly 40 years after hiring 31-year-old Alabama graduate Frank Howard, Clemson had hired 30-year-old Alabama graduate Danny Ford.
Miles Aldridge joined the Tiger coaching staff in June of 1985. A native of Kansas City, MO, Aldridge coaches the inside linebackers. He is responsible for recruiting in South Carolina, Florida, southern New Jersey, and the Philadelphia area. A 1971 graduate of Gardner-Webb College, he is in his 17th year of coaching. Aldridge began his collegiate coaching career at East Tennessee State; after that, he moved to Wichita State, Tulsa, and then Mississippi. Before arriving at Clemson, he served as linebacker coach at Duke for two seasons.

Wayne Bolt joined the Clemson staff on March 10, 1986 from Auburn. His responsibilities include coaching the tight ends and the kickoff return teams. Bolt’s first season as a Tiger coach was a successful one as he coached an All-ACC tight end (Jim Riggins), and his kickoff return team led the nation in return yardage. Bolt has no recruiting responsibilities but he is director of the football dorm. He earned his bachelor’s degree in Health and Physical Education at East Carolina in 1979. After working as a graduate assistant coach at East Carolina, he took the job as offensive line coach at the University of Wyoming.

Jack Crowe joined the Clemson staff on February 24, 1986, as the Tiger quarterback coach. He came to Clemson from Auburn, where he served as offensive coordinator under Pat Dye and coached Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson. He has also served in the offensive coordinator position at Wyoming and North Alabama and was both an assistant and head coach at Livingston University. Crowe received his undergraduate degree in chemistry from Alabama-Birmingham in 1970, and completed his master’s degree in education from Livingston in 1973. The Fairfield, AL, native is responsible for recruiting in the Georgia, Virginia and Alabama areas this year.

Bill D’Andrea is one of the newest additions to the Clemson coaching staff, as he returned to the staff in 1986 from Southern Mississippi. Prior to that he was a graduate assistant coach at East Carolina, a full-time assistant at the University of Virginia, Massanutton Military Academy, Catawba College, and was a graduate assistant coach at Clemson. D’Andrea received his bachelor’s degree from Indiana State in 1973, and completed his master’s degree in 1975. He lacks only a few semester hours from receiving a second master’s degree. He coaches the offensive tackles and recruits for the Tigers in North Carolina, Virginia Beach and northern New Jersey.

Tom Harper became Clemson’s assistant head coach in February, 1981. Having served as defensive coordinator at North Carolina and Iowa State, his most recent stint in that same position was at Virginia Tech. He was also Wake Forest’s head coach in 1972. Harper graduated from the University of Kentucky with his bachelor’s degree in 1955 and received his master’s degree from there in 1958. He is responsible for recruiting in South Carolina and New York. Six of the Clemson players he has coached have played pro football, including two who were NFL starters last year (William Perry and Jeff Bryant).

Larry Van Der Heyden has coached Clemson’s offensive line for the past eight years, and he has coached an All-America guard three of the last four years. He recruits in South Carolina, North Carolina and western Pennsylvania. Van Der Heyden joined the Tiger coaching staff in January 1979, as he came from Memphis State where he was offensive coordinator for three years. He also served stints at Iowa State, Drake, Indiana State, East Carolina, and Virginia. He earned his B.A. and master’s degree at Iowa State and lettered three years in football and baseball.

Woody McCorvey is in his fifth year of coaching Clemson receivers. For three years he was the Tigers’ tight end coach, and for two of those seasons he coached the All-ACC tight end. He is in his second season as a wide receiver coach. He recruits in North Carolina and Florida. McCorvey came to Clemson from Alabama A&M where he was offensive coordinator for four years. The 1972 Alabama State graduate lettered four years in football at the school before earning his physical education degree. He then received a master’s degree in health, leisure, and sports from the University of West Florida in 1977.

Bill Oliver is in his second season at Clemson as the defensive secondary coach. He also recruits for the Tigers in Florida, Alabama and Georgia. A native of Livingston, AL, he began his collegiate coaching career as defensive secondary coach at Auburn, and five years later was hired by the late Paul “Bear” Bryant to fill the same position at Alabama. His most recent stint, however, was with the Memphis Showboats of the United States Football League, where he served as senior defensive coordinator and secondary coach. Oliver was a member of the 1961 undefeated National Championship Alabama team, and he received his bachelor’s degree in 1962.

Chuck Reedy has coached Clemson’s running backs for the last nine years. He also has a heavy recruiting schedule covering South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and the New York-Long Island areas. The St. Augustine, FL, native earned two letters in football from Appalachian State, where he was a 1971 graduate in health and physical education. He came to Clemson from Kentucky on July 5, 1978. Reedy is the main reason Clemson has signed the top player in Jacksonville five of the past six years. Every running back with the exception of one who has started under Reedy at Clemson has been drafted by the Pros or has signed a free agent contract. This list includes Kevin Mack, 1985’s AFC offensive rookie-of-the-year.

Tommy West is in his sixth season coaching the Clemson defensive and special teams. He is also in charge of recruiting for the Tigers in Florida and Georgia. Prior to coming to Clemson, West coached at Appalachian State until July of 1982. The Gainesville, GA, native earned his B.S. degree in health education from the University of Tennessee in 1975 after lettering three years in football and baseball. A fine all-around athlete, West was drafted out of high school by baseball’s Chicago Cubs.

On a hot muggy 1934 August day within the town of Clemson, Dr. Rupert H. Fike wrote a letter to Clemson football coach Jess Neely which began, "Coach last night we had a little meeting at our house and organized the IPTAY Club (I Pay Ten a Year)."

Since that day in 1934, IPTAY has revamped its name to I Pay Thirty a Year. From the early days when memberships were often paid in eggs and fresh vegetables, IPTAY has annually been one of the top organizations of its kind in America. Today, over 20,000 active members support IPTAY annually, and it is this scholarship fund-raising organization that is a prime reason for Clemson’s ranking among the nation’s elite in football and all sports. Clemson recently completed its most successful year ever athletically as 10 teams finished in the Top 20 of their respective final polls, and seven teams won conference championships.

IPTAY’s first and foremost goal is to annually insure the financing of a quality education for nearly 400 student-athletes, trainers, and managers. Countless numbers of success stories begin with the receipt of an IPTAY scholarship, and through the generous support of IPTAY members, Clemson University has been able to award the maximum number of scholarships allowed by the NCAA in Clemson’s 18 men’s and women’s varsity sports. For the over 3,000 students who have been awarded IPTAY scholarships, and for those who are still to come, without a doubt IPTAY works for them.

Because of IPTAY’s commitment to excellence both in the classroom and on the playing field, the ability to expand programs has enabled IPTAY to directly benefit the entire university family. In the fall of 1984, the IPTAY Athletic Academic Endowment Scholarship Fund was created to award financial support to students whose performance in the classroom warranted distinction.

The concept that supports the endowment is based on money donated by matching gift companies, as well as monies generated by television appearances and scholarship awards in such contests. What results from this endowment is one of the largest unrestricted scholarships in the history of Clemson. Perhaps the most exciting feature of the fund is its potential. As the years go on, the growth of the program will only be equalled by IPTAY’s desire to work for Clemson.

Other contributions made possible to Clemson University through IPTAY include several capital improvement projects which have helped to give the university the best facilities in the nation.

Some of the current projects that are sponsored by IPTAY include an indoor tennis facility, as well as permanent soccer stadium. The indoor facility features four indoor courts, as well as permanent seating, and will be available for faculty, students, and staff when not in use by the varsity tennis teams. The soccer stadium will provide a home for the 1984 National Champions.

The Tiger Band sported new uniforms last fall. The uniforms, as well as all expenses for band travel, are sponsored by IPTAY. This commitment, of well over $200,000, allows the Tiger Band to strut its stuff in style, both home and away.

Although the success of IPTAY’s programs and the financial management of its Board of Directors have enabled IPTAY to assist in other concerns of the university, the primary concern of IPTAY is in educating young people and in servicing the needs of its membership.

IPTAY sponsors one of the most progressive tutorial programs in the country, and at any time, any athlete is able to supplement his education through the use of tutors, or the impressive study hall program. A highly-trained academic advising staff helps the student-athletes prepare for a future, and to shape their tomorrow by studying today. Through these efforts, nearly a fourth of Clemson’s student-athletes were on the honor roll in the spring semester of 1987.

Working for IPTAY members is one of the major goals of the IPTAY Board and the internal staff. Each IPTAY member receives personal service to their account, and is constantly kept abreast of the programs of Clemson through the IPTAY office. Every member receives thirty-five issues of the Orange and White each year. As the official publication of IPTAY, the Orange and White is exclusively distributed to IPTAY members, and features in-depth coverage of Clemson athletics.

IPTAY is a part of Clemson in many ways. Through its various programs and contributions, the 20,000 members of IPTAY spread their support of Clemson throughout the entire university family.

Danny Ford is a frequent speaker at IPTAY meeting.
In many ways 1986-87 was Clemson's most successful athletic year ever. The Tigers tied the ACC record for league championships in an academic year with seven (football, women's cross country, women's tennis, men's tennis, men's indoor track, women's swimming and golf) and this tied the mark held by North Carolina in 1980-81 and Maryland, 1964-65. Clemson's previous school mark was six in 1981-82.

Additionally, Clemson had 10 teams finish in the top 20 in the various national polls and an 11th was in the top 20 at one time or another. The most top 20 teams Clemson had previously in final polls over the course of an academic year was nine, established twice (1981-82 and 1982-83).

Clemson was successful in the major sports of football, basketball, and baseball and was one of only two schools in the nation to rank in the top 20 in football, basketball, and baseball in the final polls. UCLA was the only other institution to achieve this level of excellence in the three major sports and it is the first time Clemson has done it.

Emergency Services

The Clemson University Athletic Department provides the following for your safety and emergency medical needs:

1. Advanced cardiac life-support stations in four locations. (North stands, Upper North deck, South stands, Upper South deck). These units are staffed with skill-care nurses, physicians, cardiologists, internists, paramedics, and EMTs.

2. Mobile units of EMTs and paramedics are strategically located throughout the entire stadium.

3. Ambulances with life-support equipment are available in North stand and South Stand areas and have prearranged routes for evacuation to local hospitals.

Learn to recognize these personnel and facilities.

WHAT TO DO IF EMERGENCIES ARISE

Please step back and give the organized stadium EMS personnel room to work. Well-intentioned attempts to help by untrained persons interfere with the efficiency of the EMS system. If you have basic or advanced training in specific life-support methods, make your qualifications known and offer your help. Untrained personnel can be frequently more harmful than helpful.

MEDICAL ADVICE FOR FANS

If you have a pre-existing medical or health problem, please check with your personal physician and obtain his advice before attending games. Many emergencies occurring at the stadium do so because of prior existing conditions. Use common sense in dressing, eating, drinking and physical exertion. Be certain that you have identification on you as to the diagnosis and what medications you are currently taking.

Be aware of warning signs of heart attacks: chest pain, chest tightness, shortness of breath, sweating, palpitations, fainting, nausea and vomiting.

Recognize that our most common serious medical problems at football games are heart attacks and allergic reactions to insect stings. Be aware that insect stings will always be very frequent at outdoor sporting events and should always be treated with immediate ice until advice can be obtained. If you have ever had a reaction to a bee or other insect sting, check with your personal physician as to whether you should carry a kit.

The stadium emergency phone number is (803) 656-2999.

It's the tie that binds families together as they support each other through joys and hardships. The dedication that keeps devoted friends close, even over great distances. The force that compels patriots to leave their homes to defend their country, sometimes in the face of incredible odds.

It's that special love that brings 80,000 fans, in full orange regalia, into Death Valley on Saturday afternoons to cheer the Tigers to victory, and it remains strong whether or not the victory is won.

Clemson alumni and friends may well hold a record for loyalty, a fierce and proud loyalty that is demonstrated not only on football Saturdays, but through solid support for academic excellence at Clemson University.

This support furnishes scholarship funds for outstanding students, provides resources to attract and retain distinguished classroom teachers, helps develop state-of-the-art technology and train students in its use, allows library acquisitions and expands the scope of research. In short, private support makes the difference between an "adequate" education and the superior education for which Clemson graduates have become known.

Pledge your loyalty to Clemson University's continuing academic excellence through a gift to the Clemson Loyalty Fund.

STEVENS
It is evident that people making the vital difference.

Studies have shown that, even with the very latest and best methods of treatment, patients get well faster if their medical care is given with a large measure of love.

The people of Providence Hospital provide that essential ingredient to the healing process.

Everyone, sick or well, needs the comfort of loving hands. But Christian concern and love are even more vital to the sick.

We see this demonstrated every day—thanks to Providence people. They care enough to take time to add old-fashioned love to the science of modern medicine.

Perry Tuttle

By Tim Bourret

South Carolina Network Sports Reporter Phil Kornblut has just learned that the Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League have been gaining yardage through the air in bunches thanks to the efforts of former Clemson All-American Perry Tuttle. This sounds like a good story for his state-wide radio show. How does a local hero adjust to life north of the boarder?

One phone call to directory assistance in Winnipeg gave him his answer. “What city please,” said the operator. “Winnipeg for a Mr. Perry Tuttle,” said Kornblut.

“So you mean the football player for the Winnipeg Blue Bombers,” replied the operator. “He is one of my favorite players, you should have seen the catch he made yesterday.”

It took only one season for popular Perry Tuttle to become one of the top three receivers in the CFL and to take the entire city of Winnipeg by storm. Even the normally computer-programmed directory assistance operators could recite his data.

Perry Tuttle is the all-time leading receiver at Clemson history on a total reception and yardage basis and is one of the top pass catchers in the history of the Atlantic Coast Conference. In 1981 he was one of the captains of Clemson’s National Championship team and will always be remembered for two of his eight TD catches that season.

Against Georgia, in a 13-3 Tiger victory, he scored the only touchdown of the game on a pass reception from Homer Jordan. And, he also scored a six-pointer in the Orange Bowl triumph of Nebraska, a reception that was well documented on the cover of Sports Illustrated. He is the only Clemson athlete who has been on the cover of SI while he was still a student at Clemson.

His 150 career receptions for 2,554 yards and All-America honors of 1981 led to a first-round draft selection by the Buffalo Bills of the NFL in 1982. After signing a healthy contract he moved to Buffalo for the cold season ahead. For one reason or another, his career turned as frigid as the weather, and he caught only seven passes his rookie season.

Soon, he was traded to Tampa Bay, and then shipped to Atlanta. After stints with three NFL teams in the 1984 season Tuttle was out of football.

“I have never been so depressed, or upset with my life,” said Tuttle, native of Winston-Salem, NC. “Here were all my friends who were drafted in later rounds than me playing in the NFL. I certainly learned a lot about myself and matured a great deal.

“That year I worked in a lawyer’s office in Atlanta, but I also gave a lot of speeches for FCA, etc. It was a trying time, but my Clemson teammates and people with the University helped me a lot.

“If it was not for Coach (Danny) Ford, and Allison Dalton and some of the other people at Clemson I probably would have lost all hope of getting back into football. My former teammates, like Jeff Davis and Jerry Butler helped me sort out my life. They came to Atlanta a couple of times. They got me through the year and I would break my neck for Clemson today because of it. They stood behind me and got me through some rough times.”

The difficult times told Tuttle about himself...he missed football, something he did not realize until he was out of it. “Everything had always been so easy for me,” reflected Tuttle. “When I was in the fourth grade people were telling me I would make it in the NFL. I just always followed that pattern and when I was at Clemson and things went well, it continued. I never liked to practice and took the game for granted until I sat out the 1985 season.”

With the help of his close friends and teammates at Clemson, Tuttle picked himself back up and decided he still wanted to play the game. He became involved with the Bears and 49ers, but their offers were vague. Then one day a team from Canada called.

“I had always considered the CFL to be a minor league, but they were willing to send someone to Atlanta to give me a tryout. I decided to take a look at it, but I never thought I would go because it just reminded me of Buffalo...all that snow.

“But, the people who came down to work me out were sincere and made no promises. They seemed like good people so I reported to camp with 17 other wideouts looking for a starting position.”

Tuttle got off to a slow start because of a pulled hamstring. About a week before the first game he received the motivation he had been looking for from his coach, Cal Murphy, the 10th winningest coach in CFL history.

“He told me I had better start playing or I was not going to make the team,” said Tuttle. “I realized then it was time to get to work. Hamstring pull or not, I had to make a mark. I went into the front office that afternoon and told them I was the man they needed. All I wanted was a chance.

“The next day I had a good practice, then a good first game, and I have been starting ever since. I am as happy now as I have been since I left Clemson.”

And, he means in all phases of his life. He has recently become engaged to be married to a young lady from Columbia, SC and in general has all of his life back on track.

Tuttle has been one of the top receivers in the CFL each of the last two years.
But, there were transitional moments for Tuttle when this southerner made his move north of North Dakota. "My first indication that it would be a different lifestyle concerned money. The first day I was in Canada someone gave me a five-dollar bill. It was colored and I thought it was play money. In Canada the red bills are $50, the blue bills are $10. I thought someone was giving me monopoly money."

The snow is also something of a hardship and it can affect your life dramatically, as Tuttle found out on a road trip last year. "During the playoffs it started to snow after a game in British Columbia. It snowed so hard we had to stay there for a week. We bought supplies and had a little mini-camp. We even had to share the same practice facility with the BC Lions. I had never seen so much snow. I went out with my camera and took a lot of pictures. I had not seen that much snow in my whole life put together."

But overall, life on and off the field in Canada has suited Tuttle just fine. "The people here accept you immediately. I thought Atlanta was a place where everyone was warm and friendly, but Canada surpasses that. It is a color blind society also, you are accepted for what you are.

"They have different sayings and I find I have picked some of them up. In Canada instead of saying, "huh," when you didn’t quite here someone, you say, "A," I’ve picked up the lingo. Still, they call me a Yankee. Anyone from the United States is a Yankee, even if you were born in North Carolina. It is the first time someone from Winston-Salem and the ACC has been called a Yankee.

"The language barrier was a little bit of a problem at first and I will never speak French fluently, but you learn enough as you go along. I can read some French now, just from picking up phrases on items in the department and food stores."

Tuttle’s spare time is lengthy compared to his NFL days. "In the NFL you have meetings all morning, then look at film, have chalk talks, then practice. In Canada a lot of the players have other full-time jobs so we just practice in the late afternoons.

"As a result you have a lot more free time. I work for the club and have some speaking engagements. In the off season this year I am going to actually work for the team in sales and promotions. I am starting to like it and think that some day I might like to do this at Clemson."

Yes, once a Tiger always a Tiger. Perry Tuttle follows Clemson closely and it does not take long for one to realize he could recite the 1987 starting lineup if he had to. "The day of the Georgia game, I was hopping the local station would pick up the game, but they didn’t. We were traveling to Vancouver and I was calling people to find out the score. When we got in, a teammate had told me Clemson had lost by a point. He let me sulk, for a while, then he told me we had won on a late field goal.

"I will always be a Clemson fan and follow the team. Coach Ford and the staff have always kept in touch and I will always get back to Clemson whenever I can. The reunion we had for the National Championship team was great. Jeff Davis and I stayed about a week."

During Tuttle’s Clemson days he had a knack for cutting across the grain with some shifty moves after making a dramatic reception. That ability has been tapped to the fullest in Canada, where the field is 11.5 yards wider. This is one of the reasons Tuttle had 83 pass receptions in 1986, third best in the league.

He has continued his success this season with 61 receptions for 1020 yards to rank in the top five in both categories. Against Saskatchewan in August he caught a 20-yard scoring pass with 50 seconds left to win the game. In two years in Canada he has almost surpassed his Clemson record totals that took four seasons.

"You can run all day without going out of bounds and everything is so much more spread out they can’t catch you," said Tuttle. "It eliminates a lot of the blocking that I had to do and everyone at Clemson knows I was not much for that."

So, the next time someone asks you about Perry Tuttle, rest assured he is enjoying life, doing what he does best. If you want more specific information, just dial area code 204 and the Winnipeg operator just might tell you how many receptions he had the previous week.

That Old Clemson Spirit 🐾
Every Clemson football weekend is a spectacular, but one does stand out in terms of the spirit meter. The needle jumps off the board during "Spirit Blitz" weekend, a time when Clemson administrators, students and fans join forces to show the nation what Clemson spirit is all about.

Events have been documented in everything from the New York Times to the Washington Post to even the Guinness Book of Records. In 1983 a total of 3,000 Clemson students showed up at Memorial Stadium at 7:00 AM to blow up 363,729 balloons prior to the ACC showdown game with Maryland. As the team ran down the hill the balloons were set free, creating one of the most spectacular sights at any sporting event in history.

In 1984 over 350,000 flashcards were distributed in the stadium the night before the game. The result was a pregame and halftime show that would have made Peter Ueberroth jealous, as it rivaled anything that was accomplished during the 1984 Olympics. Every section of the stands took part. In 1985 the Tigers played host to the "world’s largest pep rally," while last year 80,000 pom poms were distributed and Clemson students unveiled the largest school flag in the world.

What’s in store for the future? Rumor has it the balloon record may be eclipsed in the next couple years ... three times over.
Clemson’s homecoming weekend is a major event of the academic year as alumni gather with current students and faculty to share memories and experiences past and present. It is a special time of the year as 48 hours of events, including a football game, captivate the entire city.

Friday evening 40,000 people gather in Memorial Stadium for the nation’s largest pep rally. The spirited event is followed by a series of talent shows offered by each fraternity and sorority. The evening’s affair at the stadium is consummated by a breathtaking fireworks display. Students work and alumni mingle on the other side of campus into the wee hours of the morning as homecoming floats by future engineers are constructed in competition for various awards and prizes.

Saturday morning the band circles campus to get everyone in a proper frame of mind and final inspection and judging of the floats takes place. Homecoming queens, a live radio tailgate show, and a concert complete the whirlwind weekend that is special to Clemson.
Running Down The Hill

College football’s most celebrated entrance began simple enough. In 1942 when Clemson Memorial Stadium was first built the easiest way to get to the stadium from the locker room in adjacent Fike Fieldhouse was by running down the slope at the East end of the Stadium.

But, it sent a charge through the Clemson players on that September 19, 1942 afternoon as Clemson earned a 20-point win.

When the school built locker rooms in the stadium a few years later Coach Frank Howard had an idea that running down the hill should continue. So, he hired a bus company to take his boys to the hill just prior to kickoff.

About 10 minutes before each game at Clemson the players leave the Clemson locker room and board two buses. The frenzied players travel by bus around the outside of the stadium to the top of the hill in the east endzone. There, they gather and touch Howard’s Rock, which is supposed to give Clemson players magical powers, according to legend. As the band plays Tiger Rag and the cannon fires, the Clemson legions race down the hill to the thrills of the Tiger faithful.

It is truly a stirring moment no college football fan should miss.
Tiger Paws Everywhere

Clemson has many unique qualities and that extends to its logo. In 1970 an advertising firm developed a unique logo for Clemson, the Tiger Paw. The original is developed from a plaster aparis paw from a museum in Chicago, IL.

While many schools have a Tiger as a mascot, Clemson had a first in terms of logos, one that has been imitated by athletic teams at all levels.

It is the symbol of a Clemson fan and it will pop up everywhere on game day. You never know who you might see with a paw on his or her face, right Brent?

Paws are painted each summer on all major highways leading into Clemson from as far as 15 miles away. It is an activity performed by a fraternity and has the blessing and guidance of the local police force.

It is Thursday evening, March 19, 1987, at the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis, and Mitzi Kremer is living a dream. The freshman swimmer from Clemson is mounting the platform to receive her plaque as the NCAA champion in the 200-yard freestyle. Surprised and awe-struck at her own achievement — it’s not even her best event — Mitzi numbly accepts the plaque and steps into history as Clemson’s first individual national champion in swimming.

It is now the next evening, Friday, March 20, 1987, at the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis, and Mitzi Kremer’s dream is continuing. The freshman swimmer from Clemson is mounting the platform to receive her plaque as the NCAA champion in the 200-yard freestyle. This time her surprise and awe are not quite so great, after all, this is her best event and, hey, she’s been through it all before — albeit just 24 hours earlier. Nevertheless, Mitzi numbly accepts the plaque and steps even farther into history as Clemson’s first two-time individual national champion in swimming, and second two-time national champion in any sport (Tina Krebs was a three-time NCAA champion in indoor track).

At meet’s end, Mitzi Kremer is a first-team All-American in seven events — three individual and four relay performances. This is an unprecedented level of achievement for any freshman in the history of Clemson athletics. Not too bad for a lightly recruited, merely average high school swimmer.

How, then, did Clemson Swimming Coach Bob Boettner decide to recruit Mitzi? “Mitzi was a good high school swimmer,” he says, “she just hadn’t done anything in national events yet. She’d posted some good junior times, but the so-called national powers aren’t going to go after anybody who hasn’t scored on a national level. We went after Mitzi because we knew she had some talent, but we had no way of knowing she would become an NCAA champion in just one year. We just kind of had a hunch about her, and we went with it.”

Would that all Clemson coaches could be blessed with such insightful hunches.

Boettner and his program were fortunate to be able to offer Mitzi several attractions besides a scholarship. Kremer, who hails from Titusville, FL, comes from a very close family; in fact, either her father, mother, or older brother made it to almost every meet last year. So, she says, “I was looking for a school that was building up and that had a very close team and a coach that I could really relate to and work with. Clemson fits all that.”

She says, “I’d rather have a situation where I feel like I can contribute to the team. I’m very lucky to be able to swim with Pam Hayden and Jan Kemmerling and last year Molly Kueny, who work very hard in practice. They’re very positive and they really keep you going.

She’s also formed a close relationship with Coach Boettner. “He’s really compassionate and really understanding,” she says. “He’s tough though. You know where the line is and you don’t cross it. I respect him a great deal as a coach, and I trust him. If he tells me to do a set, I don’t question him because I know he’s doing the best for me.”

Evidently, Boettner has done pretty well for her so far. In the course of her first year under his tutelage, Kremer cut her time by 10 seconds in the 500, two-and-a-half seconds in the 200, and two seconds in the 100.

The overall atmosphere at Clemson was paying off for Mitzi well before the NCAA championships. A whole month earlier, at the ACC meet, she had earned the ACC Outstanding Swimmer award by taking conference titles in the 500 and 200 free events as the Lady Tigers won the ACC team championship.

Nevertheless, her expectations heading into the NCAA meet didn’t match her spectacular performance.

“I was very surprised,” she recalls. “I set my goals to get top eight in the 200 and 500 and top 15 in the 100. Actually, I was just hoping to make the cut in the 100 because I hadn’t done too much speed work before. And I was hoping to contribute what I could to the relays. That was what I realistically thought I could do, so I was very happy. I had no idea. It’s still hard to believe.”

Since then, Mitzi has worked hard to earn valuable experience in international competition. Based on her NCAA performance, she was invited to compete in the World University Games in Yugoslavia at the beginning of July. It was her first international meet, but she posted her best times ever in long course (meters, as opposed to yards) competition.

At the end of July, Mitzi went to the U.S. Nationals in Clovis, CA, where she posted her best time ever in the 200-yard free. Her performance qualified her for the Pan Pacific Games in Australia at the beginning of August. There she took the gold medal in the 200-yard free.

She hopes the experience has helped her get a feel for the type of international competition that she might face in the Olympics next summer, which is a goal that she is setting her sights on.

“That’s something I’d love to do,” she says. “And if I make it, that would just be my ultimate goal. But if I don’t make it and I’ve tried for it, there’s nothing lost.”

Turning to the task at hand, the upcoming season, for which conference competition begins on November 14 at Virginia, Mitzi dwells mostly on the team’s prospects, saying, “I know it’s going to be tough. I can’t relax now because I know it’s going to be even harder than last year. We have an awesome team, not only swimming-wise but just as a group. We really are a family.”

Currently, it is accepted that Texas and Stanford are in a class by themselves in women’s swimming. In the next echelon, however, Florida, Cal-Berkeley, Georgia, Southern Cal, and UCLA all join Clemson in the race for third in the country. But, as Mitzi says, it all boils down to who swims the best at that one meet — the NCAA championship.

Hopefully, the script will go something like this:

“It is a Thursday evening, March 17, 1988, at the University of Texas Swim Center in Austin, and Mitzi Kremer is living a dream ..."

Oliver Gives Tigers Plush Playing Surface

From beneath the playing field and the green grass section of Death Valley, 40 irrigation heads pop up like interested spectators, spraying water across Ronnie Oliver's natural turf. A clock unleashes the irrigation system nightly to preserve the plush playing surface, but Oliver's greatest fear on game day isn't that a Clemson ball carrier will break free and trip over a blade of grass.

"Most people can't go out and find an irrigation head, but I always have a fear of them coming on during a game," Oliver said. "I always make sure the clock is turned off and the water valve is turned off and I still wonder if it's going to come on."

While an unscheduled water break might delight hot players, Oliver would rather see the Tiger offense reap what he sowed and the Clemson defense play like "Keep Off The Grass" signs were posted in the secondary.

"I'm the biggest Tiger fan around," he says. "I've got an orange beard to prove it."

He also has a Clemson degree in Ornamental Horticulture, a bustling business called Environmental Landscaping, and a tailgating spot right outside Death Valley. On the asphalt, Oliver spends enough time on the grass.

For the past two years, his Greenwood-based company has handled the fertilization, the chemical applications, and much of the maintenance for Clemson's playing fields, practice fields, and Jervey Athletic Center grounds.

"We've tried to upgrade the grounds and get them back to where they should be," Oliver said. "The place grew so fast in the last five years, the grounds have really gotten left by the wayside. It's easy to get into the rut of mowing grass and hoping it looks good. It doesn't work that way."

Under Oliver's care, areas on the football field that were almost barren three years ago are now grassy and firm. His crew put 200 tons of sand on the field earlier this year to give it more grip.

"This year the field has been completely covered with grass since May 1. We've really got a good root system," Oliver said. "Any damage that's done to the field is more aesthetic, on the top of the ground. It will rejuvenate in four or five days until mid-October. Then, it gets to be cool, football weather and the grass stops growing. It won't recover from one game to the next. That's when we go in with dye to cover up brown spots, nicks, and divots. Until that time, what you see is the real thing."

Currently, the football field is in transition from common Bermuda grass to hybrid Bermuda, which you find on golf greens. The hybrid was row-sprigged into the field in April 1986 and needs two or three years to take over.

With eight home games this season, Oliver plans to overseed the field with winter rye two or three times after each game from mid-September through mid-October. Winter grass will help recover divots when it becomes too cool for the common Bermuda grass to grow.

When the winter grass becomes established, an alternating color scheme, which people have accused Oliver of creating with paint, will become more apparent.

"We run the mowers over the field without reels on Friday afternoons or Saturday mornings to get the striped affect," he said. "From the zero to the five, we're always going south. It leans the grass. We cut it the same way every time. One area is darker, one is lighter." Actually, Oliver creates an optical illusion. The dark rows to the South stands will appear light to the North stands.

Oliver, his wife, and two children sit on the North side in Death Valley. He can see the game and the irrigation controls from his seat. Oliver's family hasn't missed a Clemson football game since the 1982 Mirage Bowl in Tokyo. "Those are the 11 days each year we take off," he said.

While Clemson is his biggest contract, Oliver's company also works at a dozen Milliken plants, numerous high schools, and three other colleges and they installed an irrigation system at Duncan Park in Spartanburg last spring. His Clemson crew leaves Greenwood, where he also owns a garden center, almost daily at 6:15 a.m. and returns about 12 hours later. Oliver begins handling paperwork and routing crews at 5 a.m.

"If I get up here at nine o'clock, I'm not just starting to work," he said with a grin. "When most people are just going to work, I've already put in four hours."

Whether he's working on the football field, the newly planted soccer field, or a golf green, Oliver, who grew up on a farm, is where he wants to be as long as he's outside. Especially, if he's in Clemson.

Frank Howard Field never looked better thanks to the work of Ronnie Oliver.
"I've worked every day I can remember. Any day I didn't work, I don't remember it. And the way I see it, I'll be working another 20, 25 years. When I finally get to retire, know what I'm gonna do?...Nothing.

This Day in Tiger Football
by Foster Senn

Clemson has had a proud football tradition since the turn of the century when John Heisman was the head coach. As in football, Clemson has a proud military heritage. When Clemson traveled to meet Boston College at Fenway Park on this day in 1942, Bill Cunningham wrote about that military tradition in his column in the Boston Herald:

“This type of land-grant college is really serving and saving America. Clemson has a normal all-male enrollment of approximately 2,000, and as of August 15, it had 2,025 sons in the service, writing an official record of valor that began at Pearl Harbor and continues through Bataan, Corregidor, Australia, the Solomons, England, Africa, India, China, and everywhere else the forces of freedom have spread. Most of their men are officers.

“Many were first into the fighting. Give those orange and purple Tigers all you’ve got in the way of welcome when you see them today. They represent something a lot bigger than just a fine brand of Southern football. They teach patriotism and preparation in that institution, along with their agriculture, engineering, general science, and the rest of it.”

When the United States entered World War I, the entire Clemson senior class of 1917 volunteered that day for service. It is said that in World War II, Clemson had more officers in the military than any other institution except for West Point and Texas A&M. Clemson’s military tradition continues through today. The University’s Air Force ROTC program was named best in the nation in 1984. This spring, the Navy recognized Clemson for sending more men into its technical officers’ programs — nuclear engineering and civil engineering — than any other school in the nation.

Clemson has played football 10 times on Oct. 10, always fighting hard in that Clemson tradition.

1903 — With John Maxwell, Vet Sitton, Jr., and Jock Hanvey starring, Heisman’s men rolled over Georgia 29-0 in Athens.

1908 — Virginia Tech stopped Clemson six inches from the goal in the second half to steal away with a 6-0 victory in Blacksburg.

1914 — Coach Bob Williams’ Tigers couldn’t keep up with the powerful Tennessee team this day, losing 27-0.

1925 — Before 7,500 chilly fans in Lexington, the Kentucky Wildcats scored three first-half touchdowns to capture a 19-6 victory over Clemson. L.D. Chandler scored for Clemson in the fourth quarter. H.J. Bowles, ‘Plowboy’ Austin, and Clifford Reynolds played well for the Tigers.

1931 — Johnny Lambert scored on a reverse to lead Jess Neely’s Tigers to a 6-0 triumph over NC State in a game played in Charlotte.

1936 — After being held scoreless the first half, a deep Duke team ran off 25 points in the second half to top the Tigers before 5,000 rain-soaked fans at Duke Stadium.

1942 — The heavily favored Eagles of Boston College rallied from a 7-0 halftime deficit to defeat the Tigers 14-7 before 23,400 at Fenway Park. Butch Butler ran four yards for Clemson’s lone touchdown. Two turnovers set up the Eagle scores.

1959 — NC State sophomore Roman Gabriel, on his way to great success in college and professional football, was stopped on this wet Death Valley day. The Tigers dominated throughout, winning 23-0. Lowndes Shingler was a standout for Clemson. Bill Mathis and Ron Scrudata scored touchdowns, and Lon Armstrong kicked a field goal.

1964 — Georgia quarterback Lynn Hughes led the Bulldogs to a 19-7 victory over the Tigers at Sanford Stadium in Vince Dooley’s first year at Georgia. Pat Crain led Clemson with 50 yards rushing.

1970 — Clemson has played against five eventual Heisman Trophy winners, including one on this day. Auburn’s mighty Pat Sullivan, who would win the trophy in 1971, enhanced his reputation in leading ninth-ranked Auburn to a 44-0 romp over the Tigers at Death Valley. He threw one touchdown to his sidekick, Terry Beasley.

1981 — Ninth-ranked Clemson improved its record to 5-0 with a 27-0 Homecoming victory over Virginia. The Tiger defense, which was giving up only five points a game, got its first shutout. “We just got tired of seeing those three-pointers,” said Jeff Davis. Cliff Austin scored two touchdowns and Jeff McCall one.

Today is the Tigers’ 11th game on Oct. 10. The next scheduled Tiger game on this day will be in 1992 at Virginia. Whether the Tigers win or lose today, they certainly play with an almost militaristic fervor.

Butch Butler led Clemson in Fenway Park on this date 45 years ago.

On the first weekend of the 1987-88 Clemson University academic year, Clemson tennis team co-captain Brian Page served notice to the collegiate tennis world that he would be ready this season to provide the leadership the Tiger netters will need to contend for the NCAA title. On August 22, 1987, Brian Page won the United States Amateur Championship.

Page, a senior from Palos Hills, Ill., earned a wildcard berth in the elite field of 64 by virtue of his world ranking. He then took advantage of that by advancing successfully through the tournament’s six rounds to capture the title.

"I got lucky with a couple easy matches early in the draw," he said of his performance, "but then I was able to go ahead and win the tough ones after that."

It was a climactic end to a summer which saw Page earn important points on the Midwest summer circuit and qualify for the U.S. Clay Court Championships in Indianapolis. He also played in the U.S. Open beginning the weekend after his U.S. Amateur triumph.

"Brian’s game is maturing mentally and physically," said Coach Chuck Kriese. "He qualified for the US Clay Courts in Indianapolis, that was the catalyst. He beat three former All-Americans (Johnny Levine, Miguel Nido and Howard Herr) at that tournament and played Guillermo Vilas at center court. That had a lot to do with his confidence.

"It was a goal for him to win an important amateur event this summer instead of just playing pro events, where there is not as much pressure to win. He won a tournament he was supposed to do well in.

"Brian is returning number-one, but we have four returning All-Americans besides him. He will have to work for every inch his senior year, but that will make him a better player and prepare him for his pro career in June."

For Page, who has no reservations about shoulderling much of the blame for what he feels was an unsatisfactory team performance last year, the major tournament victory should boost his confidence tremendously going into this year. He feels that he let the team down last year by not securing enough victories in the number-one singles slot, without a doubt some of the toughest individual matches.

If it sounds like Brian Page in his own harshest critic, it's because he probably is. Despite the success that has been almost habitual to him throughout his tennis career, Brian maintains a realistic attitude and a belief in the work ethic.

In looking forward to a professional career, he is aware of his considerable talents, but he also realizes that he must become a much more consistent player if he is to be successful. And that will only come after hours and hours of hard work on the tennis court.

That realization enables him to endure the sometimes impossible rigors of Coach Chuck Kriese’s program. "I like the hard work," Brian explains. "It’s rough, but it’s made a lot of guys a lot better players. Coach Kriese has changed my game a lot and made me a more aggressive player."

When Page came to Clemson as a freshman two years ago, he was already a national top 20 player, and he immediately earned a spot in the top five for the Tigers. He followed his freshman year with an excellent summer, playing well in several pro events.

As a sophomore, Brian spent time in both the number-one and number-three singles spots. And as a junior, he was the number-one singles player all year. Those facts speak volumes about a player’s talent when he plays for a program of Clemson’s stature. But Page hasn’t been satisfied with his progress.

"Last year really was the worst," he says. "I let the team down in a lot of matches, and especially at nationals. But this year we should all have the experience it takes to be comfortable with a top three national ranking."

Besides Page, the team returns fellow co-captain Kent Kinnear along with John Sullivan, Vince Van Gelderen, Todd Watkins, and Brandon Walters. That adds up to a lot of experience.

After those top six players, Page says anybody from the seven through 12 spots could jump into a position to boost the team’s fortunes. He says, "Clemson has always been noted for its depth, and we’ve got the kind of players that can come in for any given match and contribute. With the players we have returning and the freshmen coming in, I just don’t see any reason why we shouldn’t be a top three team."

If Page carries his confident summer play into the school campaign, he should be able to play the role he feels he must play in helping the team live up to its own expectations. The 1987 United States Amateur Champion certainly appears to be ready.

Carl W. Regutti, master wildlife sculptor, has captured the regal dignity of the majestic Asian Tiger in this piece entitled "Supreme Confidence". Cast in fine pewter by Lance Corporation, America's premier pewter foundry, this 8" museum quality artpiece uniquely reflects the personality of the Tiger at rest. Senter Vitalé Fine Art now makes this piece available to the public for just $95.00. This is an exceptional value for a work of art by one of America's true sculpting masters. Mr. Regutti's works grace some of the most prestigious private collections in America and his most recent masterpiece, the ARISTIDES monument, now stands permanently in the paddock of Churchill Downs.

In addition to the pewter edition, a signed and numbered limited edition of 500 of this same work in bronze is available for $350.00.

To reserve either piece, return the completed form, along with check or money order promptly.

Shannon Fogle Brings Her Talent Home To Clemson

University Feature

By Sandy Woodward

Carrying on a family tradition is not always easy. Just ask Hank Williams Jr. or Shannon Fogle.

As the Tiger Band’s feature twirler, Shannon is center stage at halftime, a situation that is pressurized under any circumstances. But Shannon has a bit of extra pressure to deal with. Every time she picks up her baton, she has to live up to a family tradition. Her mother, Joanne Cheek Fogle, was Clemson’s first feature twirler to be on full athletic scholarship, in 1963. Joanne still teaches twirling, and both mother and daughter hold national titles for twirling excellence.

As if that weren’t enough to live up to, Shannon’s dad is part of the tradition too. Lou Fogle, now the head football coach at Lexington High School, was a Clemson football player for three years, from 1961 until 1963.

Don’t worry about Shannon, though. She can take the pressure.

She has a roomful of trophies to document her outstanding twirling ability. Her resume includes both 1987 Majorette Queen of America and 1986 Miss High School Majorette of USA. She has been twirling literally since she was big enough to hold a baton and won her first national title when she was six years old. She is also the first twirler to win national titles in all six age categories. Shannon was the feature twirler for the Lexington High School band for three years.

Twirling a baton requires a unique combination of skills, physical dexterity and coordination, gymnastic ability and concentration. To watch Shannon twirling is to know you are seeing the best.

“Shannon’s technique combines dance, gymnastics and twirling,” says Director of Bands Bruce Cook. “She is really outstanding, and we are extremely fortunate to have a twirler of her caliber at Clemson.”

Cook adds that Shannon’s mother has had a strong influence on the Tiger Band’s feature twirlers over the years.

“Joanne Fogle has been the teacher of a number of our twirlers since she graduated. They have all been outstanding, and we are doubly pleased now to have Shannon with us.”

Clemson has no scholarships for twirlers specifically nowadays, so Shannon’s decision to come to Clemson was not financial. And despite interest in her by other schools that could offer her twirling scholarships, she says she wanted to come to Clemson no matter what.

“Other schools may have offered me money, but no other place could have the same feeling Clemson has. I feel like I belong here,” she says.

There will be a lot of people in the stands for Homecoming today who have similar strong family traditions at Clemson — many other families with generations of members who have attended school here. Shannon Fogle and her parents can be seen as a symbol of Homecoming, the “Clemson family” in microcosm.
Outfitting the Tigers

By Annabelle Vaughan

It's a Saturday afternoon in Death Valley. Look around and you will see some of the favorite sites of Clemson fans worldwide: the Tiger band, the huge orange paw in the middle of the field, and of course, the beautiful Clemson campus. But these all seem to pale in comparison to the one you're looking forward to seeing the most. The band cranks up "Tiger Rag", the orange balloons are released, and the cannon goes off. Then comes the favorite site of all: 100 orange clad players storming down the hill, their helmets gleaming in the autumn.

It's a site Clemson fans will have the privilege of seeing eight times this year. You can be sure that Rodney Williams won't be wearing Michael Dean Perry's number by accident, and that nobody will get hurt because their chinstrap is broken or because they aren't wearing the right protective equipment.

Making sure each player has on all of the necessary clothing and equipment and that all of it fits properly is the job of Equipment Manager Bobby "B.D." Douglas, assistant equipment manager Doug Gordon, and 12 student managers. They work from sun-up to hours after sun-down during football season to make sure the Tigers are one of the best dressed teams in the nation.

The equipment room staff is not only in charge of dressing the team for games, but every day for practice. During preseason drills, the team practices in the morning and in the afternoon. But Douglas and his staff have it all under control. "It takes a great deal of work in a short period of time," Douglas said, "but the players can be sure that whenever they report to practice, their practice uniforms will have been washed, dried and put in the right locker.

Keeping the players' gear separated is of the utmost importance to B.D., Doug, and the student managers. "Can you imagine trying to match up more than 100 pairs of socks every day after practice?" Douglas said. "It would take weeks! To prevent this problem, each player has two heavy nylon, mesh bags: one for practice uniforms and one for game uniforms. They place their dirty uniforms in these bags and the entire bag goes into the washer and dryer. The bags are then put in the appropriate locker."

For each player, the managers have to keep up with numerous articles of clothing and equipment. One set for Monday-Thursday practices, one for Friday light workout and of course, the game uniforms. The equipment for a regular day's practice consists of 25 different articles, according to Douglas. The regular practice uniform consists of shoulder pads, knee pads, various other body pads, jersey, pants, underwear, socks, shoes, and helmet. "Besides this standard equipment, many players wear knee braces and other things such as neck rolls and girdles," said Douglas. "We have to keep up with what each individual player prefers to wear and have it ready for him."

Friday's gear is not quite as complicated as it consists of only nine pieces, but it is a separate uniform nonetheless. On Friday the team has a light workout with no pads. This gear is kept separate from the other practice uniforms.

As you can imagine, the cost of outfitting a football player is high. But the cost of outfitting an entire team is unreal! Douglas estimates the practice equipment for a regular practice to cost approximately $400.00 per player. This does not include the knee brace which many players prefer to wear. Game equipment and equipment for Friday's workouts each cost $100.00, excluding the knee brace. All 150 members of the team dress out for practice, while only 75-100 dress for games. This makes the cost of outfitting the entire team over $50,000.

The equipment managers are also responsible for all repairs that have to be made on the equipment during the week. Each day, the players have to walk across a large asphalt parking lot on their way to and from practice. "After practice, when they are tired, they drag their feet across the asphalt," Douglas said, "so the cleats on their shoes wear down. Each shoe has seven cleats. Each player has two feet. With 14 cleats per player, we spend a great deal of time just repairing cleats."

The equipment staff takes a great deal of pride in how their team looks, and they are also concerned about their safety. Every Thursday, they do an extensive equipment check to make sure everything is in top working order. Before the season begins all of the helmets are "pawed and striped to perfection," according to student manager John Ballinger. They also shine all the helmets with "Mop 'N Glo" and polish all the shoes before every game.

As excited as Clemson fans are at the prospect of eight home games, it doesn't mean much to the equipment room staff. "For us, there is no such thing as a home game," Douglas said. "Even when the Tigers play in Death Valley, we have to pack up all the equipment and transport it to the locker rooms at the stadium." All of this work is done on the Thursday night before the game.

After the game, the uniforms are collected and brought back to the equipment room to be washed. The managers begin washing and sorting early on Sunday morning. "By Sunday afternoon, we are ready to outfit the team for another game," Douglas said. "But by that time, we're glad we won't have to for a few more days."

Key to the operation of the equipment room are the 12 student managers. "They arrive at the equipment room long before the players report to practice and stay long after the players leave," Douglas said. "In addition to this, they carry full academic loads."

Each manager is assigned to a certain position coach and he takes care of the players at that position. "You become a family," said Ballinger, who has been a stu-
The managers have everything as neat as a pin for each player by Friday afternoon.

...dent manager for four years. “We work long hours but it’s worth it. We take pride in being a part of the team and, like the players, we get to see the results of our hard work.”

In addition to vast amounts of preparation the week before the game, the equipment staff is also in the locker room before the game, helping get the team ready to take the field. Here, they witness firsthand the rituals some players go through a game.

Manager John Ballinger is assigned to the offensive line. A few years ago, some of the players wanted to chew tobacco during the games. Coach Larry Van Der Heyden suggested gum instead. Now, before every game, Ballinger is responsible for putting two pieces of gum in the shoe of each offensive lineman. The gum is either orange or grape, depending on Van Der Heyden’s preference for that day. “I don’t know if those guys would go on the field now without their gum,” Ballinger said. “They expect it to be in their lockers every week.”

When the equipment staff packs up the players’ gear for games, they have the duty of remembering to pack a few important “extras.” For instance, former Tiger center Eric Nix had a thumb guard he had worn all through high school. The equipment managers had to be sure to have it in his locker every Saturday. Another “extra” goes in tight end James Coley’s locker. Coley wears an extra pair of socks when he plays. In fact, he wears three pairs! Tiger fans can be certain he won’t get a case of cold feet.

There are also some superstitions involved with being a manager. Some players only let the manager assigned to their position assist them on Saturdays. Others have certain managers that they like to have wear their chains during the games. This works well most of the time but might not be such a good idea. The manager Rodney Williams chose one season lost his chain.

But that might be the only lost article recorded in recent memory. Bobby Douglas and his staff work hard all week to have everything in place. So, the next time you admire your Tigers as they wait to run down the hill, take your hat off to the managers.

Today is Homecoming. As thousands of alumni flock into the tiny town "where the Blue Ridge yawns its greatness," they will feel that they really have come home. No matter how long its been since they have last visited Clemson, it will always be a special place to them. One that will be special to their children, and to their children's children. When it comes to loving Clemson, all generations are the same.

Homecoming is a fun filled weekend for past Tigers, present Tigers, and future Tigers. From Tigerama and the crowning of the Homecoming queen on Friday night, to the game on Saturday, it offers something for everyone.

Today, children of all ages will enjoy themselves as Tiger Band takes the field for their traditional pregame show. Fans will relive the glory of the National Championship with the opening "Sock It To 'Em" followed by the Orange Bowl March. And Tiger fans from across the nation will definitely feel at home when the band strikes up the familiar chords of "Tiger Rag."

Today's guest-of-honor dotting the "i" in Tigers is Mr. Warren Owen, president of the Clemson University Alumni Association. A member of the Clemson class of '47, Owen is now Vice President of Engineering and Construction at Duke Power in Charlotte, NC. Owen took over this position July 1 of this year and will serve until June 30, 1989.

Tiger Band continues the pregame show by offering its rendition of "You're A Grand Ole Flag" and "America the Beautiful," directed by Dr. Richard E. Goodstein and accompanied by the Clemson University Chorus. Dr. Bruce Cook will then lead Tiger Band with its rousing rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner," while an ensemble from Pershing Rifles Company C-4 presents our state and national colors. Both chorus and band will lead thousands of proud Tigers in the Clemson University Alma Mater. The invocation will be offered by Tim Willis, of the University Campus Ministry.

Finally, the buses will round the corner and the players will congregate around the rock. The cannon will sound, and 100 Tigers will storm down the hill to the screams of over 80,000 orange-clad fans.

Halftime will feature a variety of events. First, "The Award Winning University of Virginia Fighting Cavalier Indoor/Outdoor Precision? Marching Pep Band and Chowder Society-Revue, Unlimited," will present their halftime show. The Virginia Pep Band is under the direction of David Sibell.

Tiger Band will then take the field for its halftime show. The presentation will feature a medley of familiar John Phillip Sousa marches arranged by John Higgins. Homecoming fans will appreciate living in the greatest nation in the world as the show features the everpopular, "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Tiger Fans will then be introduced to the newly crowned Homecoming Queen. Tiger Band will play a medley of coronation music which will feature the theme from the movie White Nights. Two ballads, "Suddenly," which was made popular by Billy Ocean, and Kool and the Gang's "Cherish," will accompany the queen's ride around the field. The queen and her court will make their coronation ride on a float constructed by the brothers of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

The halftime show will conclude with the fifth annual appearance of the Tiger Alumni Band, sponsored by the Clemson University Tiger Band Association (CUTBA). Larry Slown is the 1987 Alumni Band Chairman. Last year's band boasted 140 members. This year's Alumni Band should be the largest representation ever. The T-shirts worn by the Alumni Band were graciously donated by IPTAY. This year, for the first time ever, the Alumni Band will join Tiger Band in the spelling of "Clemson." Then both bands will welcome all Clemson fans with "The Song That Shakes The Southland" — TIGER RAG!

The 1987 Tiger Band staff includes Billy Baker and Deana Taylor serving as Tiger Band drum majors, while Mark Biering will serve as band commander. Dave Shull will serve as vice commander, Mamye Alexander as sergeant major, Amy Ericson and Bill Florian as supply officers, and Matt Lifsey, Allen Nauright, Michael Simokat, and Jackie Hastings as supply sergeants. Cheryl Crenshaw will once again serve as the Flag Corps Coordinator. And the "Voice That Shakes the Southland," Nick Peck, will serve as band announcer.

The Alumni Band will be out in force this afternoon.

The 1987 Homecoming Queen will be crowned during halftime festivities.
Probably nary a soul in the stands today does not know that Virginia has never beaten Clemson in football. In fact, the Tigers have the most consecutive current wins in college football (26) over a major opponent with their 26-0 ledger against Virginia.

This is still six games short of the national record, however. Oklahoma had a 32-game against Kansas State between 1937 and 1968.

There have been a few years when there was little doubt that Clemson had the best team going into the game and proved it right off the bat. In the 26 previous games, there have been seven shutouts of the Cavs.

But in eight of the games, the final margin has been seven points or less, and in two of these, a field goal was the margin, including just two years ago when Clemson won, 27-24. And, in five of the eight where a touchdown or less separated the two teams, Clemson was playing in the friendly confines of "The Valley."

This means one thing ... Virginia is coming in and won’t be intimidated. The Cavaliers didn’t let the hedges at Georgia phase them in the opening game when the Bulldogs had to rally for a win. A two-point loss at Maryland and a one-point victory at Virginia Tech showed that playing on the road was not a horror movie for Virginia.

When Virginia finally got somebody at home the last two weeks (Duke and Virginia Military), the Cavaliers were not hospitable. This means they are on a roll and the next stop is Clemson.

Much has been written about the 1966 game at Clemson, a contest in which Virginia was certainly on a roll. The Tigers were down 17 points with 18 minutes to play, but came back to win, 40-35. The year before at Charlottesville, Clemson had escaped with a six-point win, and the year after that dramatic comeback, the Tigers went back into Scott Stadium and came out just seven ahead.

The first two games played at Clemson (1956 and 1958) were close to the vest. The Tigers scored in the first quarter in 1956 when quarterback Charlie Bussey sneaked over from the one and then kicked the extra point. The Cavaliers got to the Clemson 23 in the fourth quarter before fumbling and the Tigers missed a field goal later.

But with Virginia at the Clemson 40, Joel Wells intercepted a Whitey Clarke pass at the Tiger two on the final play of the game giving Clemson a 7-0 win.

This win gave the Tigers the conference championship and a trip to the Orange Bowl to play Colorado.

Clemson had just added 18,000 sideline seats to Memorial Stadium when the Cavaliers came in to play the opening game of 1958. And came to play they did. The Tigers had to come from behind twice to win, the last time in the fourth quarter.

Reece Whitey passed to halfback Sonny Randle for 46 yards before fullback John Barger plunged over from the two. George Usry scored from eight yards out for Clemson, but the Tigers missed the extra point, and Virginia led 7-6 at the half.

Clemson went ahead on a TD and a two-pointer in the third period, but the Cavs duplicated the feat early in the final period to put the Tigers down by a point, 15-14. Clemson scored with six minutes gone in the final stanza, but had the extra point kick blocked.

Twice more Virginia got its hands on the ball, but each time the Tiger secondary picked off Whitey passes to preserve the win.

Red Parker found out in 1973 that Cavaliers carry sharp swords. And, Scott Gardner drew his faster than Errol Flynn ever did.

Virginia scored on its first two possessions and it appeared that the Tigers were on the way to their fourth straight loss after an opening win of two points over The Citadel.

Even with 7:33 gone in the second period, Clemson was down by 14. But in a space of two and a half minutes, the Tigers scored twice and were down just two, 20-18, at halftime. A fumbled punt was recovered by Mike Lacika for Virginia in the end zone and the Cavaliers were whooping it up with a 27-18 lead and only 17 minutes remained in the game.

Clemson had to go just 26 yards after recovering a Cavalier fumble early in the fourth quarter when Smiley Sanders went in from the two.

Two possessions later, the Tigers found themselves 42 yards from the "alumni line" and 7:50 to play. After Sanders gained just one, Ken Pengitore passed to Jim Lanzendoen for 16 yards and Sanders took a pitch for a 13-yard gain around the right side. The Pengitore-Lanzendoen combination clicked again, this time for a 28-yard score and Clemson went ahead for the first time 32-27 with 6:44 to play.

Gardner was intercepted again, but Clemson fumbled the ball back again. A fourth-and-nine pass from the Clemson 17 gained only six yards as Peanut Martin made a saving tackle.

But the suspense was not over.

As it ended up, the real winner wouldn’t be known until the last play of the game, but it was mass confusion even then. Tiger punter Mitch Tyner gave the final thrill and Parker a near heart attack.

Clemson faced a fourth-down situation at its 10 with nine seconds left and a five-point lead. Tyner had explicit instructions from Parker to kick as much time as possible in the end zone before taking a safety, which would give Clemson a free kick from its 20.

Tyner killed about five seconds running in the end zone, but suddenly he decided to run the ball out. He was downed at the 14, but stayed inbounds as time ran out. Had he been knocked out of bounds with any time remaining, the Cavaliers would have had one more shot at scoring ... and could have ruined Pengitore’s best offensive day ever (83 yards rushing, 227 passing) and Lanzendoen’s best ever reception game (8 catches for 141 yards and two TDs).

Clemson coach Danny Ford has been involved in eight of these Virginia games. Although three of them have been shutouts, he is keenly aware that the Cavaliers have had the type athletes and the coaching expertise to bring any team to its knees.

Ford could probably just tell you what coach George Welsh is saying to his team before it enters the field. Ford also has some thoughts he will reveal to his team. Neither is expected to deliver a Gettysburg Address, but it could take more than three scores plus 10 for either team to win this game.
