The classroom is the place where we learn the importance of hard work, perseverance, and dedication. It is a place where we are encouraged to be our best selves and to strive for excellence. As we navigate through our academic journey, it is essential to remember that our efforts and dedication will ultimately lead to success.

In the classroom, we are exposed to various subjects and topics that challenge our minds and expand our knowledge. Each lesson we learn is an opportunity to grow and develop our skills. We must approach our studies with a mindset of curiosity and a desire to learn. By doing so, we can maximize our learning potential and achieve our academic goals.

Furthermore, the classroom is a community where we interact with teachers and classmates who share our passion for learning. It is a place where we can ask questions, seek feedback, and receive support. Our teachers and peers are there to guide us and help us overcome any challenges we may face.

In conclusion, the classroom is a vital environment that fosters learning and personal growth. It is a place where we can cultivate our talents, explore our interests, and achieve our dreams.

As we continue our journey through education, let us cherish the moments we share in the classroom. Let us remember that our efforts and dedication will lead to success. Let us embrace the opportunities that come our way and continue to strive for excellence.

Let us make the most of our time in the classroom and strive to make a positive impact on our community.

Thank you for your continued support in our academic journey.

Sincerely,

The meeting was called to order by the secretary, as both the president and vice-

Mr. Atkinson, the declaimer of the evening, gave a good declamation, the subject being "Sir Patrick Spens." This was Mr. Atkinson's third year in the society, and the manner in which he rendered this declamation showed that his efforts have not been in vain. We are expecting great things from him in the future.

Mr. Leland made the society forget their "shoes" for the time being, as he told how well his former Nemus Johns.

The debate, "Resolved, that the public system of honors should be adopted at Clemson," was upheld on the affirmative by Messrs. H. H. Kerwin and Chaple, and on the negative by Messrs. Calm and Romey. Both sides brought out many annually good points, but as a decision had to be made, the judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

There being no new business, the adjourned.

DEATH OF A FORMER STUDENT.

J. Crockett Thomson is dead. This news will bring sadness to many Clemson students and friends who knew him and loved him when he was a central figure in student life over two decades ago.

"Where" Thomson, as he was known; entered Clemson from Boulanger, N. Y. in 1908 and was a member of the class of 1910. From his entrance he was popular.

He was a leader in music, and his influence was felt to the extent that he was a member of the choir of the College Civic Church in 1896. He was a leader in all College life, and was honored by his fellows in various ways.

He was the editor-in-chief of "The Chronicle" in 1988-89, was president of the Columbian Literary Society, president of the tennis team, and president of the class of 1896.

He died of pneumonia at Dorset, Florida, Nov. 5, 1917.

Gentle, kindly, compassionate, friend, loving mortal he was, who knew that life is more than mere self-seeking.

Indeed, one of his own poems, "Violets," published in the Chronicle in 1896, shows that his heart knew many of the quiet and sweet yells that may meet us anywhere; they change our living here, and say what will we be over there Where is eternity?" - A. R. B. *9

"Behold I go to the war of all the earth; let us therefore no longer shrink, and show ourselves to be a man." These were the words of King David, as he lay on his death-bed, to his son, Solomon, the man that ever lived. This is the text used by Mr. B. H. Lacy, Chaplain of the 2nd Regiment World's Wound, Camp Sevier, one-time student at Davidson, and a former Rhodes scholar.

"The Need of Men" was discussed under several houses. "The cry of the world today is for men—not merely able human beings. That call has resonated from the four corners of the world. The question is: Have we that manhood in ourselves? You have got to be a man and show yourself to be a man to the world.

We are going to represent our fathers and mothers not only on the battle-fields of Flanders and France, but also on the great business-fields of life. We have a father, born of our own flesh, of our own flesh that looks for us to show those qualities of manhood which real men must exhibit.

"Man looketh not to the things that are seen, but to those things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

In the period of preparation comes the greatest test of all. "I like to think of David as he sat upon the Jacob's ladder improving his art upon the harp. I like to think of Solomon as he was anointed and assiduously practiced with his sling until he had so perfected himself as to be able to bring his sling to bear upon the object which he had in view."

"Man, I think, is what he is outward appearance and God looketh on the heart." We should be mindful of this—that in the sight of God we must prove ourselves.

I like to think of Solomon as he was anointed and assiduously practiced with his sling until he had so perfected himself as to be able to bring his sling to bear upon the object which he had in view. We must prepare ourselves for the event of life. I don't believe that the man who sets his mind on wealth alone, and assiduously practiced with his sling, will ever be sufficient to repay the loan. It is a poor business policy to wait for wealth. Money is not only physical, but divine."

My countrymen, as an example, I can't think of Christ but at the perfect human being. The kind of devotion that will make the right man—let it do not only the devotion to this event of life, but also a real devotion to God. We must make our lives count in these great contests.

"The life that counts must toil and fight. Must hate the wrong and love the right."
