CONQUERING OUR DIFFICULTIES.

Our own troubles always look bigger to us than to other people. In this respect, the best thing that a man can do is to try to live up to his own duties and obligations. But it is much easier to see the difficulties of others than to see our own. Our own difficulties may seem small and insignificant, but to others they may appear enormous. It is important to remember that everyone has their own problems and challenges. It is not always easy to understand what others are going through, and it is important to be compassionate and supportive.

We read in the book, "My Four Years in Germany," one instance of this. After dinner the Emperor talked to us in his private office for some time. We wish that we could have his ideas and plans for our government. The following is a quotation from the book:

"I know that I cannot make the United States unconquerable. Let us resolve to meet the problem with a determination to win in spite of difficulties."
