Clemson vs. Virginia Series

- Clemson holds a commanding 36-8-1 lead in the series with Virginia, but the Cavaliers hold an 8-7-1 advantage since 1990, or since Clemson won the first 29 games of the series. Virginia's last win in the series took place in 2004 in Charlottesville by a score of 30-10 on a Thursday night.
- This is the first meeting between the two teams at Clemson since the 2003 season, when the Tigers were victorious in overtime by a score of 30-27 on a walkoff touchdown pass from Charlie Whitehurst to Kevin Youngblood.
- The Tigers won the first 29 games in the series before Virginia cracked the win column with a 20-7 victory in Charlottesville in 1990. Ironically, Clemson's first win in the history of the series (in 1955) was also by a score of 20-7. Clemson's 29-game winning streak between 1955-90 is tied for the fourth-longest winning streak in NCAA history for one team over another.

The record is 43 in a row held by Notre Dame over Navy, a streak that ended in 2007.
- Virginia has gained its most success against Clemson when the game has been in September. Virginia has celebrated five of its eight wins over the Tigers in the month of September, including its last win in Memorial Stadium in 2001, a game it won with just one second left on the clock. Virginia is 5-1 against the Tigers in the month of September since 1990, but just 3-6-1 in October and November.
- Clemson is 26-3-1 against Virginia in October and November all-time, but just 10-5 in September. The Tigers are 19-3-1 against Virginia in Memorial Stadium and 16-5 in Charlottesville. Clemson won in Richmond, VA in 1971 by a score of 32-15, the only neutral-site game in the history of the series.

- Clemson won last year's game in Charlottesville by a score of 13-3. The only touchdown was the result of a scoring pass from C.J. Spiller to Tyler Grisham.
Tigers Have Won Five in a Row

The Tigers have won five games in a row. Clemson's longest winning streak in Dabo Swinney's brief tenure. It is the Tigers' longest winning streak since they won six in a row in 2006. A big improvement on offense has had a lot to do with Clemson's winning streak. The Tigers have scored at least 38 points in five straight games, a first in the program's long history.

In the last five games, Clemson has averaged 42.0 points per game, 425.8 yards per game, 6.9 yards per play, and 220.6 passing yards per game. Clemson has seen its rushing average improve from 135.2 yards per game in the first five games to 205.2 in the last five contests. Clemson has gained at least 200 passing yards and 200 rushing yards in each of the last two games. The Tigers are 5-2 at 1 when they have at least 200 yards of each in history.

Spiller 140 All-Purpose Yards Shy of 7,000

Today is C.J. Spiller's final home game, and fittingly he has a chance to reach a landmark feat. Spiller enters the game against Virginia with 6,860 career all-purpose yards and needs just 140 to reach 7,000 for his career. If he does, he will become just the fifth player in NCAA history to reach 7,000 all-purpose yards. The others to do it are Brandon West, currently of Western Michigan, Napoleon McCallum (Navy), DeAngelo Williams (Memphis), and Ricky Williams (Texas).

Spiller owns 26 career Tiger records. He became the Tigers' single-season all-purpose yardage leader last weekend at N.C. State and has 1,952 for the season. He also became the first Tiger to throw a touchdown pass, rush for a touchdown, and catch a touchdown pass in the same game against an FBS opponent.

"I came to Clemson because of the great football tradition and football atmosphere," recalled Conner. "I felt at home when I visited and loved the beautiful campus."

After red-shirtinng in 2005, Conner became an important part of the Tiger defense. During the 2006 season, he saw time as a second-team linebacker and had at least one tackle in 11 games. He showed just how much of a key role he would play in the defense by becoming third among non-starters in tackles (31). In 2007, Conner moved his way up to first on the team among non-starters in tackles with 46. He had a breakout game as a reserve linebacker against #21 Auburn in the Chick-fil-A Bowl, recording 15 tackles in 77 snaps. No Tiger has had more tackles in a bowl game since 2002.

In 2008, Conner used that mental toughness and determination to work his way into a starting linebacker spot. With 125 stops, Conner became the team's leading tackler and was also a crucial reason Clemson was in the top 15 in the nation in total defense, pass defense, and scoring defense.

Conner started out the 2008 campaign with a bang, tallying 18 tackles against #24 Alabama, which tied the school record for tackles in a season-opener. He was resilient against ACC offenses all season and led the team in tackles a team-high six times. He finished the season with 11 tackles against Nebraska in the Gator Bowl, the second straight year he was tied or led the Tigers in tackles in a bowl game.

Conner shifted his focus away from football for a short time during the summer of 2009 while he was... concentrating on finishing up his undergraduate education. He needs to pass just one course this semester to receive his degree in sociology on December 17. While his Clemson degree will prepare him for the next 40 years of his life, he wants to continue to play football as long as he can.

"I plan on furthering my football career if the opportunity presents itself," stated Conner. "If not, I want to work with kids as a teacher or guidance counselor."

Conner went back to focusing mainly on football and how to make himself better. He has been putting up solid numbers this year, a big reason Clemson is second in the ACC in total defense and among the top 20 in the country in scoring defense, total defense, and pass defense.

So far this year, Conner has 63 tackles, including four tackles for loss and one sack. He has also been the team’s leading tackler three times, against ACC foes Boston College, Maryland, and Wake Forest.

When watching the 6’1”, 235-pounder on the field, some would say he looks like he plays inspired football. Conner revealed that much of that inspiration and desire to succeed comes from his grandfather.

“He has been my father and has raised me to be a great man by being the perfect example and role model. He is a hard working man who is accountable, responsible, and dependable. Those are the qualities I try to live by daily.”

These qualities have allowed Conner to become a leader to his teammates, both on and off the field. "Kavell has shown toughness, and that has carried over to the rest of the defense," said Swinney. "He is a leader on the field."

“He is one of the big reasons we are second in the ACC in total defense and are among the top 20 in the nation. It seems like every game he makes a key stop, or in the case of the Florida State game, ran with the ball after he recovered an errant lateral.”

With Clemson trailing 24-21 versus Florida State on November 7, Rashard Hall intercepted a pass and tried to lateral the ball to DeAndre McDaniel. However, the pitch rolled past McDaniel and into the hands of #33, who raced 29 yards to the Seminole 24 with 12:08 left in the game. Less than three minutes later, the Tigers scored a touchdown to take the lead for good.

“That was a great moment for me,” smiled Conner. "It was a great feeling to have the ball back in my hands. It gave me flashbacks of the old days."

As the Tigers prepare for their last stretch of regular-season games, Conner knows the importance of finishing strong. “It would mean everything to me to get it done and win an ACC Championship as a senior. We have come so close every year and I think it would mean a lot to our entire team to reap the benefits of our hard work.”

When asked what the defining moment of his Clemson career was, Conner replied, "I think the best moment has yet to come. If we keep working hard and stay focused on that next play, we will experience great moments at the end of the season."

Focus and determination. Next play.

UPHOLDING TRADITION

BREAKING TRADITION
By Katrina Eddie

For linebacker Jeremy Campbell, the 2009 season has marked a turning point in Clemson football. Not only is it his senior season, but he and the Tigers are in the driver’s seat for their first ACC Championship game appearance. For a player who strives to put the team first, there is nothing more exciting than that.

Campbell is one of the many Tigers on the roster from the state of Florida. Other prominent seniors from the Sunshine State are Kevin Alexander, Chris Chancellor, Jacoby Ford, Kyle Parker, and C.J. Spiller.

The native of Port Orange, FL was a standout linebacker at Spruce Creek High School and the #53 outside linebacker in the nation by Rivals.com. As a senior, he had 90 tackles, 14 tackles for loss, and seven sacks and was also the team captain. He was the team defensive MVP both as a sophomore and senior and totaled seven career interceptions, three of which were returned for scores. Campbell was also a standout in the classroom, as he was named to the honor roll every semester of high school and was also honored as the Scholastic Athlete of the Year by the Rotary Club of Port Orange.

Two deciding factors made Clemson the right choice for Campbell after high school. Firstly, he did not want to attend a university that any former teammate of his had chosen...he wanted to make his own path.

Secondly, the atmosphere at Clemson was second-to-none. “I wanted to remain close to home, but the main reason I came to Clemson was because of the players. They made me feel welcomed and I felt like I was with family the entire time I was here.”

He chose Clemson over offers from Georgia Tech, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisville, and Purdue.

Campbell started the 2006 season playing as a true freshman and played 10 games as a second-team linebacker. His best game came in the season-opener when he had a season-high six tackles and one tackle for loss in 27 snaps. He totaled 106 snaps on the year. Not red-shirting meant that Campbell had an immediate role to play for the Tigers.

“Not red-shirting was not my choice, but it has been a good experience,” he admitted. “Each year since I have been here I have been able to contribute, so red-shirting was never really an option for me.”

Campbell continued his steady role as a backup linebacker over the next two years. His first career takeaway came in the contest at Duke when he had a recovered fumble. His productivity increased as a junior in 2008 when he registered 31 tackles after totaling 26 combined tackles in his first two years.

The thrill of playing his position is what makes #48 so excited to contribute to the game. “Playing the linebacker position on defense is just like playing quarterback on offense. You have to be in total control of not only yourself, but also your teammates. Linebackers have to get everyone lined up and relay the calls. The best thing about it is always being in the middle of the action.”

Campbell’s favorite game thus far in 2009 has been the overtime win at #8 Miami (FL). “Being from Florida, I view playing any Florida school as a rival game and those games are the best. People from Clemson love playing South Carolina, and I love playing teams from Florida. My favorite Clemson moment was beating Miami in overtime this year. I grew up a huge Hurricane fan my entire life, so having a chance to play and beat them really meant a lot to me. It was even more special to beat Florida State this season as well.”

Campbell credits his dad as his strongest influence throughout his career and someone who has supported him no matter what. As a senior, he is now providing that support for his younger teammates. The team named its five team goals before the season started and, with one down and four quickly approaching, it has the right mindset to go all the way.

The goals are to 1) win the opener, 2) win the ACC Atlantic Division, 3) win the conference title, 4) win the state championship over South Carolina, and 5) win the bowl game. As a player, Campbell always puts his team first. Doing so has helped the Tigers come as far as they have and get ready to take on even more.

“This season is special to me because it is the last season I am going to be with my brothers,” said Campbell. “The memories we have made will never be forgotten.”

Campbell will graduate in May with a degree in management. The possibilities are endless for this young man, who is determined to achieve the remaining team goals before his college career is over. No matter what happens, it has all been worth it.

“Someone said that life should not be measured by the number of breaths you take, but it should be measured by the number of moments that take your breath away. My college playing experience is definitely the latter.”

DI - Mountain Rest, SC

It has been said that one does not understand the power and beauty of youth until one's youth has faded. Jess Bowers, the oldest player on the team, recently celebrated his 26th birthday. He fully embraces his own fading youth and the serendipitous circumstances that brought him to Clemson at his relative "old age."

The native of Mountain Rest, SC is the son of John and Lisa Bowers. Walhalla High School was where Bowers played four years on the gridiron as an offensive tackle and defensive end, but upon graduation in 2002, a sequence of events changed his football career forever.

In the spring of 2005, Bowers enrolled at Tri-County Technical College in Anderson, SC. During that semester, he attended a local tryout for the football motion picture "Radio." Assuming it would be a one-time role, Bowers accepted the opportunity as an extra.

However, one movie led to another and the local star has since acted as a special ability extra in two more movies, "We Are Marshall" and "Leatherheads." Playing football on the big screen required Bowers to take multiple semesters off from school.

Several semesters at Tri-County and three movies later, Bowers transferred to Clemson in the fall of 2008 to pursue a secondary education degree, focusing on history. In the spring of 2009, he heard from a classmate that football tryouts were the following day.

"I showed up at tryouts with my cleats on," recalled #91. "I didn't have a physical at the time, so I couldn't practice, but I was bigger than all the other guys, so Coach (Dabo) Swinney offered me the opportunity to come to spring practice as my tryout."

Bowers started out at defensive end, but he was moved to defensive tackle as he continued to improve. As summer practice continued, potential playing time as a Tiger was becoming a reality. It was not until August that Bowers found out that his clock of eligibility did not match up with the required number of academic hours, therefore making him permanently ineligible.

"Coach Swinney has been really good about letting me be on this team," commented Bowers. "But I do not dress out or attend away games."

Even though he cannot take the field, Bowers is still honored to practice every day and be a part of the team, because Clemson has been a tradition in his family for generations.

"I was born and raised a Tiger fan," he said. His grandfather Dr. Jim H. Bowers was the football team’s doctor for Clemson in the 1960s, his girlfriend Megan McNulty is a 2008 Clemson graduate, and his sister Addie is a senior at Clemson.

Ronald Watson

RB - Mauldin, SC

With graduation less than a month away, fifth-year senior Ronald Watson is enjoying every last minute. The native of Florence, SC is wrapping up his Clemson career, both on the gridiron and in the classroom.

Watson is the son of Ronald and Tracy Watson. He has two younger brothers, Randall, a sophomore at Clemson, and Taylor, a senior at Woodmont High School.

Prior to Clemson, Watson graduated from South Florence (SC) High School, where he played two years as a running back under Head Coach Ken Cribb. In addition to playing football, he won the team Iron Man award and was the 2004 state weightlifting champion.

Even though he considered attending Miami (FL) or Georgia, Watson stated that he did not have a choice. "My mom went to Clemson and my dad went to Clemson."

His father, who goes by the same first name, also played football at Clemson. He was a member of the 1981 National Championship team and started as a safety in 1983 and 1984.

"When I first got here, all I wanted to do was play football," said #37. "But everything about Clemson has challenged me, taught me to grow up, taught me to be more dedicated. As far as football goes, the relationship with the players is the best. Overall, Clemson has been a great experience."

As Watson runs down the Hill for the final time today, he will look back on his Clemson career as a life-changing experience...on the football field, in the classroom, and in preparation for the rest of his life.

Serving Clemson, Seneca, Walhalla, Fair Play, Townville and Highlands, NC
By Tim Bourret

Today, C.J. Spiller will play his final game in Memorial Stadium. He must be considered among the finest football players in school history, if not the finest. We will not get into a debate about that today, but chances are that seven years from now, he will return to Tigertown for an induction into the Clemson Ring of Honor. (That is the quickest someone can make the Ring of Honor after the conclusion of their career under the existing rules.)

He has provided Tiger fans with countless heart-stopping moments, but he will also be remembered for his representation of Clemson University off the field. I am not sure what is a higher number...his all-purpose yardage total or the number of autographs he has signed for Tiger fans ranging from ages 3-93. An Academic All-ACC player last year when he made the Dean's List, Spiller will graduate in just three and a-half years on December 17.

Spiller's Major Accomplishments

- Set the ACC record for career all-purpose yards. He is on pace to become just the fifth player in NCAA history to reach 7,000 all-purpose yards.
- Only player in the nation with two 310-yard all-purpose games in 2009.
- Joins Jacoby Ford as the greatest all-purpose yardage duo in Division I history.
- Has 20 career touchdowns of 50 yards or more. That is more than Tim Brown, Raghul Ismail, or Reggie Bush, similar types of players, had in their careers.
- Tied the NCAA record for kickoff returns for touchdowns in a career with six.
- Third in Tiger history in rushing yards, 144th in receptions, and first in kickoff return yards.
- One of just two Tigers in history to account for a touchdown five different ways (rush, reception, pass, punt return, kickoff return). The other to do it is teammate Jacoby Ford.
- Joins Reggie Bush as the only players in college football history with 3,000 rushing yards, 1,000 receiving yards, 300 punt-return yards, and 1,500 kickoff-return yards.

Spiller's Tiger Records

- Game receptions by a running back (7)
- Game all-purpose yards (312)
- Game different ways accounting for a touchdown (3)
- Season yards per carry (7.3)
- Season receiving yards by a running back (436)
- Season kickoff returns for a touchdown (3)
- Season kick returns for a touchdown (4)
- Season all-purpose yards (1,952)
- Season 50-yard touchdowns (8)
- Season 200 all-purpose yard games (5)
- Season 300 all-purpose yard games (2)
- Career receptions by a running back (111)
- Career receiving yards by a running back (1,299)
- Career receiving touchdowns by a running back (11)
- Career kickoff returns for a touchdown (6)
- Career kick returns for a touchdown (7)
- Career all-purpose yards (6,860)
- Career all-purpose yards per game (142.9)
- Career 50-yard touchdowns (20)
- Career 80-yard touchdowns (10)
- Career 200 all-purpose yard games (7)
- Career 300 all-purpose yard games (2)
- Career different ways accounting for a touchdown (5)
- Career different ways with a 100-yard game (4)
- Consecutive games with a 60-yard play (7)
- Consecutive 200-yard all-purpose games (3)

3 garlic cloves
1/2 cup cider vinegar
4 tbsp. honey
Kosher salt to taste

Remove stems from peppers. Chop peppers and garlic. Puree all ingredients in blender for 5 minutes. Pour sauce into a non-stick saucepan and cook on medium-low heat for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Let cool.

Q. What is your favorite part about being a Clemson football player?
A. The relationships I've built with people I would not have otherwise had the opportunity to make.

Q. What do you do to amp up before a game?
A. I try to think about anything but football in the days leading up to games. I try not to waste my energy and focus before I need it. I start listening to music at our pregame meal on gameday. I use that to start to pick my energy level up.

Q. What was going through your mind before you kicked the game-tying field goal in the fourth quarter of the Miami game to send it to overtime?
A. I tried not to think about the situation and the pressure. There was a net behind the uprights and my goal was to try and kick the ball over the net.

Q. What are your plans after you graduate?
A. Go back to school. Eventually, I want to get involved in real estate financing and investments.

Q. Did you play any other sports (other than football) growing up?
A. I tried pretty much everything...soccer, golf, baseball, tennis, basketball, etc. Football didn't start until high school.

Q. Who inspires you the most?
A. Without a doubt, my family.

Q. What do you enjoy doing away from football?
A. Spending time with my friends, especially on the golf course.

As an architect, James F. Barker is a rarity among major university presidents and he has often wondered why. He believes architecture is the ideal background for the challenges of university leadership, as it strikes the right balance between art and science, the creative, and the practical.

"I often tell people I learned everything from plumbing to poetry in architecture school, and I use every bit of that knowledge as president of Clemson University," Barker said.

Add to that his love of sports and his college experience as a varsity athlete on Clemson's track team, and Barker is the total package.

The 1970 Clemson graduate became president in 2000 with a vision and mandate from the Board of Trustees to lead Clemson to the top ranks of public universities...an institution that attracts outstanding faculty and students, provides an unmatched educational experience, and helps drive innovation and economic development for the state.

During his presidency, the University has harnessed the competitive, can-do spirit of the Clemson family to help improve the quality of a Clemson education and the value of a Clemson degree.

It has climbed from #39 to #22 among public universities in the U.S. News & World Report, which also recognized Clemson in its 2009 guide as an "up and coming" institution.

In the last decade, Clemson has also:
- been granted a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, America's oldest and most prestigious undergraduate honor society in the arts and sciences.
- been recognized for value and affordability by Kiplinger's and Smart Money magazine, and twice ranked #1 among the "Best Places to Work in Academia" by The Scientist magazine.
- developed and implemented an academic "Road Map" with eight emphasis areas aligned with South Carolina's economic needs.
- created an Academic Success Center to help undergraduates learn and succeed. Retention rates for freshmen have gone up and graduation rates have risen from 71 percent in 2001 to 78 percent in 2008. According to the National Survey of Student Engagement, 91 percent of Clemson seniors would choose Clemson again.
- strengthened its cyberinfrastructure and information technology capabilities, and connected to national high-speed research networks.
- been ranked as high as #61 on the top-500 list of supercomputing sites.

- launched major education and research-based economic initiatives, including the Clemson University International Center for Automotive Research (CU-ICAR) in Greenville, the Center for Advanced Materials in Anderson County, and the Clemson University Restoration Institute in North Charleston, all in conjunction with the South Carolina Centers of Economic Excellence program.
- developed an innovative undergraduate research program called "Creative Inquiry," which pairs small teams of students with a senior faculty member on multi-year voyages of discovery.
- created the Bridge to Clemson program to help students make the transition from the state's technical and community colleges to Clemson.
- set records for student applications (undergraduate and graduate levels), private giving, external research support, and study-abroad participation.

Working with state leaders and private industry partners, he has steered Clemson into a greater economic development role. The first phase of the CU-ICAR campus near I-85 is complete and graduate students in automotive engineering are studying at its Campbell Graduate Engineering Center.

Leading the academic and research program are distinguished professors in endowed chairs supported by BMW, Michelin, and Timken. The Restoration Institute is spearheading research and public education efforts to improve watershed management and restore water quality in the state.

He is a leading voice in higher education, not only in the state but nationwide. He currently chairs the Division I Committee of the NCAA Board of Directors and delivered a keynote address at a symposium in Washington on global best practices in science & technology parks. It was sponsored by the U.S. National Academy of Sciences in cooperation with the Association of University Research Parks, as his topic was CU-ICAR.

For his leadership, he has received the Order of the Palmetto, the state's highest civilian honor, and The Cliff's Business Person-of-the-Year Award from Greenville Magazine. He has also received the James T. Rogers Meritorious Service Award from the Southern Association of Colleges & Schools.

As Clemson's president, Barker remains committed to the classroom. Each spring, he is part of a team that teaches a course exploring "a sense of place" in architecture, literature, and history.

In presenting Barker with the Distinguished Alumnus Award in 2005, Washington University Chancellor Mark Wrighton said, "James F. Barker has taken the architectural skills and knowledge required to design a building and applied them to the future of a university. His architect's vision, collaborative instincts, and sense of place are rapidly pushing Clemson up through the ranks of the nation's top public universities."

"He has become a leader in national academic circles by creating a new model of education, building interdisciplinary partnerships among the professional schools and the basic curriculum by tearing down artificial walls between disciplines."

A native of Kingsport, TN, Barker earned his bachelor of arts degree from Clemson in 1970 and his master of architecture & urban design degree from Washington University in 1973. He and his wife Marcia have two sons and one grandchild.

On June 30, 2009, Clemson's football staff moved into the West Endzone at Memorial Stadium. It was a day of physical exertion for a lot of coaches, but the football staff performed the strenuous activity with smiles on their faces because the move meant the completion of Phase II of the West Endzone project, which has brought the Clemson football facilities to among the best in the nation.

It was also a day that brought a smile to the face of Clemson Athletic Director Terry Don Phillips, who had been working toward that day before he arrived on campus seven years ago. The creation of the West Endzone facility is another in a long line of accomplishments for Phillips throughout his 30-year career in athletic administration.

His vision was to create a top-of-the-line facility for the football program, but at the same time have a positive effect on the total sports program. The facility at Memorial Stadium creates more office space, new locker rooms, and training room and strength training facilities for the Olympic sports programs.

There have been many facility and infrastructure enhancements since Phillips came to Clemson and they have led to a quality all-around program. In 2008-09, Clemson played in the NCAA Men's Basketball Tournament, the NCAA Baseball Tournament, and a bowl game, one of just 13 schools nationally to participate in all three. It was also the first time Clemson had done that in 11 years.

The men's basketball program reached the NCAA Tournament for the second straight year and finished in the top 25 of the AP poll for the second consecutive year, a first in school history. The rowing program had a remarkable year, winning its first ACC title, and the Varsity 4+ won the national title. The volleyball team played host to the NCAA Tournament for the second year in a row and the women's tennis team finished in the top 20 (#11) for the seventh straight year.

The baseball team won an NCAA Regional and had a #14 final ranking, the golf team finished #6 in the Sagarin ratings, and the indoor track team finished #23rd at the NCAA Championships. Overall, six programs earned NCAA Tournament berths.

Academically, 17 of the 19 programs were above the national average for public institutions in terms of APR scores. In the 2009 spring semester, the 19 programs had a 2.97 combined GPA, the highest on record, and 54 percent of the student-athletes made the Academic Honor Roll.

These statistics and accomplishments were contributing factors to his selection as one of the top-100 Most Influential Sports Educators in America in 2008 by The Institute for International Sport at the University of Rhode Island. Its objective involved a four-year process and resulted in a list that spans scholars, Olym-

NAME/# SWINNEY

AVAILABLE AT: TIGER SPORTS SHOP • SOLID ORANGE STATION • THE ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT
Dabo Swinney became Clemson’s interim head coach on October 13, 2008 when Tommy Bowden stepped down after guiding the program for nearly 10 seasons. Then on December 1, 2008, the “interim” tag was removed, as he took over on a full-time basis as the Tigers’ 25th head coach. The 39-year-old had been Clemson’s assistant head coach for two years and had been in charge of the wide receivers since 2003.

Swinney, who had never been a head coach prior to the 2008 season, led Clemson to a 4-3 record in 2008. That mark included four victories in the last five regular-season games, with its only loss at #24 Florida State. That 4-1 record to end the regular season tied for the best mark in the ACC. Four of his six regular-season opponents were later bowl participants. His 4-3 record included a 2-1 road record, wins over Boston College and Virginia.

Swinney hit the ground running in his first week as interim head coach, as he prepared for a 5-1 Georgia Tech team. He had to re-organize his staff, and re-group his team and Clemson Nation in just five days. While the Tigers lost by four points, he accomplished many goals in that first week through his outstanding leadership. One of the most impressive demonstrations of unity came during the team’s “Tiger Walk.”

Prior to the game against the Yellow Jackets, Swinney decided to have his team depart buses outside the Lot 5 parking lot near the WestZone at Memorial Stadium and experience the gameday atmosphere. Dressed in jackets and ties, the team was embraced by thousands of Tiger fans who stood 10 deep for the 200-yard march to the stadium. It was the centerpiece of his “All in” theme in his first week as head coach. It is a tradition that will continue in the future.

In his second week as head coach, an off-week, he invited the Clemson student body to a practice, and nearly 1,000 students showed up. He spoke to the group and actually allowed some students to participate during practice, as they were selected to attempt a field goal, punt against a live rush, and field a punt. He also took the entire team to the Greenville Children’s Hospital for a visit with young men and women fighting cancer.

The Tigers played at Boston College in his first-ever road game as head coach on November 1. Despite committing four turnovers and trailing in the fourth quarter, his troops rallied for a 27-21 win, giving Clemson its first win over the Eagles since 1958. It also came against the eventual ACC Atlantic Division champion.

The Tigers suffered a 41-27 defeat at #24 Florida State a week later, but they rebounded to trounce Duke 31-7 at Memorial Stadium by outgaining the Blue Devils 466-168 under Swinney, who also served as offensive coordinator during the second half of 2008. Clemson showed its road prowess the following weekend by claiming a 13-3 victory at Virginia.

Rival South Carolina awaited for the final regular-season game. Against one of the SEC’s best defenses, the Tigers used a balanced attack (184 rushing yards, 199 passing yards) to top the Gamecocks 31-14 at Memorial Stadium. Clemson also had four interceptions against Steve Spurrier’s offense and held it to just 22-47 passing for 212 yards. The following week, the Tigers accepted an invitation to play in the Gator Bowl against Nebraska, a game in which the Cornhuskers were victorious by a score of 26-21.

The 1993 Alabama graduate joined the Clemson staff prior to the 2003 season. In his six years, the Tigers have finished in the top 25 of the final polls three times and totaled 10 wins over top-25 teams, including victories over Florida State (4), Miami (FL) (1), and Tennessee (1), during his tenure in Tigertown.

Swinney coached his wide receiver position to a level of consistency that had not been seen previously at Clemson. He had a wideout finish first or second in the ACC in catches each of the last five years. In his first year, he had three of the top-10 receivers in the ACC, a first in Tiger history. He coached a First-Team All-ACC wideout every year from 2004-07 (three different players), also an unprecedented feat at Clemson.

In 2004 and 2005, he coached the ACC reception champion (Airese Currie (2004), Chansi Stuckey (2005)). It was the first time Clemson had two different players lead the ACC in receptions in consecutive years. In 2007, Aaron Kelly led the ACC in yards, giving Swinney an ACC receiving king three out of four years. Stuckey earned First-Team ACC honors in back-to-back years, a first for a Tiger wideout in 25 years. He is now one of the top wideouts for the New York Jets.

The play of Swinney’s wide receivers was a big reason Clemson led the ACC in total offense, rushing offense, and scoring offense during the 2006 season, just the second time an ACC team led the conference in all three categories during the previous 25 seasons. The Tigers also led the league and set school records for yards per play (6.5) and touchdowns (55).
In 2007, he coached Kelly, a First-Team All-ACC selection who led the league in receiving yards per game and touchdown catches (11). He also finished second in receptions per game with a school-record 88 catches, tied for the second-highest total in ACC history. His 11 touchdown catches were a Tiger record as well.

Kelly is Clemson's and the ACC's career reception leader with 232 catches. He also owns the school touchdown reception record with 20. The previous record of 18 was held by Glenn Smith, who established the record in 1951.

The Alabama native has a reputation as one of the top recruiters in the nation. In 2006, he was listed as the fifth-best recruiter in the nation by Rivals.com. It marked the second straight year that he was lauded by the website as a top-25 national recruiter. He signed 38 players in his five recruiting seasons and was a major reason Clemson's 2008 recruiting class was rated #2 in the nation by ESPN.com when he signed 11 players. He was named one of the top-25 recruiters in the nation by Rivals.com in 2007 as well.

When Swinney accepted the interim head coaching position on October 13, 2008, he described his feelings as "bittersweet" because he was taking over for Bowden, who had been his first position coach at Alabama in 1989. He had also brought Swinney back to the coaching profession in 2003 and has had a profound effect on his life. Both had followed similar paths as players, as Bowden was a walk-on at Virginia and Swinney was a walk-on at Alabama.

Swinney received a commerce & business administration degree from Alabama in 1993 after lettering three times (1990-92). A walk-on who went on to earn a scholarship, Swinney was a wide receiver on Alabama's 1992 National Championship team. He was also named Academic All-SEC along with being an SEC Scholar-Athlete Honor Roll member in 1990 and 1992.

After his playing career, Swinney served as a graduate assistant coach from 1993-95 at Alabama, where he coached in the 1994 Gator Bowl and 1995 Citrus Bowl. In December of 1995, he received a master's degree in business administration from Alabama.

He became a full-time assistant coach at Alabama in February of 1996 under Head Coach Gene Stallings and coached a total of five seasons there on a full-time basis. He was assigned to coach the Crimson Tide's wide receivers and tight ends in 1996, a season that saw Alabama win the SEC Western Division title and make an Outback Bowl appearance. The following year, he solely coached the tight ends under Head Coach Mike DuBose.

In 1998, he coached Alabama's wide receivers, a position he held for three seasons. At the end of the 1999 campaign, Swinney coached the Crimson Tide in the 1998 Orange Bowl after winning the SEC Championship game. Wide receiver Freddie Milons was the game MVP.

Since 1997, he has had 17 former players either drafted or sign free-agent contracts with NFL teams. The list includes Currie, Derrick Hamilton, Kevin Youngblood, Stuckey, and Milons, an All-American who is still second in career receptions at Alabama.

During his time at Alabama, Swinney was a part of six teams with at least 10 wins, five top-10 finishes, one national title (1992), three SEC championships (1989,92,99), and five SEC Western Division titles (1992,93,94,96,99) as a player and coach. He has coached the #1 receiver in Georgia (Milons) along with the #1 (Kelly) and #2 (Hamilton) receivers in Tiger history.

From April of 2001 through February of 2003, Swinney was in private business in Alabama. He married the former Kathleen Bassett in 1994. They have three sons, Will (11), Drew (9), and Clay (6).

Woody McCory returned to Clemson after 20 years to become Associate Athletic Director for Football Administration. McCory was Dabo Sweeney's position coach during his playing career at Alabama and served as a wide receivers and tight ends coach on Danny Ford's Tiger staff from 1983-89.

McCory serves as the primary liaison between Swinney and the athletic and IPTAY administration. He also oversees the management of the football administrative offices.

McCory supervises the football budget and works with the staff at Vickers Hall to oversee the team's academic progress. He also makes speaking engagements and represents the football staff at various meetings and functions.

McCory worked seven years at Clemson between 1983-89. With McCory coaching the tight ends from 1983-85 and the wide receivers from 1986-89, Clemson posted a 60-19-3 record and won three ACC titles. During that time, the Tigers were invited to the 1985 Independence Bowl, the 1986 and 1989 Gator Bowls, and the 1988 and 1989 Citrus Bowls. Clemson posted a 10-2 record in each of his last three seasons under Ford. Among the student-athletes he recruited were future Pro Bowlers Donnell Woolford and Chester McClinton. He also coached future NFL players Keith Jennings and K.D. Dunn.

McCory coached at the Division I level for 26 years and went to a bowl game 17 of those seasons. Overall, he totaled 36 years of experience as a football coach. He coached or signed 36 players who went on to a professional football career as well.

From 1990-98, he coached in the SEC every year, including each of the last five at Mississippi State, where he was assistant head coach and offensive coordinator in addition to coaching the quarterbacks. He was a big reason it won eight games, including wins over Auburn, Alabama, and Mississippi, in 2007.

Prior to joining the staff at Tennessee, McCory worked one season at South Carolina, where he served as the wide receivers coach in 1998 under current Tiger Associate Head Coach Brad Scott.

McCory took the South Carolina job following an eight-year stay at Alabama from 1990-97. He served seven seasons as its wide receivers coach and the 1996 campaign as offensive coordinator. He was the assistant head coach in 1997 as well.

Alabama had five top-25 final rankings in its tenure in Tuscaloosa, including three seasons in the top five. The Crimson Tide won the 1992 national title with McCory serving as wide receivers coach and Swinney as one of his student assistants. That season culminated with a 34-13 win over heavily favored Miami (FL) in the Sugar Bowl. Current Clemson Assistant Coach Danny Peaman was also on that staff.

During the 1990-96 era, Alabama posted a 70-16-1 record and played six bowl games. With McCory at the controls of the offense in 1996, Alabama finished 10-2, including a win over Michigan in the Outback Bowl.

From 1979-82, he served as an assistant coach at Alabama and helped that program to the 6th rushing offense in Division II in 1981 after finishing 11th in the nation in scoring offense the previous year. McCory began his collegiate coaching career at North Carolina Central in 1978.

McCory began his coaching career with a six-year stint (1972-77) at Tate High School in Pensacola, FL. A quarterback at Alabama State from 1966-71, McCory earned his bachelor's degree from Alabama State in 1972 and a master's degree from West Florida in 1977.

The Amoroso, AL native is married to the former Ann Brown. The couple has a son Marlon.
Daniel Bassett is in his first year as director of football programs at Clemson. He is in charge of on-campus meals and housing, maintaining the football recruiting database, and community outreach.

Prior to being hired as director of football programs in 2008, Bassett worked as a student volunteer and later in office administration from 2003-05.

He received his undergraduate degree in broadcasting from Tennessee in 2001. He then came to Clemson, where he earned his master's degree in professional communication in 2005.

The Birmingham, AL native was born November 23, 1978 and is single.

Mike Dooley is in his fifth year with the Tiger football program and serves as director of high school relations & player personnel. He is responsible for maintaining and improving relationships between high school coaches and Clemson.

Prior to being hired at his current position, he served two years (2005-06) as a video graduate assistant (defense) and two years (2007-08) as a graduate assistant coach (offense) at Clemson. Dooley also served as interim tight ends coach in 2008 when Dabo Swinney was hired as head coach at midseason.

Dooley worked as an assistant coach at Greenville (SC) High School from 1998-04 before coming to Clemson. His responsibilities included defensive coordinator from 2000-04 and assistant head coach in 2004.

Dooley is a native of Toccoa, GA. He lettered as a defensive end at Furman from 1993-95. He was also an Academic Honor Roll member and received his degree in health & exercise science from Furman in 1998.

Jeff Davis is in his first year as assistant athletic director for player relations & external affairs within the Clemson football program. During the previous five years, he served as an assistant athletic director for fundraising, where he helped raise funds for the WestZone Club at Memorial Stadium. He also served as the primary spokesman for Clemson University's Call Me Mister Program and served as director of that program from 1999-03.

Davis was an All-America linebacker from 1978-81 who captained the Tigers during their 1981 National Championship run. "The Judge" registered a then-Clemson-record 175 tackles on the 1981 defense. That same season, he became just the third defensive player in ACC history to be named conference MVP. Davis registered 14 tackles as Clemson topped Nebraska 22-15 in the 1982 Orange Bowl to claim its first National Championship.

He was named to Clemson's Centennial Team in 1996. In 1995, he became the fourth member of the Clemson Ring of Honor. Then in 2002, he was named to the ACC's 50-Year Anniversary team.

In 2007, Davis was accorded the highest honor attainable for a college football player when he was inducted into the National Football Foundation College Football Hall of Fame. Davis has made a name for himself outside of the Clemson community. A fifth-round selection by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the 1982 NFL draft, he played six productive seasons in the NFL. During his time as a professional, Davis also completed his remaining coursework and graduated from Clemson in 1984.

In 1999, Davis returned to Clemson as field director of Call Me Mister. The program seeks to recruit, train, certify, and secure employment for African-American males as elementary teachers in the state's public schools. In 2001, he was awarded $100,000 for the program from Oprah Winfrey's "Angel Network."

He is president of Goal Line Stand, a group that supports young people as adults as they seek to remain committed to values that shape and govern their lives. Davis, an ordained pastor, lives in Clemson with his wife Joni and their six children.

Donald Hymel is in his 11th season with the Tiger football program as an assistant athletic director. His emphasis areas include working with pro scouts, handling coaches clinics and summer camps, team travel, official and unofficial campus visits by recruits, and serving as the liaison for ACC referees.

Hymel (pronounced heh-mel) came to Clemson after a three-year stint as an assistant equipment manager at Tulane. In 1998, he was an administrative assistant at Tulane in addition to his duties as assistant equipment manager.

Hymel was the head football equipment manager at Nicholls State before accepting his position at Tulane. He is familiar with the ACC, as he worked as a student assistant in North Carolina's recruiting office.

Hymel is a 1988 graduate of Louisiana State, where he was a student equipment manager. He also performed postgraduate studies at the U.S. Sports Academy in Mobile, AL. In 2000, Hymel married the former Dana Laspointe.

Andy Johnston is in his 13th year with the Tiger football program and currently serves as associate athletic director for football operations. His responsibilities include managing the program's day-to-day operations. In his first 12 years, Clemson has gone to 10 bowl games. Although this is his 12th year with the football program, he has been involved with the Clemson athletic department for 27 years. From 1983-97, he was the winningest women's tennis coach in school history.

In those 15 years, he guided his squads to five straight ACC titles (1983-87), 12 top-25 finishes, and six NCAA Tournaments. He had a 254-160 Clemson record and 263-167 career mark. He was the coach at Furman in 1982 before coming to Clemson.

Johnston played for Clemson on the hardwood and earned his degree in administrative management in 1979. He then served as the assistant men's tennis coach during the 1980 season.

Johnston is a native of Summerville, SC. He is married to the former Sophie Woorno. Johnston has a daughter Kirra (19) and a son Noah (2). A second daughter Carylynn passed away in 2008.

Danny Poole is in his ninth season as Clemson's director of sports medicine, but he is a veteran of more than 26 years working in the Tiger athletic training facility. He supervises the athletic training needs of all student-athletes, but his primary area of emphasis is with the football program. He has 29 years of full-time experience in the athletic training field.

Poole served as head athletic trainer for the Carolina Charg-ers of the American Football Association in 1979. In 1980, he became an assistant trainer at Memphis. As full-time assistant there, he earned his master's degree in health education.

A 1979 Western Carolina graduate, Poole earned a degree in health & physical education. He was student trainer for the Catamounts for four years. He was published in the NAT Journal in 1976, "The D.P. Method for Blasting's" as a student.

Poole was honored in 2001 by his peers with the Athletic Trainers Service Award. The award is presented by the National Athletic Trainers Association to role models who are future leaders of the training profession. The Charlotte, NC native is married to the former Beth Morgan. The couple has two daughters, Jacqui Elaine (22) and Abby Blair (20).

Clemson's Memorial Stadium has been held in high esteem for many years. Whether it be players from the 1940s and 1950s, opposing players from the 1970s and 1980s, or even professional players in the 1990s, the ambiance of this special setting is what college football is all about.

The storied edifice added to its legend when the first meeting of father and son head coaches (Bowden Bowl I) took place before a sellout crowd of more than 86,000 fans in 1999. Clemson has been in the top 20 in the nation in attendance 28 straight seasons. A crowd has exceeded 80,000 fans 55 times since the 1983 season. In 2008, Clemson was 18th in the nation in average home attendance with its 79,164 average.

The facility's mystique is derived from its many traditions, which date to its opening in 1942, the legendary games and players, and Clemson's corresponding rate of success. Clemson has won 243 games in 67 years there and has won over 71 percent of the games (245-96-7).

The stadium has definitely been good to the Tigers, but it was constructed against the advice of at least one coach. Just before Head Coach Jess Neely left for Rice after the 1939 season, he gave Clemson a message.

"Don't ever let them talk you into building a big stadium," he said. "Put about 10,000 seats behind the YMCA. That's all you'll ever need."

Instead of following Neely's advice, however, Clemson officials decided to build the new stadium in a valley on the western part of campus. The place took some clearing, as there were many trees, but luckily there were no hedges.

The crews went to work, clearing, cutting, pouring, and forming. Finally on September 19, 1942, Memorial Stadium opened with Clemson defeating Presbyterian

The next day, the boy was swollen twice his size and was hospitalized. There are many other stories about the stadium, including one that Frank Howard put a chew of tobacco in each corner as the concrete poured.

Howard said that the seeding of the grass caused a few problems. "About 40 people and I laid sod on the field," he said. "After three weeks on July 15, we had only gotten halfway through.

"It told me that it had taken us three weeks to get that far, and I would give them three more weeks' pay for however long it took. I also told them we would have 50 gallons of ice cream when we got through. After that, it took them three days to do the rest of the field. Then we sat down in the middle of the field and ate up that whole 50 gallons."

Howard said that on the day of the first game in the stadium, "the gates were hung at 1:00 and we played at 2:00. But that would be all of the construction for a while. Then in 1958, 18,000 sideline seats were added, and in 1960, 5,658 west endzone seats were added in response to increasing attendance. With the large east endzone ("Green Grass") section, this expansion increased capacity to 53,000.

Later, upper decks were added to each side of the stadium as crowds swelled - the first in 1978 and the second in 1983. It increased capacity to over 80,000, which makes it one of the nation's largest on-campus stadiums. In 2006, the WestZone was added, an area that contains locker rooms and a luxury club level that holds 1,000 seats.

The effect that inflation has had can be dramatically seen in the differences in stadium construction. The original part of Memorial Stadium was built at a cost of only $125,000, or $6.25 per seat. The stadium's newest upper deck was finished in 1983 at a cost of $13.5 million, or $866 per seat.

Through the years, Memorial Stadium has become known as "Death Valley." It was tagged by the late Presbyterian Coach Lonnie McMillan. After bringing his teams to Clemson for years and getting whipped, he said the place was like "Death Valley." A few years later, the name stuck.

In 1974, the playing surface was named Frank Howard Field for the legendary coach because of his long service and dedication to the University. Luckily, it wasn't built behind the Y.

Buckle Up. Drive Sober.

The Clemson Tiger buckles up and so should you. Make safety part of your game day routine.
What has been described as, “the most exciting 25 seconds in college football from a color and pageantry standpoint,” actually started out as a matter-of-fact entrance, mainly because of necessity.

The first 20,000 seats in Memorial Stadium were built and ready for use before the 1942 season, less than a year after Pearl Harbor was bombed and the United States was drawn into World War II.

The shortest entry into Memorial Stadium was a short walk down Williamson Road from Fike Fieldhouse’s dressing rooms to a gate at the top of the Hill, which is located behind the east endzone. There were no dressing facilities inside the west endzone of Memorial Stadium...there was only a giant clock, where the hands turned, and a scoreboard that was operated manually by hand.

The team would dress at Fike, walk down Williamson Road, come in the gate underneath where the scoreboard now stands, and jog down the Hill for its warm-up exercises. There was no fanfare, no cannon shot fired...no Tiger Paw flag...no “Tiger Rag” played...just the team making its entrance and lining up to do the side-straddle hop.

That is pretty much the way things went for the next 25 years.

Either in 1964 or 1965, S.C. Jones, a member of the class of 1919, made a trip to California. He stopped at a spot in Death Valley, CA and picked up a white flint rock. He presented it to Head Coach Frank Howard as being from Death Valley, California to Death Valley, South Carolina.

The rock laid on the floor in Howard’s office in Fike Fieldhouse for years. One day, he was cleaning up his office and told Gene Willimon, who was executive secretary of IPTAY, to “take this rock and throw it over the fence or out in the ditch...do something with it, but get it out of my office!”

Willimon did not think that was the way a rock should be treated. After all, it had been brought 3,000 miles by a very sincere Clemson fan.

By the mid-1960s, Memorial Stadium was living up to its moniker ("Death Valley") because of the number of Tiger wins that had been recorded there. Actually, the name was first used by Lonnie McMillan, head coach at Presbyterian during the 1940s.

McMillan and the other Blue Hose coaches before him used to open each season by playing at Clemson. Seldom scoring (24 shutouts in 39 games), and with only three victories and four ties to show for it, his teams were getting "killed" by the Tigers regularly. In 1948, McMillan made the comment to the press that he was taking his team to play Clemson in “Death Valley.”

An occasional reference to Memorial Stadium by that name could be heard for the next four years, but when Howard started calling it “Death Valley” in
In the early 1970s, the name took off like wildfire. Clemson celebrated its 67th year in the “Valley” in 2008. But getting back to Howard’s Rock.

The Rock was mounted on a pedestal at the top of the Hill on the east side of the stadium. It was unveiled September 24, 1966 when Clemson played Virginia. The Tigers were down 18 points with 17 minutes left and came back to win 40-35 on a 65-yard pass from Jimmy Addison to Jacky Jackson in the fourth quarter. That was quite a debut for the Rock.

The team members started rubbing the Rock prior to running down the Hill on September 23, 1967, a day when Clemson defeated Wake Forest by a score of 23-6.

Prior to running down the Hill that day, Howard told his players, “If you’re going to give me 110 percent, you can rub that Rock. If you’re not, keep your filthy hands off it.”

Howard told of the incident during the following day on his television show, and the story became legend.

When Hootie Ingram succeeded Howard as head coach prior to the 1970 campaign, Ingram decided that the team would make its final entrance on the field out of the dressing room in the west endzone. In all home games during the 1970 and 1971 seasons and the first four games of 1972 when the Tigers did not run down the Hill, their combined record was 6-9.

The team decided it wanted to come down the Hill once prior to the South Carolina contest during the 1972 season. The result, in a cold, freezing rain, was a 7-6 victory when Jimmy Williamson knocked down a two-point conversion attempt, which preserved the narrow win.

The Tigers have made the entrance for every home game since 1942, except for the seasons mentioned above (333 times entering the 2009 season).

After final warmups, the team gathers back in its dressing room under the west endzone stands for its final game instructions. Approximately 10 minutes prior to kickoff, the team boards three buses, rides around behind the north stands to the east endzone, and disembarks to the top of the Hill behind Howard’s Rock.

At the appointed time, the cannon booms, and led by a giant Tiger Paw flag, the band forms two lines for the team to run between and strikes up “Tiger Rag”...the frenzy starts in all sincerity and usually lasts for three hours.

It is a tradition that has inspired Clemson players for many years.

For the first time in Clemson football history, the everyday activities for the football program have moved to Memorial Stadium. On July 1, 2009, Tiger coaches moved into new offices in the WestZone of Memorial Stadium. A month later, the team made the locker room in Death Valley its full-time facility.

Additionally, a new equipment facility, athletic training facility, and strength training facility opened with all the modern conveniences of an NFL franchise's facility.

The new facility is 142,000 square feet, which adds over 50,000 square feet to previous facilities in the Jervey Athletic Center. It includes a two-floor strength training facility that is 14,000 square feet, among the largest dedicated solely for football in the nation.

"The motto for our program since I became head coach is 'All-in,'" said Head Coach Dabo Swinney. "This facility shows any Clemson football player, recruit, or supporter that our University is 'All-in' with this football program. The facility is among the best in the nation and allows our student-athletes to develop and become the best they can be."

The equipment room has been expanded to include, among other items, new offices and a new laundry room that encompasses approximately 6,000 square feet of space. The football staff offices and meeting rooms are composed of approximately 4,000 square feet of existing space and more than 18,000 square feet of new space.

The facility includes offices for the head coach, assistant coaches, and support staff along with position meeting rooms and a 150-seat auditorium with a sloped floor and theater seating.

The training room, located on the north side of the home team's locker room, is expanded to include a new hydrotherapy room, new offices, and examination rooms. The training room occupies about 6,200 square feet of space as well.

The level-three concourse has been expanded with the addition of the football offices. This space, the roof of the new football offices, is utilized for gameday marketing activities and to provide fans additional space to gather inside the stadium.

Clemson is committed to building a model sports program—one that propels our university into achieving and maintaining national athletic rankings that rival our competitors. The WestZone project is a major step forward in building a total sports program.

In order to be a consistent contender at the highest level of competition, Clemson must recruit the best student-athletes in the nation—student-athletes who can compete both academically and athletically. The nation’s best recruits are impressed by superior facilities, top coaches, and a strong sense of excitement along with school spirit. They desire an environment in which they will have a positive, nurturing experience.

It is not a coincidence that the quality of Clemson’s recruiting classes has improved dramatically since the WestZone project began in 2004.

Coaching is the most critical component of such an environment. An outstanding coach can sometimes transform meager resources into a good program, but the greatest success comes when top-quality coaching combined with top-quality facilities allows that coach to recruit successfully on a consistent and continuing basis.

Former Clemson running back James Davis, the 2005 ACC Rookie-of-the-Year, stated that one of the biggest contributing factors in deciding on Clemson was the University’s commitment to upgrading facilities. “Does Clemson want to be a championship program?” asked Davis when he was considering Clemson. “The WestZone (initiative) showed me that it does!”

Building success requires building for success. While the WestZone is located in Memorial Stadium, the completed project will provide resources for Clemson’s total sports program, permitting all Tiger teams and athletes to compete with the nation’s best. Moving all football operations to the WestZone has opened up space in the Jervey and McFadden buildings for the other 18 Clemson sports to improve their facilities for recruiting, and have more office, training, conditioning, and sports medicine space. This will greatly enhance the overall performance, both on and off the field of competition, for all 19 sports.

A look to Clemson’s history shows the importance infrastructure enhancements have on the football program. The following chart summarizes the relationship.

A significant aspect of Phase II of the WestZone project was the construction of a new strength training facility on the first floor that is adjacent to the Tiger locker rooms at the Frank Howard Field playing surface.

For the first time, there is a strength training facility exclusively for the development of the Tiger football team. Director of Strength & Conditioning Joey Batson, who is in his 13th season at Clemson, makes sure that all Tiger gridders are ready to compete against the top teams in the nation. In his first 12 years in Tigertown, Clemson has gone to 10 bowl games and he has coached 17 football strength All-Americans, including Tiger running back C.J. Spiller.

It is the fourth major facilities construction since Batson joined the program, an example of his desire to keep Clemson at the forefront of strength training.

The new facility has the best in all strength training equipment, not to mention the existence of a new sound system and nine new flat-screen televisions that give the Tiger football player a pleasant atmosphere to accomplish the most strenuous work.

The strength training facility actually has two floors. The first floor has all the free-weight equipment, including a dumbbell area, and the second floor is a cardio-equipment area.

Batson has a staff of eight assistants working with the football team. Joining Batson are veteran Strength Coaches David Abernethy and Larry Greenlee. Three more assistants deal in player development year-round. Those include former Tigers Damonte McKenzie and Marion Dukes along with Brandon McCombs.

Joey Batson is in his 24th year as a strength & conditioning coach at the collegiate level and 13th year as director of strength & conditioning at Clemson. He has served as a head strength & conditioning coach 20 of his 24 years of service.

Batson was named master strength & conditioning coach by the Collegiate Strength & Conditioning Coaches Association (CSCCA) in May of 2009. This honor is the highest given in the strength & conditioning coaching profession. Batson was presented with a blue MSCC jacket on May 7, 2009.

Batson has had a strong impact on the Clemson program since he became director in 1997. He has had much to do with the success of the football program, helping it to 1 bowl games and four top-25 final rankings. While at Clemson, he has worked for three head coaches and has had a tremendous impact in the state at many notable high school programs.

An example of his respect level in the profession is demonstrated by the number of former assistants who are now assistants and/or directors at other universities, including conferences such as the ACC and SEC along with several high-profile high school programs in the state.

Not only does Batson bring professional experience to the position at Clemson, he brings experience as a football player at the collegiate level. The Travelers Rest, SC native was a tight end at The Citadel in 1979 before transferring to Newberry, where he was a two-year letterman and team co-captain during his senior season.

Batson earned his bachelor of arts degree in physical education from Newberry in 1985 and his master's degree in education from Clemson in 1988. Prior to his collegiate career, Batson was named to the 1977 all-state football team as a defensive end in high school.

Batson is married to the former Susan Malone of Greenville, SC. The couple has two sons, Michael and Benjamin.

The University of Virginia was founded in 1819 by Thomas Jefferson, who outlined the institution’s purpose, designed its buildings, supervised construction, planned the curriculum, and directed the recruitment of the first faculty. As the first Rector of the University, Jefferson presided over the school’s governing body, known as the Board of Visitors. James Madison and James Monroe were members of the board in the early years.

When it opened for classes in 1825, the University of Virginia represented a dramatic innovation in American education. In an era when colleges trained students almost exclusively for teaching and the ministry, Jefferson dedicated his university to the education of leaders in practical affairs and public service.

Jefferson designed his "academical village" to house teachers and students alike in four long rows of rooms interspersed with larger buildings that provided classrooms and dwelling space for faculty families. The Rotunda is the focal point of the historic central grounds.

In 1976, the American Institute of Architects proclaimed the academical village one of the outstanding achievements of American architecture. Then in 1988, the Lawn was named to the prestigious World Heritage List. Although the University of Virginia has expanded to encompass more than 11,000 acres, it retains the intimacy that characterized the academical village.

The University of Virginia continues to excel in the U.S. News & World Report’s annual rankings. This past August, the publication placed Virginia as the nation’s #2 public university and tied for #24 overall among 248 national universities. Virginia also has the highest graduation rate among public universities.

What is Clemson?
world-changing service and leadership

Brave is a word you could use to describe Matt Summers. Before joining the Clemson Family to earn a master’s degree in real estate development, he spent five and a half years as a Green Beret. He served multiple tours, distinguishing himself with three Bronze Stars for valor and a Purple Heart for injuries sustained in Afghanistan.

He called on the skills he learned as an undergraduate at Bucknell University to help him grow as a leader during his time with the U.S. Special Forces — developing strategy, leading missions, training Afghan nationals, and designing and constructing camp housing for Special Forces teams and their support personnel.

When his military service ended, Summers decided to follow in his father’s footsteps and pursue a career in real estate development. He says, “I felt I needed a way to transition back into civilian life — a way to re-sharpen my professional skill set.”

Summers chose to come to Clemson after meeting with faculty. “The chemistry was great,” he says, “and the program’s reputation is spreading like wildfire.” Summers graduated in May 2009 with a 4.0 GPA and the Ric Ritter Award for Spirit and Service. “Grad school was a great idea; Clemson was an even better idea. The stars kind of lined up for me to come here.”
Thomas Green Clemson believed that South Carolina needed an institution of higher education dedicated to science and agriculture. With his belief came the foundation that was laid for Clemson Agricultural College. On April 6, 1888, Thomas Clemson died, leaving most of his estate to the state of South Carolina with the purpose of establishing a college that would teach scientific agriculture and the mechanical arts to the young people of South Carolina.

The college formally opened its doors in 1893 with an enrollment of 446 students. As an all-male military school, it quickly became recognized across the nation as an important part of the national system of state universities and land-grant colleges. In 1955, Clemson became a civilian co-educational college. As the school expanded its academic offerings and research pursuits, the state legislature renamed it Clemson University in 1964.

Today, the University is much more than Thomas Clemson could have ever envisioned. The campus is located on 1,400 acres of beautiful rolling hills on what once was the plantation of former U.S. Vice President John C. Calhoun. Landmarks such as Fort Hill, the former home of the Clemsons and the Calhouns, Tillman Hall with its clocktower and Carillon Garden, the statue of Thomas Green Clemson, and the outdoor amphitheater all help retain the air of tradition.

Clemson University Facts

- U.S. News & World Report ranked Clemson the leading university in South Carolina and #22 among the nation’s top public universities in August of 2009. The university’s goal is to be one of the top-20 public universities in the nation. Clemson has improved 52 spots since 1997.
- Clemson’s five colleges include Agriculture, Forestry, & Life Sciences; Architecture, Arts, & Humanities; Business & Behavioral Science; Engineering & Science; and Health, Education, & Human Development.
- Kiplinger’s magazine ranks Clemson #34 among public institutions in its roundup of institutions providing a top-quality education at a reasonable price.
- The Program for Educational Enrichment and Retention (PEER) helped bring Clemson’s graduation rate of African-American engineering students to the highest in the nation among predominantly non-historically black schools.
- Fike Recreation Center, which just completed a renovation and expansion project, has a host of opportunities for students to let off steam through physical activity. Inside Fike is an eight-lane swimming pool, a diving tank, two gyms for basketball and other activities, various weightlifting facilities, and room for aerobics. Outside Fike are several spacious fields used for the extensive intramural program and for student enjoyment. There are indoor and lighted outdoor tennis courts across the street at Hoke Sloan Tennis Center.
- The Hendrix Student Center is a 108,000 square-foot facility in the heart of Clemson’s campus that contains a convenience store, food court, movie theater, and bookstore. The center has 15,000 square feet of meeting rooms and a 2,600-square-foot student lounge. It is also the home of the Michelin Career Center, student media, and Campus Life offices.
- The Michelin Career Center can help with planning and finding summer and full-time employment. The office assists in career counseling and planning, searching for a job, preparing resumes, and developing job interview strategies. Resources include staff expertise, books, videotapes, and literature provided by companies and agencies. Clemson has developed one of the best automated placement systems in the country, allowing students to research employers and sign up for interviews from any mainframe computer terminal on campus.
- The Princeton Review ranked Clemson students the nation’s #1 “Happiest Student Body” in 2008.
Since its inception in 1991, the Student-Athlete Enrichment Programs have provided student-athletes a continued commitment to excellence. Our approach is to address the total student-athlete, and we are committed to coaching our student-athletes to success in the academic, personal growth, career, and community service arenas.

As an original member of the NCAA CHAMPS/Life Skills Program, we provide opportunities and services to address the changing needs and skills of student-athletes during college and after graduation. This program was selected for the PBS Athletic Director's Association "Program of Excellence" Award, a lifetime award recognizing CHAMPS/Life Skills excellence.

Clemson's commitment to provide its student-athletes with the best facilities is evident in many ways. From the soaring upper decks of Memorial Stadium and the beautiful WestZone, to the "New Littlejohn Coliseum," to the state-of-the-art strength training facility, young men and women from all of Clemson's intercollegiate varsity sports have the best in facilities for both training and competition.

The Student-Athlete Enrichment Programs are housed in Vickery Hall, located in the center of campus. The $3-million structure is as impressive aesthetically as other athletic facilities. It recently underwent $300,000 in renovations to further assist our student-athletes in the classroom. But the importance of Vickery Hall to our student-athletes is not found in the structure itself, but in the many programs that the building houses.

Vickery Hall opened in the fall of 1991 and was the first facility in the country constructed solely to provide academic support to student-athletes. The two-story, 27,000 square-foot building is open all day and into the evening hours to accommodate the student-athletes' extended schedules.

Vickery Hall programs are dedicated to providing a holistic, educational experience by inspiring an environment of respect, integrity, and excellence. Through these services, Vickery Hall guides and encourages each individual to reach his or her full potential as a student, athlete, and citizen.

Academic Commitment

Clemson's 19 sports programs had an overall GPA of 2.97 for the 2009 spring semester, the highest on record. Additionally, 242 of the 448 student-athletes (54 percent) were named to the Academic Honor Roll (3.0 GPA or better). That is a record for the highest percentage of student-athletes on the Academic Honor Roll for one semester.

The Tiger football team had a record 44 of its 96 student-athletes earn a 3.0 GPA or better. The previous record was 41 during the fall of 2000. The team GPA in Dabo Sweeney's first full semester as head coach was 2.61, the second-highest team GPA on record.

The list of football team members on the Aca-
Academic Honor Roll included starters Kevin Alexander, Thomas Austin, DaQuan Bowers, Mason Clay, Rashaad Jackson, Jimmy Maners, Brandon Maye, Akeem Robinson, and Ricky Sapp. Thirteen of the players on the roster made the Dean’s List (3.50 to 3.99 GPA), including Austin, a starting offensive guard, and Maye, a starting linebacker. Both are returning All-ACC Academic players. Maners received an ACC Postgraduate Scholarship and was inducted into Clemson’s initial Phi Beta Kappa class in 2008 as well.

The Clemson football program had the most Academic Honor Roll members (44), seven more than the rowing program. It marked the first time since the spring of 2002 that the football team had the department’s most Academic Honor Roll members.

Clemson had five student-athletes on the All-ACC Academic team in 2008, including C.J. Spiller, who was First-Team All-ACC on the field and in the classroom. He made the Dean’s List in the first semester with a 3.5 GPA. He also became the first running back in Tiger history to earn First-Team All-ACC honors on the field and in the classroom in the same academic year.

Athletic Commitment
It was a noteworthy year for Clemson athletics in 2008-09. From a team standpoint in the high-profile sports of football, basketball, and baseball, Clemson played in a bowl game, the NCAA Men’s Basketball Tournament, and the NCAA Baseball Tournament in the same year for the first time since the 1997-98 academic year. It was just the eighth time in history that it played in all three major postseason events in the same academic year, as Clemson was one of just 13 schools to do so.

Clemson received team bids to NCAA Tournaments in women’s volleyball, men’s basketball, women’s tennis, rowing, men’s golf, and baseball, and the Tigers were ranked in the top 25 of the final polls in men’s basketball, women’s tennis, rowing, men’s golf, men’s indoor track & field, and baseball.

It was a landmark year for the Tiger rowing program. Richard Ruggieri led Clemson to a team bid in the NCAA Championships for the first time and the varsity 4+ boat won the national title.

There were many remarkable individual performances as well. In addition to the women in the National Championship varsity 4+ boat (Allison Colberg, Callen Erdey, Lydia Hassell, Kelly Murphy, Meredith Razzolini), Jacoby Ford won the NCAA title in the 60m indoors. Kyle Stanley won the Ben Hogan Award as the nation’s top golfer and finished second at the NCAA Championships.

Clemson University is defined by its “determined spirit” — the shared sense that drives our progress, unites us as a family and pushes us to reach greater heights. In fact, the very foundation of the University rests on the determination of Thomas Green Clemson.

Determined spirit is in our DNA.

A new set of communications tools will better convey what we all know to be true — there is no other place like Clemson. Over the next few months, you will see a refreshed look in our print and online communications. But what you love about Clemson's brand — the Tiger Paw and Clemson Orange — are still there, only stronger. Rest assured that Clemson's DNA and our commitment to honoring it have not changed.

This brief NCAA rules education is aimed at outlining basic recruiting rules to help potential Tiger student-athletes and parents better understand the extensive process. Clemson University is committed to recruiting and conducting our athletic program with the highest level of integrity. If you have questions about NCAA rules, please contact Clemson's compliance services at (864) 656-1540 or through our website at ClemsonTigers.com and click on compliance.

Important NCAA Terms

Academic Credentials - A prospect should check with his high school guidance office to see if he is taking classes that will meet NCAA eligibility standards. A prospect should do this early (prior to his sophomore year) and keep track of core courses. A prospect will need to take either the ACT or SAT for NCAA certification.

Contact - NCAA rules define a contact as a face-to-face interaction with a prospect and/or his parents by a coach off Clemson's campus. The NCAA sets a contact period for football prospects from late November through the end of January. That is the only time coaches can meet with a prospect away from the Clemson campus.

Core Courses - Courses at a prospect's high school that are considered college preparatory. The NCAA requires 16 core courses, including four in English, three in math, two in science, one additional from English, math, or science, two social sciences, and two additional courses. A high school prospect's guidance counselor will have a list of the school's core courses (489), or visit the NCAA Eligibility Center's website at EligibilityCenter.com for more information.

Dead Period - Recruiting period when coaches may not have face-to-face contact with prospects on or off campus. Coaches may continue to telephone and write a prospect.

Evaluation - In April and May of a prospect's junior year, coaches will visit a prospect's high school and review his athletic and academic credentials with his coach. In the fall, they may watch a prospect compete one time but will not have any contact.

Home Visit - During the contact period, a senior prospect may invite college coaches to his home to meet his parents and talk in detail about the football program and academic offerings at any college the prospect is considering.

Prospect - Any student who has entered the ninth grade. Once a person becomes a prospect, NCAA rules define how college coaches can interact with that prospect.

Receiving Mail - Prior to September 1 of a prospect's junior year, NCAA rules allow Clemson to mail a questionnaire, NCAA educational information, and a summer camp brochure to a prospect. After September 1 of the prospect's junior year, coaches can provide a prospect with personalized letters, a media guide, and copies of newspaper articles. A prospect can receive a football game program when he visits the Clemson University campus.

Recruiting - A term used to describe the process of recruiting a prospect with a college and the coaches of that college who are striving to learn more about a prospect. Only coaches can recruit. No one else is permitted to persuade a prospect to play at a particular college.

Standardized Test - A prospect must take the ACT or SAT before enrolling in college full-time. A prospect may take the ACT or SAT more than once and use the best subscore from different tests to achieve the highest score. Both Clemson and the NCAA Eligibility Center require scores to be reported directly from the testing agency. When registering for the test, list the Eligibility Center Code (9999) and Clemson (1842) (ACT), 5111 (SAT). Clemson University admissions requires students to present either an ACT or SAT writing score. The writing score will not be used to determine a prospect's qualifier status.

Telephone - Clemson football coaches can call a prospect once in May during the prospect's junior year. After September 1 of a prospect's senior year, a coach can make a call only once a week. A prospect can expect unlimited calls during the contact period. Before his official visit and once the prospect has signed a National Letter of Intent (NLI), coaches may call only once a day.

Frequently Asked Questions

- Are a prospect's parents invited for an official visit? Yes. NCAA rules allow a school to provide lodging and meals for parents or legal guardians who accompany their child. However, NCAA rules do not allow schools to provide transportation for parents unless they drive with their son.

- Can a prospect visit Clemson anytime during his high school career? Yes. A prospect can have his high school coach contact Clemson coaches to set up an unofficial visit. He can attend a football game and talk with Tiger coaches, but he does not count as a contact when it is on Clemson's campus. There are times when a prospect cannot visit...NCAA rules refer to them as "dead periods," as coaches will not schedule to meet with a prospect during that time.

- Can IPTAY members help recruit? No. NCAA rules are clear...only Clemson coaches can telephone, contact, and evaluate a prospect. Only college coaches can offer unofficial and official visits.

- What is a National Letter of Intent (NLI)? It is a contract. A prospect and his parents sign a promise that the prospect will attend a particular college. In return, that college promises a financial aid. A prospect signs a National Letter of Intent during his senior year (in February for football). Once the prospect signs a National Letter of Intent, he cannot be recruited by any other institution, and it is a binding contract for the prospect's first year in college at the school that provides the National Letter of Intent.

- What is an official visit? A prospect is allowed to take a total of five official visits (one per institution), which are expense-paid. Before the official visit, the prospect must present his high school transcript, proof of an ACT, PACT, SAT, or PSAT test, and be registered with the NCAA Eligibility Center. Official visit invitations are extended by Clemson coaches only. Official visits may not be taken prior to the first day of classes during the prospect's senior year of high school.

- What is the NCAA Eligibility Center? It is the agency that certifies a prospect's initial academic and amateur eligibility for both NCAA Division I and Division II. A prospect should register with the NCAA Eligibility Center at the conclusion of his junior year in high school online at EligibilityCenter.com. Cost is $60. Remember to keep the PIN in a place for easy retrieval. A prospect should request the guidance counselor to send a transcript after his junior year and final transcript after graduation. A prospect should also request a final amateur decision beginning on April 1 of his senior year.

The IPTAY Representative program continues to be one of the most important marketing tools available for the growth of the IPTAY Scholarship Fund. This group of over 650 women and men throughout the country volunteer their time to encourage those in their communities and in their circle of influence to join IPTAY on an annual basis and to support Clemson in all endeavors. Despite economic challenges throughout the state and region, IPTAY had a successful 2009 campaign due to the tireless efforts of this group.

The recruitment of new donors, those that have a potential for leadership gifts and creating a link between Clemson, and its constituents is the goal of each IPTAY representative. With the continued leadership provided by the IPTAY Board of Directors and our past presidents, the REP program will continue to be successful. If you are interested in becoming an IPTAY representative, please contact the chairperson in your area or visit ClemsonTigers.com.

History of IPTAY

The IPTAY Scholarship Foundation, founded in 1934, was the first scholarship fundraising organization in collegiate athletics. Its roots trace back to October 16, 1931, following a surprising 6-0 football loss to The Citadel. After the game, captains Frank Jervey and Pete Hefner, along with Head Coach Jess Neely and Assistant Coach Joe Davis met in a car outside the stadium in Florence, SC to discuss various ways Clemson could establish its football program to a competitive status.

Shortly after the meeting, Dr. Rupert Fike offered his help after corresponding with Jervey. Neely believed he could run a successful football team if he was provided a $10,000-a-year increase in scholarships. Initially, Jervey called for members to pay $30 a year, but Fike recommended a smaller amount, which he believed would lead to more members. Fike charged 100 people to step forward and pay $10 a year, which is where the name IPTAY (I Pay Ten A Year) originated.

The purpose of IPTAY is to provide annual financial scholarship support to the athletic department and to assist in every way possible to regain the high athletic prestige which rightfully belongs to Clemson.

In 1934, the first year of IPTAY, over $1,600 was raised by the organization. Some donors negotiated payments in the form of bartering because of the Great Depression. Milk, sweet potatoes, turnip greens, and other goods were accepted in an attempt to build a solid membership base.

However, the hard work of Fike and his colleagues began to pay off during the 1939 season, as the Tigers went to their first bowl game, the 1940 Cotton Bowl, where they defeated Boston College 6-3 and finished the season in the top-25 of the AP poll. Coincidentally, IPTAY reached Neely’s $10,000 goal for the first time in 1939.

In 2009, IPTAY has over 15,000 annual donors and over 5,000 Collegiate Club members who continue Fike’s mission of providing annual scholarship support for Clemson’s student-athletes, paying the operating expenses of IPTAY, and maintaining an adequate reserve fund deemed appropriate by the IPTAY Board of Directors. Our donors’ contributions ensure that all 19 varsity sports annually obtain the maximum amount of scholarships offered by the NCAA.

Even though the mission of IPTAY set forth in 1934 remains the same, its scope has grown tremendously over the years. IPTAY not only provides annual athletic scholarships, but it has also provided over 1,600 academic scholarships and raised over $3.5 million through the IPTAY Academic Scholarship Endowment, which was established in 1982.

IPTAY has been the key in building and maintaining the outstanding facilities essential for Clemson to remain one of the top programs in the country. It has played a critical role in various construction projects and renovations throughout the athletic department. In addition to fulfilling the mission of raising funds for scholarships, IPTAY has played a vital role in providing a wide variety of amenities enjoyed by all students, including being a strong supporter of Tiger Band through payment of new uniforms, instruments, and travel expenses.

IPTAY is considered by many to be the father of athletic fundraising. It was the first organization in the nation to build and fund an academic support facility built solely for educational support of student-athletes. Vickery Hall opened in 1991 and has established itself as a nationally-recognized program for student-athlete support.

The IPTAY Collegiate Club, started in 1997, continues to be the model student fundraising organization in the country. The IPTAY Representative program continues to be a leadership group that grows the IPTAY organization through its role as volunteer annual fundraisers.

Operating under the guidance of its board of directors and the leadership of the athletic department's external affairs division, IPTAY continuously receives the annual support of our donors.

Some changes in recent years include the addition of the Tiger Cub Club, CATS (Clemson Active Teen Support), and the Collegiate Club, an update in its database technology, and the addition of two new levels to IPTAY membership, the Howard ($2,100) and McFadden ($5,600) levels of giving.

IPTAY introduced the endowed position program under former Executive Director George Bennett. IPTAY implemented the program in April of 1994 during the 85th birthday celebration for former Clemson Head Coach Frank Howard. The first endowed honored Howard, who coached the Tigers for 39 seasons and established much of Clemson football’s storied traditions.

The Heisman Scholarship Level, established in 2005, is IPTAY's highest annual donation level. IPTAY Executive Director Bert Henderson set a goal to recreate Fike’s 1934 vision of having 100 people come forward giving $10 annually. The 100-fan-member goal for the $10,000 donation level was not only reached but surpassed thanks to the generous support of our donors.

Under the department of external affairs, IPTAY will expand its organizational service to move toward a broader scope of full-service. This will include capital gifts, improved marketing plans, estate planning, and increasing our membership through our representative program.

For more information on how you can support Clemson University, our student-athletes, and band members, please call the IPTAY office at Memorial Stadium at 1-800-CLEMSON or log on to ClemsonTigers.com.
Our Heisman Donors have made a commitment to support IPTAY at our highest annual level. If you would like more information about becoming a Heisman Donor, please contact the IPTAY office at (864) 656-2115.

Tiger Band is pleased to announce one of its own, Larry Sloan, as a 2009 Distinguished Alumni Service Award recipient. He played trumpet in Tiger Band from 1969-74, earning a degree in mechanical engineering. He was also Tiger Band Commander, the highest-elected student officer in Tiger Band, for the 1973 season.

Almost immediately upon graduation from Clemson, Larry not only began a successful career in engineering, but he also asked how he could continue to help Tiger Band. He has served as a volunteer videoographer for the band for well over 20 years, and along with his wife Cindy, they have served as band chaperones just as long. These two services to the band have required an enormous sacrifice of time over the years.

In 1977, Larry had the vision to realize that the Clemson Bands needed to raise scholarship money for worthy band students. Out of his home, along with a few other band alumni, he founded CUTBA (Clemson University Tiger Band Association). Through sheer force of will and perseverance, that scholarship program has resulted in an endowment approaching $400,000.

Three years ago, Larry retired from the company he founded and wanted to give even more to the band. He had another vision, the Tiger Band Commitment, to raise $2 million by July 1, 2008. Again, through his leadership and will to succeed, the Commitment actually exceeded its goal by over $300,000 gifts and bequests. This will ensure that future generations of Tiger Band members will have the opportunity to receive scholarship assistance from the band. Many of the larger gifts to the Tiger Band Commitment were directly solicited by Larry, which again speaks to his influence over generations of Tiger Band alumni.

In addition to the band, Larry is very passionate about Tiger athletics. He has been a significant IPTAY donor for decades and a season ticketholder in football, basketball, and baseball. He lives and breathes Clemson sports in the most positive sense. One of his greatest joys was being able to experience Clemson's football national championship in the Orange Bowl. He bleeds orange!

Larry not only has been great to Clemson, but he has first and foremost been a family man. He has been married to Cindy for 37 years and raised two sons. The oldest (Chris) went on to become Tiger Band Commander in 1996, as they remain the only father-and-son commanders in the band's history. The younger son (Scott) felt the patriotic calling and attended the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD. He has served in the Pentagon and has provided the Sloan family with their newest members (and future Tiger Band members), three adorable grandchildren.

In 2007, Larry, along with Chris, established an annual award to be given to the Tiger Band Commander. This commitment shows his continuing dedication, both in time and money, to Tiger Band, which is proud and grateful.

Today's Show
Joining Tiger Band on the field during pregame are 100 high school band seniors who are visiting on a recruiting trip. The halftime show will pay tribute to our military and veterans, including the armed services songs and a rousing conclusion to Lee Greenwood's "God Bless the USA."

Protecting football fans over 75 years. Are you in Good Hands®?

Omaha! When anyone mentions the Clemson baseball program, it is usually one of the first words that comes to mind. In fact, it is etched on the back of all the players’ hats. And once again, it is at the forefront of senior infielder Mike Freeman’s mind going into the 2010 season. For Freeman, baseball has been a part of his entire life.

“I wanted to play like my brothers did, so when I was four, my parents created a tee-ball league so I could start playing,” recalled Freeman.

As he got older, Freeman began playing more and more baseball, including on travel teams, and attended baseball showcases. While in high school, Freeman had the opportunity to compete in several all-star games. He played in the state of Florida All-Star game as well as the Central Florida All-Star game, where he was the defensive MVP.

After he was named a state all-star, Freeman was drafted by the San Diego Padres in the 41st round. Instead, he chose to attend college and let the pros wait. Freeman spent his freshman season at Georgia. In 48 games (40 starts), he hit .237 with four doubles and eight RBIs. After the season, he played for Keene in the New England Collegiate Baseball League. Freeman’s teammates with the Swamp Bats included former Tigers Ben Paulsen and Matt Vaughn.

Hearing both Tigers talk about the Clemson program, Freeman became interested. After acquiring more information and talking with his parents and coaches, he decided to transfer to Clemson.

Freeman made an immediate impact with the Tigers in 2008. In 54 games (52 starts), #5 hit a team-best .332 with 46 runs, eight doubles, one homer, 19 RBIs, and a .401 on-base percentage. Among the highlights for Freeman were a string of five-straight, two-hit games in May and a career game in a victory over UNC Greensboro, in which he was 3-for-4 with a grand slam (also his first career home run), two runs, five RBIs, and a stolen base.

Following the season, Freeman was invited to play in the prestigious Cape Cod League. He played 44 games and hit .274 with the Brewster Whitecaps. He also received the team’s Citizenship Award. Looking back, he has fond memories of his time in summer ball.

“It was great because you meet so many players from all over the country that otherwise you would never be able to meet,” stated Freeman. “It was a great experience to play against the best players in the country and hold your own against them.”

As a co-captain in 2009, Freeman hit .328 and started all 66 games at second base, one of only three Tigers to start every game. He had 60 runs, 16 doubles, five triples, four homers, 44 RBIs, and 11 stolen bases.

The Orlando, FL native excelled during the 2009 postseason. In 10 games, he led the team with a .400 batting average and was named to the Clemson Regional All-Tournament team while going 11-for-22 (.500) with seven RBIs and six runs in the five games. It also provided Freeman with his most memorable game at Clemson in the regional championship game against Oklahoma State.

“It was awesome to watch our team fight back and to see Kyle Parker come off the bench and get such a clutch hit,” he said. “To be a part of the sprint to the ‘Cheap Seats’ is something I will never forget.”

After being drafted again following the 2009 season, Freeman once again put that part of his career on hold to come back and help get Clemson back to Omaha. This season, Freeman hopes to continue to be a consistent leader of the team.

“We want to be the best team in the ACC and have an opportunity to play at home in a regional and super regional, where we can win in front of our fans to go to Omaha,” said Freeman when asked about some goals for the season.

Looking back on his time so far as a Tiger, Freeman has enjoyed playing in front of Tiger fans at Doug Kingsmore Stadium. “It is great to be able to go out and play in front of such enthusiastic fans at Doug Kingsmore Stadium, knowing that they love baseball and want to win just as much as the team does.”

Freeman has had many people impact and influence his baseball career. His parents, brothers, and grandmother have always had the biggest influence on him. Head Coach Jack Leggett has also made a huge impact on his career.

“There is not another coach in the country who has his passion or cares more about his players than Coach Leggett. No one works as hard as he does to put his players in the best position to win.”

Freeman, a two-time All-ACC Academic team member and a member of the All-SEC Academic team while at Georgia, will graduate in May with a degree in financial management. He hopes to continue playing baseball for as long as he can.

Michelle Nance is unlike most athletes at Clemson in that she had no previous experience in her sport prior to her arrival in Tigertown. But in just three years, Nance has gone from being a walk-on to a competitor in the world rowing championships.

“The whole experience has been a whirlwind,” said Nance. “I knew absolutely nothing about the sport when I got here. I didn’t even know which side was port and which side was starboard, and then I started learning all of this technical stuff. There is so much to rowing that you don’t even realize.”

Nance ran cross country and played soccer at Mauldin (SC) High School. She had opportunities to continue her soccer career at some smaller colleges, but her heart was set on going to a bigger school like Clemson. During her first few days on campus, she met someone who encouraged her to walk-on to the rowing team.

“At first, I wasn’t really sure about it, but I went through the tryout process and fell in love with the sport,” remembered Nance.

Nance spent her first year on the novice team, but she earned a spot in the top boat from the start of her varsity career as a sophomore. She has rowed with the Varsity 8+ in all but one race since she has been on the varsity team. She was a member of the Varsity 8+ crew that reached the 2008 NCAA Rowing Championships for the first time in school history, and she returned to the prestigious regatta again in 2009.

Nance’s most memorable accomplishment as a Tiger was as a member of the first ACC Championship team in school history last season. Nance’s crew defeated Virginia for the first time in the history of the league regatta en route to being honored as the ACC Crew-of-the-Year. She also took home All-ACC honors for the first time in her career. Nance credits her teammates along with their dedication and hard work in making her experience special.

“The feeling of all of us coming together and keeping it at was awesome,” said Nance. “For the first time, we really believed that we could win. It wasn’t so much the final outcome, but the journey.”

However, Nance’s rowing accomplishments have extended beyond her career at Clemson. She is a two-time participant in the Under-23 World Championships. In the summer of 2008, she and three Clemson teammates along with Head Coach Richard Ruggieri traveled to Brandenburg, Germany to represent the United States, as they finished fourth in the world.

She made the world championship team again this past summer, but this year she gave sculling a try for the first time. Always up for a challenge, Nance was used to sweep, or using only one oar while rowing, while sculling involves using two oars at one time.

“The first day of camp, I had never sculled before and I caught about five crabs and failed miserably,” admitted Nance. “The thing about this summer for me was knowing that through my failures, I was getting better and learning a lot.”

Nance persevered throughout a long summer of training to finish ninth at the world championships in Racice, Czech Republic.

Not only has Nance succeeded on the water, she has excelled in the classroom and the community. She was selected as the Scholar Athlete-of-the-Year by the ACC last season. Nance has earned a variety of academic awards throughout her career, including twice being named a National Scholar Athlete by the Collegiate Rowing Coaches Association, and she is a two-time member of the ACC All-Academic team.

Nance received the Blue Key Academic & Leadership Award last year, which is given to one student in each of the five academic colleges who has distinguished themselves in terms of academic scholarship and campus leadership.

As though getting up before sunrise for rowing practice every day and maintaining a high grade point average are not enough to keep her busy, Nance is also very involved on campus. She currently serves as the president of the Solid Orange Squad, an elite group of over 100 student-athletes who fills all requests for service received by the athletic department.

“It has been a great experience so far this year. Not only does it involve going to the events, but I’m responsible for finding people to go, coordinating where we go, when we go, and what we are doing.”

Nance is also the captain of the rowing squad’s Relay for Life team. She recently helped organize an ultimate frisbee competition to raise money with her teammates. In addition, she serves as the vice president of the Language & International Trade Society.

“I’m the kind of person who has to stay busy,” said Nance. “I’m doing a lot right now. I can’t even keep it all straight!”

Nance is majoring in language & international trade with an emphasis in Spanish, although she has also taken German classes for fun.

“We like to say I’m two-and-a-half lingual,” smiled Nance.

She will have an opportunity to perfect her Spanish skills when she studies abroad in Alicante, Spain next fall. Her major requires a study-abroad experience prior to graduation, so Nance is looking forward to the opportunity before she graduates in December.

For now, Nance is focused on building upon recent successes during the spring rowing season, which begins March 6 on Lake Hartwell.

PROGRESS OF THE WESTZONE INITIATIVE

By William Qualkinbush

For several football seasons, construction has dominated the landscape on the west side of Memorial Stadium. As time passed and it seemed like progress was slow, athletic officials insisted that upon completion, the WestZone would be one of the finest football facilities in the country.

Now that Phase II of the WestZone Initiative is finished, Tiger fans can see first-hand that those assurances were accurate. The patience of fans has been rewarded, and although the project is still not totally completed, Clemson can boast of a facility that is top-of-the-line in many aspects.

"It impacts every person that comes to the stadium on gameday," said Associate Athletic Director Robert Ricketts. "It impacts the fans with more seating and better accessibility. It impacts the vendors because they are more centralized and it keeps them away from the field of play. It impacts the team because they have state-of-the-art facilities all in one place. It makes for a clean and smooth operation that benefits everyone."

Having been heavily involved in the process since the planning stages, Ricketts pointed out several issues that the construction of the WestZone addresses. First, it connected the concourse of the stadium in a way that gives fans the ability to walk around the stadium on one level. Next, it created a prime spot for more premium seats for key donors and an opportunity to put all concessions on the same level. These goals were met with the first wave of development.

The most recent additions have transformed the interior of the building into what graduate tight end Durrell Barry calls a "recruiting charm." The amenities include a high-tech team room, office space for coaches and support staff, an expanded equipment room, individual position rooms, an upgraded weightroom, and upgraded locker rooms.

Veteran Tigers that have seen the changes in the WestZone are impressed by the way their day-to-day routines have been positively impacted by the creation of the structure. They are also confident that recruiting, an aspect of the program that has trended upward in recent years, will be helped as a result.

"When I was being recruited, there really wasn't much going on," admitted cornerback Coty Sensabaugh. "It was just getting started. I remember coaches and players talking about how great it was going to be. As you can see now, it's an exclusive building. It's ahead of its time. I think it's really good for recruits, because we do everything over there. It really is a wonderful building."

"It's already impacting people," added senior wideout Jacoby Ford. "It's a great facility that we have built here. Now, we don't even go to the other side of the street. We're pretty much over here all the time. They have done a great job with this whole facility. It still wowes me every day when I walk in here, just to have the chance to be in a place like this and to play in it."

There is ample evidence that the existence of such a modern structure is that fully focused on the football program and serving its needs is already paying dividends. Freshman quarterback Tajh Boyd chose to play at Clemson late in the recruiting process after his good friend, wide receiver Bryce McNeal, announced he would play for the Tigers. Boyd credited the WestZone as one of the contributing factors in his decision.

"It's state-of-the-art," stated Boyd, a native of Hampton, VA. "Even a little thing like having a new facility means that the program is on the rise. It plays a big part, because you always want to go where everything is going to be nice and upgraded. You want to play at that type of program."

While the McFadden Building was a nice facility, particularly after renovations a few years ago, there was a need to build something on-site at Memorial Stadium. The idea of having all football operations under one roof was important for Ricketts and the athletic administration, and the chance to showcase Clemson's football heritage in one place was a driving force behind the design. The overall concept was driven by Athletic Director Terry Don Phillips, who oversaw a similar project when he was Oklahoma State's athletic director.

When the building is totally completed, Ricketts is sure it will give fans, players, staff members, and recruits a look at how Tiger football has developed over the years from a wide range of perspectives.

"If you follow it through, you'll get the full history of Clemson football," said Ricketts. "It is great for recruits to see what they can accomplish here at Clemson. Everything in there has a purpose. It tells a unique story."

As complete as the building looks now, the project is still in the developmental stage. Phase III of the initiative includes further renovations to the northwest corner, the addition of an oculus (cylindrical structure) at the front of the building that will connect to it, and the creation of a museum that will showcase the history of Clemson University and its athletic programs. Once all of this work has been accomplished, the WestZone will be a place that is symbolic of the totality of Tiger athletics, while still specializing in the day-to-day operations for the football team.

For Boyd, the extra benefits provided by the WestZone already - particularly the team room and its video-game systems, stylish furniture, and relaxed atmosphere - have made his Tiger experience enjoyable.

"At McFadden, we didn't really have a team room, so we didn't really have a chance to relax," admitted Boyd. "Seeing something like that over here, it makes a big difference."

If all goes according to plan over the next few years, the newest addition to Death Valley will attract more players like Boyd to the university and inspire them to play within the walls of Memorial Stadium.

Clemson University has long been known for its rich military tradition, as well as a football pedigree that has included some of the game's most influential names. When Head Coach Dabo Swinney made the decision to bring Dan Brooks on board in March, he hired a man that spans both worlds with a timeless grit, keen sensitivity, and respect for the parallels that link the university's heritage with its football prowess.

Brooks speaks with a strong voice that commands nothing less than full attention at all times. At the same time, it is difficult not to get lost in how carefully he chooses his words when speaking of his respect for those who have served in the United States military. That is because it comes from a man who himself served in the Army for three years, and whose father was a career military man.

Although he has been a part of the Tiger family for a short time, Brooks has quickly learned to appreciate the parallels between football and military heritage at the former Clemson College. And while it would be unwise to suggest that the stakes are similar in the military and football, there are strong correlations in operations, interactions, and goal-setting.

While no longer a military university, Clemson is careful to honor its 473 alumni who have paid the ultimate price, from World War I to the present conflicts, on the Scroll of Honor. In 2007, the Campus Corps, in conjunction with the athletic department and the campus planning office, developed a concept to build a Scroll of Honor Memorial adjacent to the East gate of Memorial Stadium across the street from Howard's Rock. This site was chosen in that Memorial Stadium was dedicated in 1942 to honor Clemson's alumni who "have made the supreme sacrifice in the service of their country."

The construction for the memorial began in April, and it will feature each of the names on the scroll etched in stone, so as never to forget those in the Clemson family who died for the cause of freedom.

Brooks came to Clemson in March, only days before construction began on the Memorial. He began his playing career at Appalachian State, but was injured as a freshman, opening the inevitable door that took him to the Army.

"It's been a long time for me now," Brooks quipped when asked about his military history. "I went in December of 1969 as an 18-year-old. That was in the days of the Vietnam War, so I was going to get drafted. My father was a career guy in the service, so I ended up volunteering for the draft after getting injured playing freshman football. I served three years and got out in December of 1972."

While many of his teammates prepared for their upcoming season, Brooks joined the Army and received his orders. Rather than representing the Gold & Black, he was backing the Red, White, & Blue.

"I actually got my orders to go to Vietnam and I went to Okinawa to go through jungle survival school, and they pulled all special forces out of Vietnam," recounted Brooks. "That was the fifth special forces group and they sent everyone back, so I spent 19 months in Okinawa and got out from there, and my ETS (expiration, term of service) was from Okinawa in December of 1972."

From there, Brooks transferred to Western Carolina, where he played football in 1973. He earned his undergraduate degree in 1976 from Western Carolina, where he was also a student assistant coach. From there, he coached high school football in Kings Mountain, NC until 1982.

In 1983, he joined Florida's staff as a graduate assistant, where he earned his master's degree and a full-time gig as the defensive line coach until North Carolina called for the same position in 1987. He remained in Chapel Hill until Phillip Fulmer brought him on at Tennessee, where he served as defensive line coach for 15 seasons until Fulmer's resignation following the 2008 season.

Brooks' career took an accelerated path from his time at Florida. In fact, in his previous 25 years of... coaching at the FBS level, he has put together 20 winning seasons and 16 bowl game appearances, including the 1998 National Championship.

Brooks credits much of his success to his time in the Army. "Today, no one could give me a million dollars for my three years of experience in the military, from learning esprit de corps to learning chain of command...I don't think you could buy that. I don't think it would be bad for every young man to experience that discipline and camaraderie."

Brooks is able to carefully draw very specific comparisons between football and the military, and he seems to be one of the few qualified to offer such educated insight into those similarities. One of the important lessons has helped him most recently in joining Clemson's staff.

"Coach Swinney is a young guy, but he has earned the position he's in," said Brooks. "When you go in the service, you see guys like my father who might have been in 25 years, but he might have a second lieutenant that's 25 years-old. You go about learning to respect the position. There are so many correlations between football and the military."

The concept of chain of command is one of the many military ideals that Brooks tries to impress upon the student-athletes. However, it is mindful to lead by example and understands that this ideal is one of the most important ones, because it translates from the battlefield to the football field.

"I tell my players that I'm not any better than they are because I'm a coach, and they're no better than I am because they're an All-American. But when we are on the field, we won't have time to discuss this. If they want to talk about something, we can come inside.

"The same thing for me to Coach Swinney. I want to do my job exactly like Coach (Kevin) Steele and Coach Swinney want it, but let me go to the field and work. If you're not happy with it, let's get it like we want it. You find out the day you go into the service that this guy is in charge, and you do what he tells you to do. There is an exchange in coaching, but it comes back to how your superiors want it done."

Student-athletes can garner a unique perspective of not only Xs and Os from Brooks. But in four years with Brooks, that student-athlete will also learn how to carry himself as a young adult and how to be disciplined enough to make favorable decisions on and off the field.

The key quality that Brooks carries most from the military to the football field is the idea of dependability. In the Army, each member of the company is responsible for his or her own role, and their lives depend on one another in the field of battle.

This presents a perfect analogy for Brooks. "Whatever football play is called, one guy can mess up any play...that guy jumps offside or that guy drops the snap. Everyone has a part, and in service, one guy's got the radio, one guy's got the lookout, and it's all so relative. That's one of the biggest things with young people. I want you to learn what you're supposed to do, but you also need to know what the guy beside you is doing and what the linebacker behind you is doing, because it all works together. You need him and he needs you. You really learn that in the military."

In the dictionary, esprit de corps is a military expression meaning, "the common spirit existing in the members of a group and inspiring enthusiasm, devotion, and strong regard for the honor of the group."

Brooks has experienced this military ideal in full force at Clemson, both in the military heritage and within his role as a football coach. He explains that esprit de corps and the leadership's ability to control this message is a determining factor in athletic success.

"Esprit de corps, as far as leadership and a unity of guys working together toward a theme, defines a team in athletics," said Brooks. "To me, Coach Swinney is the commanding officer of our unit, and he's trying to get everyone here moving in the same direction from you, me, our prospects, guys already here, or the equipment room. He's trying to move everyone in the same direction."

In only a short time, one of the impressions that Swinney has left certainly resonates with this military concept. And in doing so, whether intentional or not, he employs many of the military principles as a means of discipline, dependence, and other qualities.

Brooks has a fresh view on how the military can affect a person's life. Often, people only associate military with war. But as Brooks describes, war is a small part of the military's big picture.

"It's not all about war, but it is encouraging ideals to young people," explained Brooks. "There is more to the military than war. There's discipline, camaraderie, and a lot of things to take away."

Brooks admittedly did not know much about Clemson's heritage when he moved to Tigertown earlier this year. However, it would be difficult to envision a man more suited for the type of place that Clemson strives to be. Brooks' experiences in the military have not only been enlightening for his career, but also for the young men with whom he works with on a daily basis.

Football and the military are both tremendous symbols of the type of character, ideals, and principles upon which this country and school were founded. The parallels of the two could be analyzed for pages on end.

It is these similarities that lead to so much of the passion and intensity for the football team by its fanbase. Clemson is unique in that it can be proud of not only the heritage it shares in the development of the game of football. It can be more proud that it has played a more integral part in the freedoms that Americans now enjoy.

The next time Dan Brooks steps onto the field, it is important to recognize him as a brilliant football coach, outstanding role model, and military man. It is equally as crucial to express that even though he has only lived in Clemson for a few months, he is exactly the type of man upon which Clemson University and its football program were built.

Clemson's seniors have been here before. In 2007 when the Tigers faced #18 Boston College on Senior Day, the current seniors were sophomores. The Tigers suffered a bitter defeat that day to Boston College by a score of 20-17, and it was the Eagles who moved on to the ACC Championship game.

Today, Clemson is in the same situation on Senior Day. Win and Clemson heads to Tampa for a shot at the ACC title.

We are sure the Tiger seniors remember the feeling of disappointment two years ago. We are also sure that feeling will motivate them even more as they prepare for this afternoon's game that will be televised by ABC.

But somehow today feels different from 2007. First of all, it should be noted that Clemson's opponent in that game in 2007 also could win the division with a victory, so the Eagles were in a desperate state as well. That is not the case today, as Georgia is a Coastal Division team and has been eliminated from that division race. Nevertheless, we know veteran Head Coach Al Groh will have his team ready.

Second, Clemson is hitting on all cylinders entering this game. True, the 2007 team had won four in a row going into the Boston College contest, but this Tiger team has been outstanding in all phases of the game since mid-October. During its five-game winning streak, Clemson has scored at least 38 points in every game, a first in school history. Only Texas Christian, who is ranked #4 entering today's action, has also done that entering today.

The Tigers have shown balance on offense, averaging 205 rushing yards and 220 passing yards per game during the streak. Clemson is much more aggressive on defense as well and leads the nation in interceptions with 20, while it is also in the top 25 in the nation in sacks.

Third, the Tigers' current five-game winning streak includes a landmark victory at #8 Miami (FL), a win that tied for the highest ranked team Clemson has defeated on the road in history. It was captured in overtime and gave the Tigers confidence they could win a close game against a quality opponent. Clemson's four-game winning streak entering the Boston College game during the 2007 season did not include a victory over a ranked team, and all the wins were by comfortable margins.

Finally, and most importantly, there is a change in attitude among the players, coaches, and everyone affiliated with the program on a day-to-day basis. Head Coach Dabo Swinney proclaimed the theme "All In" from day-one when he was named interim head coach of the program on October 13, 2008, and he reaffirmed the feeling when he was named permanent head coach on December 1, 2008.

The rallying cry was tested after a 2-3 start this year. Despite urging from fans on the radio and internet to make radical changes, he stayed the course because he knew he had a team, led by the senior class, who had great practice habits. He knew he had a group of high character guys who would eventually carry these qualities to the field.

He was correct.

There have been many ups and downs for the 19 seniors who will suit up for their final home game this afternoon. Their freshman season included a six-game winning streak. Fittingly, a win today would tie that streak as the longest for the program since 2000, when the Tigers won their first eight games of the year.

The final victory of that 2006 streak was a 31-7 win over Georgia Tech. That day started with the first appearance of ESPN's College Gameday on Clemson's campus. It ended with C.J. Spiller's and James Davis' appearance on the set at the top of the East endzone. It was one of the most memorable days in the history of Clemson football from an exposure and on-the-field performance standpoint.

But that season ended with four losses in the last five games, including a 38-28 setback at home against South Carolina.

The 2007 season saw the Tigers finish fast by winning five of the last six games, but there was the loss to Boston College that kept the Tigers out of the ACC Championship game and an overtime loss to #21 Auburn in the Chick-Fil-A Bowl.

Last year got off to a rocky start with a loss to Alabama, and a 3-3 record led to Tommy Bowden's resignation as head coach in October. But Swinney rallied the forces and the Tigers had a strong finish with four wins in five games to close the regular season, enabling Clemson to be selected for the Gator Bowl.

And now as seniors, they have overcome a 2-3 start to return to the top 20 of both polls entering today's game. The fact that this group has been through so much and fought back from a disappointing beginning shows the true character of this team, especially its senior leaders.

Clemson has won 13 ACC Championships in its history, still more than any other school even though the Tigers have not won the title since 1991. As Swinney said in his press conference following the win at N.C. State, "Clemson has been wandering the desert for 18 years." A win today would put Clemson at an oasis, with a chance to reach the promise land in two weeks.
