University inducts Curris

MARI LINN LOVE
 news editor

"Our heritage, our mission, our purpose," was stressed during Constantine W. Curris' speech at the ceremony Friday to invest him as the 13th president of Clemson University.

Curris' speech was filled with history and symbology as he spoke about being a first generation American and the dream of Thomas Green Clemson.

"My values have been shaped by a Greek heritage," said Curris, "which extols individual freedom, civil responsibility and democratic ideals, and which honors excellence in the arts, letters, science and gymnastics. I believe the heritage is consonant with the values of Clemson University."

His speech was heard by a crowd of almost 1,000 people who filled the Robert Howell Brooks Center. It further centered around the "common good" of the University.

"As a land-grant university we are committed to promote the common good through our tripartite mission of teaching, research and extension," said Curris. "I believe that the American people, and especially the citizens of South Carolina, have a personal commitment to invest in their youth and in our future."

In his speech, Curris outlined five commitments the University must make in the upcoming years. First, is to give priority to the learning experience of the students. "A renewed emphasis will be placed upon the core curriculum taken by all Clemson students," Curris stressed, "the effective use of technology, high standards of performance and upon the value we add to the Clemson experience."

Secondly, Clemson must reaffirm its position as a land-grant university. Curris added, "We will take seriously the consuming intent of our founder - to improve the economic fortune of his fellow citizens."

Thirdly, Clemson will be a strong national university. Curris noted that Clemson "will focus graduate and research programs where Clemson faculty have brought distinction to the University."

Fourth, Curris wants to "rekindle the convent between Clemson and the people of South Carolina." With the help of the community, Curris feels that the promotion of higher education will be strengthened in the 21st century.

Lastly, Clemson must recognize the value of the community. "Clemson is truly a special place," commented Curris. "We will not lose [the] sense of community. Our goal is to meld the quest for community with the passion for excellence."

Curris closed his speech by saying, "On this beautiful day, in this special place called Clemson 'where the Blue Ridge yawns its greatness,' I formally accept the Presidency of Clemson University."

Though Curris has held the position of president since late May, the investiture marked the confirmation of his role as the University's chief executive officer.

The ceremony was preceded by a procession of faculty, staff and students from Tillman and Sikes Hall. The procession lead through the historic district of campus to the Brooks Center.

Holocaust awareness heightened by lectures

HEATHER KAY
 staff writer

Holocaust Awareness Month has officially begun with a series of exhibits and lectures. Among these was a captivating lecture given by Zev Weiss, chairman of the Holocaust Education Foundation and a survivor of Auschwitz.

In front of an audience of approximately 100 people, Weiss spoke about his family's journey. The journey began in late 1942, from their Jewish community to the ghettos.

He briefly described the unsanitary conditions and the lack of nourishment during the few months he spent in the ghetto.

He and his family were transferred to Auschwitz in June of 1943 where he was separated from his father. This was the last time he would see his father.

He was imprisoned in the Nazi work camp for two years before he was liberated in 1945

"We need to think about the Holocaust. We need to be exposed to it. We need not to ignore these kinds of images so that we can avoid these horrible mistakes in the future."

by the 71st division of the US army. Weiss was the only person in his family (except for two cousins) who survived the horror of the Holocaust.

The most disturbing part of the evening, however, was the abrupt departure of an unidentified man in the audience after Weiss answered a question concerning Americans' knowledge of the events in the Nazi death camps.

The man, apparently an American soldier during World War II, challenged the statement made by Weiss that some Americans were in fact aware of the treatment and killing of Jews in these camps.

Before Weiss could begin to further explain his state-

Weiss commented that he hoped Clemson students would gain from his story, the message that "to prevent evil one must work against it."

He added that if he could only make a small contribution to thinking and humanity, then he would be content.

Reverend Ron Singleton, the United Methodist Campus Minister, credits the idea to begin programs dealing with Holocaust awareness to a group of students. They wanted to borrow his church's van to see Schindler's List when it see AWARENESS, page 6A

City wide transit system to ease parking hassles

staff writer

Many commuter students across campus are finding that locating a parking place or getting downtown through the traffic is as much fun as having teeth pulled.

A solution to this problem is in the works. A new transit system is being designed to help students, as well as Clemson residents, travel to campus and around town without having to fight for a parking space and getting stuck in traffic jams. The state Transportation Commission recently awarded approximately $350,000 in State and federal funds to the construction of this new system. It will take the place of the University's current campus shuttle system but is designed to be safer, faster and all together a better system.

The University is a partner in this deal and plans to put in another $300,000 to combine with the awarded grant to help operate the system until June 30. The bus system will consist of nine bus system.

This nine-bus system will connect several parts of town such as Clemson Downs, north and south of Clemson, and the Winn-Dixie shopping. The buses will be large enough to hold 64 people each. In a town with 18,000 students and residents, this public transit system will cut down on traffic and lack of parking spaces if the community takes advantage of it.

The transit system is designed to help out not only the University students, but also the rest of the community. "It's one system to serve the needs of the entire community- the elderly, the handicapped, parents with infants, certainly students, residents and merchants," said Al Babinicz, manager of the system.

One of the best parts of this new system is that it will be free to all riders and the city will not have to foot the bill of implementing this bus system. Work for this system is already in progress, and it is expected to be in operation sometime in January.

The major goals of the new transit system are to give a source of reliable transportation for the whole community of Clemson and to cut back on heavy traffic and the high demand for more parking.

With the current University's transit system carrying close to 50,000 students each month, the new transit system will be able to carry more students to more places without them having to worry about getting stuck in traffic or getting a place to park. This transit system will help the environment by cutting down on the amount of air pollution, and will help people have a little extra money in their pockets from not having to buy gasoline.

Clemson University is starting to modernize its views by first changing the CU logo. The current logo has been around for almost twenty years. Many Clemson affiliates feel that the current logo does not express the true image of the University.

Clemson to change logo

staff writer

Coming this fall, Clemson may be seeing a change to its logo. The design which is currently being used has been around for almost 20 years. Many view the graphics as being outdated and not expressive of what Clemson truly represents.

An Image Steering Committee, composed of faculty, staff, alumni, a board member, and students were held responsible for the creation of sample designs. The options chosen by the committee were later viewed by the University body and feedback was obtained on the choices.

"These comments were the basis for the design decisions," said Debbiee Dunning, manager of editorial services. "What we worked to create was a new image that represented a traditional, yet progressive university on the leading edge of education, research, and public service."

The final elements of the new logo consist of the Clemson word mark, the official seal, and a University tiger acts as a representation of the tiger statue in front of Littlejohn Coliseum. According to the Manager of Graphic Services, Eve Gibson, the newer version will not be changed completely, but only updated so it could be easier to print. "The new design, if approved by the board, will continue to depict the tradition of the University," stated Gibson. "The new logo will simply be an update of what's presently here."

These are the three designs that the board will choose from in selecting the new Clemson logo.

CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

The consideration for a new logo design during this time proves to be beneficial due to the restructuring of the colleges from nine to four. Because of this change, departments will be required to obtain new materials so a new logo will not cause extra unnecessary work. By updating the logo, no additional cost were needed on the behalf of Clemson. All sample image designs were created by the department of publishing and marketing. No outside help was hired to help with the project.

As of right now, the current logo is still being used and individuals are encouraged to continue using them. "We're not asking anyone to throw away existing materials simply because it has the old logo on it," said Dunning. "But as reprints and revisions are needed, we do ask that the new image be incorporated once it's approved."

The new designs will be presented for board approval this fall. Gibson believes if the designs are accepted, they will give a fresh look to the University's appearance. "The old logo type is old-fashioned and there is a big difference between old-fashioned and traditional," she said.

Library open area where students can eat and drink

Beginning this fall, the library will set aside an area in the fifth floor lounge of the R.M. Cooper Library where students can eat and drink. The fifth floor also houses many computer terminals, which remains a "food-free zone." However, this area will not permit smoking.

Make-up scholarships offered to students

All eligible students will be automatically considered for scholarships during the fall make-up period. There is no scholarship application required; however the awarding of need-based scholarships requires the receipt of a processed Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). This form should be submitted directly to its processor at least four weeks prior to the October 15, 1995, deadline to allow ample processing time. FAFSA forms are available in the Financial Aid Office located in G01 Sikes Hall. Students have a current FAFSA on file at Clemson University are not required to resubmit for the 1995-96 Make-Up Period.

Three construction science professors receive national awards

Three professors in the department of construction science and management have received national recognition. Gregg Corley, an assistant professor, was awarded the Associated Schools of Construction Outstanding Educator Award at the group's annual conference in Tempe, Ariz.

Christine Piper, a visiting assistant professor, was awarded the American Institute of Construction's (AIC) National Award at the national convention in Long Beach, Calif. The award honors "AIC's young members who have distinguished themselves by conduct in their work life, their dedication to their profession and their effort on behalf of the AIC."

Charles Matthewson, head of the department of construction science and management, was elected to the College of Fellows of the American Institute of Construction, at the national convention at Long Beach. He is also a fellow of the Chartered Institute of Building, the European counterpart of the AIC.

Man steals, eats cremated remains

CHICO, Calif. (AP) - A man suspected of stealing and eating the cremated remains of four people in hopes of attaining "everlasting life" has been arrested, police said.

Rodney Hines, 36, told police he snorted some of the ashes and sprinkled others on his food because he wanted to live forever.

A man who knows Hines contacted police last Friday to report that the suspect had been bragging about having ashes, said Lt. Tony Aeilts.

"My concern was for the families," Aeilts said. "These ashes were interred recently. They have not been there for 50 years or something."

Hines, who was arrested Wednesday, faces a felony charge of unlawful mutilation of human remains. The penal codes doesn't have a section focusing on the penalties of ingesting human remains, Aeilts said.

Hines was scheduled to be arraigned Friday afternoon.

Man finds baby rattlesnake with two heads

LaGRANGE, Ala. (AP) - Jimmy Bailey was startled enough when he found a rattlesnake under an old car. But he was thoroughly bewildered when he discovered the snake had given birth to a two-headed baby.

Bailey and another man shot the adult rattlesnake and were killing the babies when he noticed the oddity.

"I went to kill the last one when I saw it had two heads," Bailey said. "I had never heard of one or seen anything like that, so I caught it and put it in a bucket and brought it home."

Bailey plans to donate the snake to a zoo.

"Two-headed snakes are extremely uncommon," said Bob Mount, a retired professor of zoology at Auburn University and an expert on Alabama snakes. "There have been reports of two-headed ratsnakes and two-headed greensnakes, but I am not aware of any reports of a two-headed rattlesnake."

He said snakes with two heads usually die soon after they are born.

Bailey said the two-headed rattlesnake he found has grown considerably during the past month and is now about 12 inches long.

Helicopter shot with bow and arrow

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) - If you want to bring down a helicopter with a bow and arrow, aim for the rear rotor.

That's how Cowlitz County sheriff's deputies say a man downed a Weyerhaeuser Co. chopper Thursday.

"If you want to bring a chopper down, that's the area to shoot," said Weyerhaeuser security manager Dick Evans. "They don't fly without them."

Pilot Patrick Stack said he was maneuvering the Bell 206 Long Ranger about 75 feet over the trees when he saw a man track the copter with his hunting bow and let fly.

"It was a deliberate shot," said Weyerhaeuser forester Joe Koontz, who was on board. "He was shooting at the aircraft."

The aluminum arrow hit a rear stabilizing rotor, disabling it, and pierced the helicopter's metal skin.

"I felt a sharp impact through the flight controls," Stack said. "It could have had a disastrous result."

4-Year-old becomes public enemy No. 1

NEW YORK (AP) - Her grandson was Public Enemy No. 1 until Nancy Stein took on the city.

She battled the Sanitation Department, the mayor's office, the Environmental Control Board, an administrative judge. On Wednesday, the city parks commissioner said Stein had won: Her 4-year-old grandson did nothing wrong when he answered nature's call behind a Central Park bush.

"I do feel vindicated that I was heard," said Stein, an Upper West Sider who survived four months of bureaucratic hassling. "It's been incredible."

On May 23, she was handed a $50 ticket after little William Schlesinger did his thing in the brush near a Central Park playground.

"In this case, there were certainly extenuating circumstances," said Parks Commissioner Henry Stern. He said he would recommend that the ticket be dismissed.

Two Parks Department enforcement agents were on the scene before Stein had buttoned her grandson's pants. The agents demanded identification - thankfully, only from the grandmother - and one cited her for violation of NYC Administrative Code 16-118.6 for William's deposit of a "noxious liquid."

Stein paid the fine, but appealed. An administrative judge was sympathetic at a June 14 hearing, but upheld the fine (and cost Stein a day's work as an art dealer).

Deputies' man kills self after taking wife's body to Texas

RODESSA, La. (AP) - A man fatally shot his wife, put her in a car and then drove to Texas, where he killed himself, authorities said.

Caddo Parish sheriff's dispatchers received a call about 7 p.m. Monday from a Rodessa man, who said his son, Bobby Wayne Jones, 33, had come to his house, saying he had shot his wife, Sheila.

Just over an hour later, the car was found parked just off Texas Highway 77 on a county road. The bodies of the couple were found inside, along with a handgun, investigators said.

Deputies said they learned later that the couple apparently had an argument while in the drive-through lane of a restaurant. Gunshots were heard at the time, deputies said.

Prevention taken too far

President Clinton has recently launched a major campaign in preventing teens from purchasing tobacco products. While sales of these tobacco products to minors are already illegal, Clinton's reforms focus primarily on legal sales.

First of all, is this really the most pressing issue we are facing with our youth today? Teen smoking, while a widespread problem, pales in comparison to inner-city crime and drugs such as crack cocaine, which are bigger concerns at the present time.

Clinton's proposed legislation would prohibit any brand name advertising at sporting events. This means that there would be no Virginia Slims Classic in tennis or a Winston Select auto race. Granted, I'm neither a tennis fan nor a race fan, but I hope that I'm informed enough to assume that kids aren't sitting around in front of a television, watching a stock car race, and suddenly realizing that they should light up a Marlboro because they noticed a sign with the Marlboro logo on it.

Another regulation would forbid companies from advertising tobacco products in print media (these advertisements have already been forbidden in broadcast media). Being on the staff of a newspaper, I realize just how much revenue would be lost to newspapers and magazines which would have come from tobacco companies. These companies pay a lot of money to endorse their particular products, just as any other company does to promote the sales of its product.

Additional regulations of Clinton's legislation would forbid the sales of merchandise which is unrelated to tobacco use, such as T-shirts and caps (greatly affecting the auto-racing merchandise industry). Here again is more revenue and jobs being lost.

Besides, we're going to outlaw advertisements of tobacco products when two "cool" frogs on television are croaking "Budweiser" out to America's teens syllable by syllable?

At this press conference, I want to propose the destruction of the entire tobacco industry! Smoking must be stopped! It's dangerous, filthy....

Uh, Mr. President, 40% of your campaign funds are donated by Phillip Morris....

Um.... actually, smoking isn't that bad....

Military plaza a wasted effort

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the article entitled "Plaza To Honor Heritage" in the Sept. 8, 1995 issue of The Tiger. The classes of 1950, 1952 and 1953 have joined efforts to raise over $485,000 to create a military plaza so that students will not "forget what Clemson was founded on."

Why stop there? Maybe the class of 1963 can rally some funds, rip down a few more trees and create a splendid bronze replica of Johnstone A just beside the fine new plaza. The class of 1981 could surely follow suit and erect a mini-Death Valley smack-dab in the middle of Bowman Field, complete with scaled-down statues of every Clemson player on the national championship team. I bet that even IPTAY would be willing to contribute a little of its precious money to such an honorable cause.

In the meantime, we will do our best as students to help maintain the "high standards of academics of Clemson University" as we venture forth each day into a world of crowded classes, ill-equipped laboratories and professors who cannot wrangle enough money from this institution to make copies to supplement their lessons.

There is no need to worry about such nuisances, though. In less than a year we will all be able to marvel at a life-size statue of a soldier standing at attention in a half-million dollar hotbed of Clemson history while we reflect on the days when oaks stood at the same location with just as much pride.

Spelling criticized

To the editor:

Please request that the person doing your headlines get re-acquainted with Webster's Dictionary. This week "ATMs envoke worry." There is no such word in my dictionary as "envoke." Last week, I believe, it was "Realitor." Once again, there is no such word. Realtor is correct.

You put forth a good product. However, coming from an institution of higher learning, it does seem appropriate that the spelling be correct. Spell check can't do it all. You have to have some knowledge of whether the word spell check stops on is correct or not! Thanks for listening.

Military mail call

To the editor:

In 1965 a group of concerned, caring and patriotic Americans joined to form "Vietnam Mail Call" in support of America's fighting forces in and near Vietnam.

Today, in 1995, Americans still care and remember through "Mail for Our Military." Morale-boosting cards and letters from every part of the United States are intermingled, then made up into packages that are sent via priority mail—neither processing nor mailing is at taxpayer expense—to more than 1,000 locations across the United States and around the world. We have tons of "thank you" letters from chaplains, unit commanders and NCOs, ships, hospitals and morale agencies such as local Armed Services, YMCAs and USOs.

"Mail for Our Military" is a terrific project for students and campus groups. To learn how to take part in this unique, exciting program, send your name and address along with a first-class stamp for return postage (please—not a self-addressed, stamped envelope—just the stamp) to: MAIL FOR OUR MILITARY, P.O. Report: Citadel, state could save $17 million

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - The Citadel could save taxpayers $17 million a year and keep its corps of cadets all-male if it would become a private military college, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Going private, however, would force the public school to dramatically raise tuition, cut programs and tap its own endowment, The Post and Courier of Charleston reported, citing its own analysis from figures provided by The Citadel.

Citadel officials say going private would come at too great a cost to consider.

Calvin Lyons, vice president for finance and business affairs, said he discussed the idea of going private with the college's Board of Visitors in 1994. The board decided the option was not viable.

"As far as we're concerned, the issue has fairly been put to bed," said James E. Jones Jr., chairman of The Citadel board.

According to the school's own figures, The Citadel would need an extra $17 million a year if it went private. That would match the amount taxpayers now kick in to educate Citadel cadets.

To make up that money, The Post and Courier said The Citadel would have to:

- Raise tuition, room and board and other fees to about $17,000 per year, up from between $8,000 and $15,000. The current level depends on where a student is from and what year he is in.

- Cut its instruction budget by 2 percent.

- Cut 5 percent from the administration and operations and maintenance budgets.

- Get a $4.5 million-per-year contribution from the college's two college's two endowment funds, the Citadel Development Foundation and the Citadel Trust.

The Citadel has not studied how such a major tuition increase would affect enrollment, but officials believe a $17,000 bill would hurt.

"We would lose students in the lower-income strata, forcing the college to become an elitist institution," said Lyons, who reviewed The Post and Courier's analysis.

Lyons did acknowledge that if the school went private, South Carolina students would be eligible for tuition help under the state's program for private college students.

This reminded him of how powerful the Holocaust was when he was exposed to the stories in college.

Last year, only a trip to the Holocaust museum in Washington, D.C., was initially planned for the month of September, but Rev. Singleton, several professors and the Hillel group on campus decided that more programs needed to be provided.

"We need to think about the Holocaust," said Weiss.

"We need to be exposed to it.

"We need not to ignore these kinds of images so that we can avoid these horrible mistakes in the future."

Don McKale, professor of Holocaust and Nazi Germany studies, said "if we can reach a few students and make them aware of why the Holocaust happened and get them to think about the issues of prejudice and hate, especially racial and religious prejudice, where it all can lead and the evil it can produce, the program will be successful."

CU may help Converse offer curriculum like Citadel

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - Although the prospect of starting an engineering program at Converse College has been in the works for a few months, the plan indirectly could help The Citadel remain all male.

Nancy Mellette, the latest woman trying to gain access to The Citadel's corps of cadets, said the state's women's leadership program at Converse would not equal a Citadel education because Converse does not have the electrical engineering program she wants.

However, Converse officials said Friday they contacted Clemson University in June about possibly offering engineering degrees. The talks are in the early stages, but the deal could help the state argue that Converse's curriculum is comparable to The Citadel.

The state established the South Carolina Institute of Leadership for Women at Converse this year as an alternative to allowing women into The Citadel, the state military school in Charleston.

Steve Melsheimer, associate dean for undergraduate studies in Clemson's engineering and science college, said Converse's overture "is compatible with our interests...We have an objective of increasing the number of women in our program," Melsheimer said.

Clemson would offer two plans: a five-year program that would yield two degrees - one from Converse, probably math or physics, and one from Clemson in engineering - and a four-year program that would offer only the engineering degree.

Tigers lose fight against FSU

sports editor

Warrick Dunn had a career day while leading the top-ranked Florida State Seminoles to a 45-26 victory over the Clemson Tigers Saturday in Death Valley.

The Clemson offense found some success against the Seminole defense, but the Tigers couldn't stop the high-powered Florida State offense, particularly the draw plays to tailback Warrick Dunn.

Dunn had a career high 180 yards and two touchdowns on only 12 carries.

"He may have been the difference in the game," said Seminole head coach Bobby Bowden. "If there was one person that was the difference, it was him."

The Tiger offense rolled up 428 yards of total offense, including 321 yards rushing. Raymond Priester scored the first Clemson touchdown against Florida State in three seasons when he rambled in from 21 yards out early in the second quarter to make it a 14-7 game.

The last Clemson touchdown against the Seminoles came on a 35 yard pass from Richard Moncrief to Terry

The Tiger defense kept Danny Kanell relatively quiet all day. He completed under fifty percent of his passes but the FSU running backs picked up the slack.

Optimism high despite loss to Florida State

MIKE McCOMBS
sports editor

Clemson's loss to top-ranked Florida State Saturday in Death Valley was not all bad news.

The Tigers showed they could execute an effective offensive game plan against a tough defense and that they were much improved from last season.

More importantly, the Tiger fans showed that they still supported their team, even after a down year. Over 82,000 showed up for the game and very few left early, despite the eminent defeat at the hands of the Seminoles.

Most Tiger fans were proud of their team's performance.

Sean Hanzelik, a Clemson graduate, drove four and a half hours from Chattanooga, Tenn., to see the game. He is optimistic about where the Clemson program is headed.

"The game was a lot closer than the score indicated," said Hanzelik. "Our team showed tremendous promise, especially on the offensive side of the ball. I think the Tigers will be a

The Carolina Panthers stated at the beginning of the season that they did not want to be referred to as an expansion team, but rather the first-year Carolina Panthers.

But Sunday they looked like an expansion team, dropping their second-ever NFL game 31-9 at the hands of the Buffalo Bills.

Carolina led 9-0 at halftime, but Buffalo, scored 28 points in a 10-minute span during the third quarter to go in front for good, in spite of the fact that quarterback Jim Kelly completed just four passes in the game.

"I had a feeling that I had more interceptions than completions," Kelly said. "I started pressing and trying to make plays that weren't there. The hurdle we crossed was the offense in the second half...It was very frustrating. I couldn't get anybody open. We didn't run well; didn't pass well."

The scoring for Buffalo started when Kelly hit Russell Copeland on a crossing pattern about 15 yards downfield.

Copeland broke two tackles and was off to the races for a 77-yard touchdown. Thurman Thomas lead two more touchdown scoring drives of 41 and 59 yards, scoring from four yards out on one and setting up another touchdown with a 59-yard screen pass.

Two plays later, Eric Holmes punched it in from three yards out.

The final blow to the Panthers was a 34-yard interception return by Buffalo cornerback Curt Schulz for a touchdown. Steve Christie closed the scoring for Buffalo with a 35-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Carolina had plenty of chances in the first half. Brett Maxie intercepted Kelly and returned it to the Buffalo 25, but three plays later the drive stalled and John Kasay converted a 34-yard field goal.

Later in the second quarter, a 37-yard drive stalled and again Kasay nailed a field goal, this time from 52 yards.

Early in the third quarter, Sam Mills picked off a Kelly pass and ran it back to the Buffalo 12, but during the next three plays, the Panthers lost four yards. Kasay booted his third field goal of the game, this one a 33-yard field goal.

Last week, Carolina quarterback Frank Reich threw for a career high 329 yards passing. On Sunday all he could muster was 6 of 21 for 44 yards and one interception.

With the absence of the Panther passing attack, Carolina turned to its running game. But the Buffalo defense, lead by all-pro Bruce Smith and all-pro Cornelius Bennett were up to the challenge, dominating the line of scrimmage and stopping the Panthers on every key situation. Buffalo coach Marv Levy was satisfied.

Tiger soccer takes on UNC

The Clemson men's soccer team squeaked by the third-ranked Tar Heels Sunday in Chapel Hill, N.C. thanks to a direct kick goal by Imad Baba with 8:50 remaining in the second overtime period.

The Tigers went ahead 1-0 when Wolde Harris buried a pass from Miles Joseph at the 26:28 mark in the first half.

UNC tied the score at one at the 57:40 point on a penalty kick by Temoc Suarez.

Harris' goal was his fourth of the season and the 59th of his career.

He is now 16 goals away from breaking the all-time Clemson mark for goals scored. The record is currently held by Nnamdi Nwokocho, who scored 74 goals in his career from 1979-82.

Joseph's assist was the 36th of his career. He is fifth on the all-time Clemson assist list.

The Tigers outshot the Tar Heels 13-10 in the match and held a 7-4 edge in corner kicks.

This game, the first ACC matchup for both teams, improves Clemson's record to 2-1 overall, while UNC's record drops to 3-1.

The Tiger's next game will be held at Riggs Field against Charleston Southern on Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The Tigers' win against third-ranked North Carolina improves their record to 2-1 overall and 1-0 in the ACC.

Lady Tigers lose to No. 1 ranked North Carolina

JAY MARCOUX
interim asst. sports editor

The #10-ranked Lady Tigers fell 1-0 to the #1-ranked North Carolina Friday night in front of a record crowd of 1,858 fans at Riggs Field.

Clemson had a scoring opportunity in the closing seconds of the game.

Lady Tiger Carmie Landeen tried a chip shot from 15 yards away, but the ball was deflected off North Carolina goalie Siri Mullinax. Lady Tiger Diana Akin took another shot that hit the right goal post with two seconds left.

North Carolina scored at the 38:17 mark in the first half. Lady Tarheel Vanessa Rubio took the ball to the left corner of the penalty box, and Debbie Keller drove the ball to the left post and scored. It was her third score of the season.

The Lady Tarheel offense seemed to pressure Clemson throughout the game. North Carolina had 23 shots on goal compared to Clemson's four shots.

The Lady Tarheels also had 15 corner kicks while the Lady Tigers had just two.

Clemson had the edge defensively. Lady Tiger goalkeeper Meredith McCullen recorded eleven saves compared to North Carolina's Mullinax, who had just one save.

Clemson had only eleven fouls in the contest compared with North Carolina's 20.

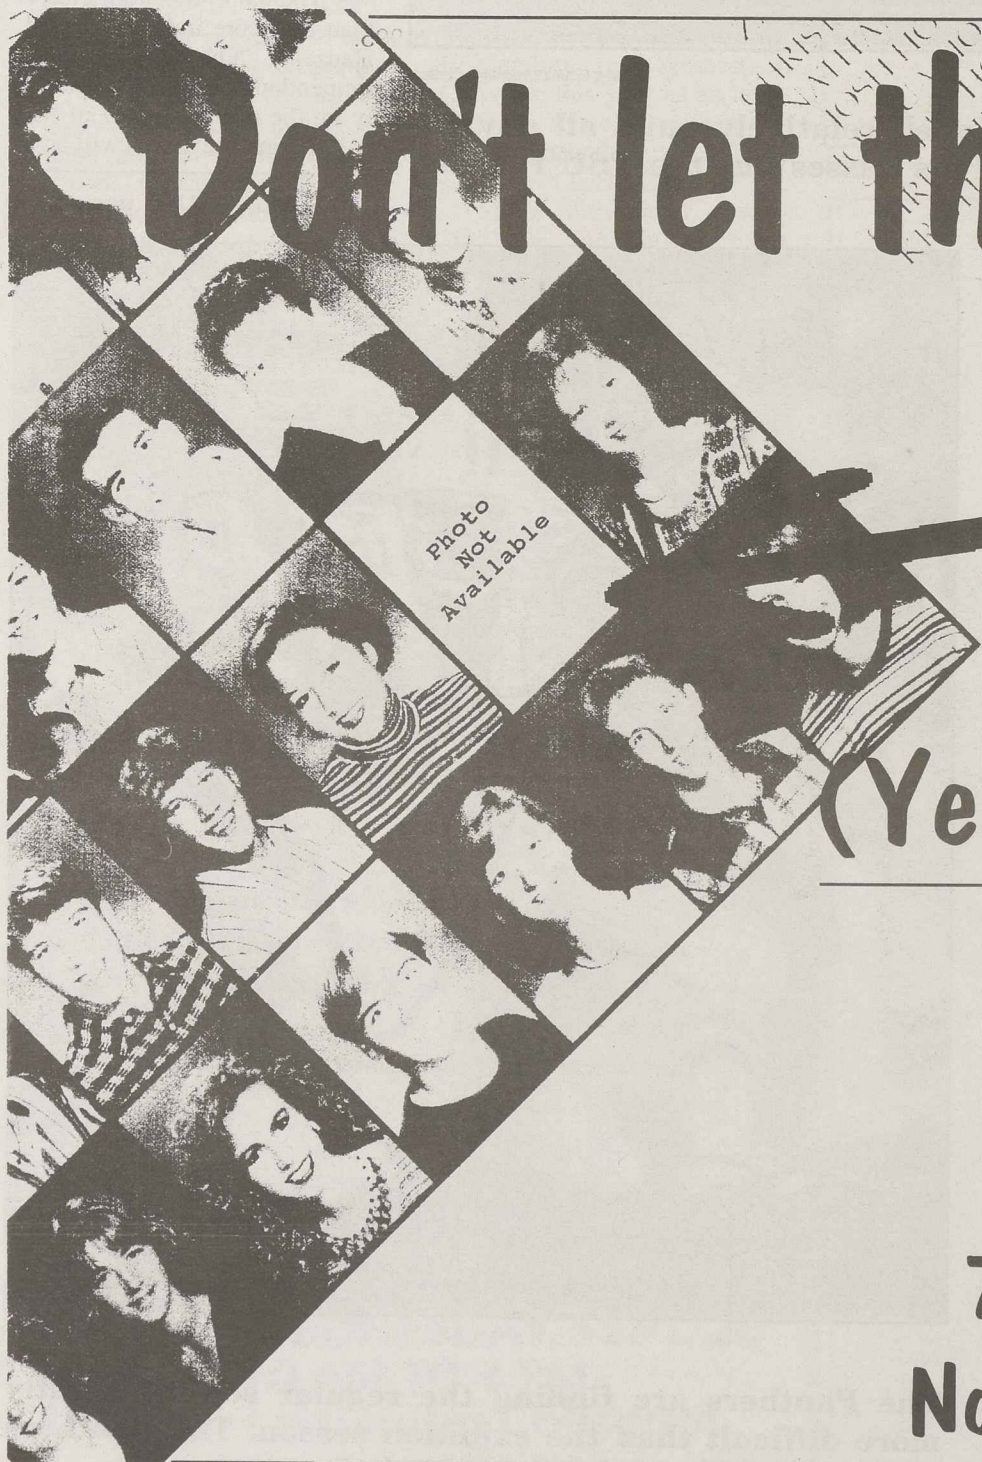

The entire game featured Clemson's tenacious defense against a relentless North Carolina offensive attack that continuously penetrated Clemson territory and allowed many scoring opportunities for the Lady Tarheels.

The Tarheels are ranked #1 in both the ISAA and Soccer America polls and have won the national title for 13 out of the last 14 seasons, including nine consecutive championships entering the 1995 season.

The University of North Carolina has had a varsity women's soccer program for only 17 seasons. Clemson was also nationally ranked at #10 entering last Friday night's game in only the second season of women's soccer at the varsity level at Clemson.

The Lady Tigers see action once again tonight at Riggs Field against North Carolina-Charlotte. The game time is 7 p.m.

The Tigers rolled over Eastern Kentucky but lost to Alabama on Saturday night at the Big Orange Bash. Two of the Tigers made the all-tournament team.

Freshman-of-the-Week awarded to Tiger linebacker

MIKE MCCOMBS
sports editor

Freshman Tiger linebacker Anthony Simmons was named ACC Freshman-of-the-Week for his performance against the top-ranked Florida State Seminoles Saturday in Death Valley.

Simmons, the first true freshman to start at linebacker for the Tigers in the opener since John Johnson, now of the New Orleans Saints, made his second start against the Seminoles.

Simmons tied a 20-year-old Clemson single game mark for tackles by a first year player. His 14 tackles, seven first hits and seven assists, tied the record set by Randy Scott in 1975. Scott's performance was also against Florida State.

Simmons, a Spartanburg native, now leads the team with 24 tackles.

The Clemson volleyball team handled Eastern Kentucky with style at the Big Orange Bash Volleyball Tournament on Saturday night, defeating them soundly in four games with scores of 15-2, 12-15, 15-4 and 15-3.

After defeating Eastern Kentucky, the Tigers moved on to face Alabama in the final match of the tournament.

The Tigers lost the match in three games with scores of 11-15, 6-15, and 9-15, bringing their overall season record to 4-4.

After the tournament, the Big Orange Bash All-Tournament team was named.

Two Tigers, Julie Rodriguez, who had 40 kills and 21 digs in the tournament, and Ashley Self, who had 26 kills and 22 digs, made it onto the final ballot.

The others named were Nina Foster of Alabama and Heather Hoy and Yoko Beltran of the University of Texas at Arlington.

Hillary Kyle of Alabama was named the tournament MVP.

The Clemson volleyball team plays host to Furman tonight at 7:00 and hosts Memphis this Thursday night, also at 7:00.

Buffalo Bills defeat Panthers

"I don't ever want a victory to be a relief," Levy said. I'm thrilled we won the game, whether it was 31-9 or 10-9."

On offense Buffalo was lead by Thurman Thomas who gained 91 yards on 22 carries and a touchdown, and Russell Copeland who had 112 yards receiving and a touchdown on only two receptions.

"What you saw was a tale of two halves," Carolina coach Dom Capers said. "We knew we run, not to make turnovers and rely on our kicking game.

What happened in the third quarter happens easily in this league. We didn't respond well after the touchdown."

"All we had to do was get some first downs, but we weren't able to do that," Reich said. "When we grab the lead, we've got to get that killer instinct."

The Carolina Panthers face the St. Louis Rams this Sunday in Death Valley at 1 p.m. for their first regular season home game of their inaugural season.

top ten power very soon and Florida State's ACC streak will come to an end next year."

Clemson student Aaron Mulvey likes what he sees in this year's Clemson team.

"I like the offense," said Mulvey. "They've made some big improvements. Tommy West has done a great job with this team. We're going in the right direction."

Coach West was impressed with the Tiger crowd as well.

"I think you saw a Clemson crowd, the way I can remember them. They stayed, they cheered. I think they were proud of the effort of their football team."

Seminoles improve ACC record to 26-0

Smith at the 11:11 mark of the fourth quarter of the 1992 game.

Priester had a good day, rushing for 111 yards on 22 carries. Lamont Pegues, playing with a bruised knee, toted the ball 18 times for 83 yards.

"We thought we could run the ball coming in," said Clemson head coach Tommy West.

The bright spot on the Tiger offense, however, was fullback Emory Smith. Smith, who garnered ABC Player-of-the-Game honors, had 97 yards on only nine carries, including a 2-yard touchdown.

His biggest run was for 48 yards in the third quarter, which led to a 28-yard Jeff Suave field goal.

"I thought today, Emory looked like a fullback, what a fullback is supposed to look like, not looking like he's trying to be a tailback in a fullback's body," Coach West said of Smith's performance.

Quarterback Nealon Greene, who came into the game leading the nation in passing efficiency, completed only eight of 21 passes for 107 yards with a touchdown and two interceptions.

He did show a flash of the Tiger offense of the future in the third quarter, however.

On a second and one from the Clemson 44, Greene completed a 56-yard pass to Tony Horne for the longest pass play of his career. The play completed a two play 65-yard drive that lasted all of 16 seconds.

Coach West seemed happy with his team's offense which matched the most points scored on the Seminoles, 26, since they joined the conference.

"I thought that early in the game that we had to mix it up offensively to keep them from keying on the running game," said West.

"As the game went along, I really thought that our football team got stronger offensively. That's a great sign for us. That's what we've worked very hard to accomplish."

Coach Bowden also appeared impressed with the Tigers' offensive progress.

"This time a year ago, they couldn't do what they did today," said Bowden. "I really think that they're only getting better."

"Last year when they played us, they were not sure about their quarterback, they were not sure about their offense, but they went back, found out what they ought to do, put the guy in there that could do it, and now they can build on it."

In the end, however, the Florida State offense was just too strong for the young Tiger defense.

The Seminoles amassed 455 yards of total offense led by Dunn's strong performance. Quarterback Danny Kanell completed under 50 percent of his passes, but still threw for 170 yards.

Coach West cited several areas where his team took themselves out of the game.

"It's really simple. We lost the turnover game. That's number one. We lost the kicking game."

"When you lose those two against the top-ranked team in the country, you really don't give yourself a chance," West said. What gave us a chance was that we just fought like crazy."

West also lamented the Seminoles' great field position early in the game.

"We really didn't give ourselves a chance in the first half," said West. "They had drives of 53, 41 and 30 yards and you can't give their offense that short of a field."

Despite the Tigers' improvements over the last two games against the Seminoles, Coach West had mixed emotions about his team's moral victory.

"We didn't come into this game to play hard or to stay close," said West. "We came in to this game to try to win the football game."

"I don't like losing. Nobody in that locker room likes losing, but I just like the overall attitude of this team right now, because I think they approach the game in the right way."

"They go out to work. I like this team. I like their attitude. I like the improvements that we've made."
